SENATE INDORSES WAGNER, ENDING MITCHEL INQUIRY

Adopts Resolution of Confidence at an All-Night Secret Conference.

NO CENSURE OF MITCHEL

Mayor Is Cross-Examined on the Rockaway Fortification Measures.

HE MEANT NO ATTACK

Explains That His Reference to the "Gentleman from Prussia" Was in the Nature of a Retort to Wagner.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Thursday, April 5.—The contempt proceedings against John Purroy Mitchel, Mayor of New York City, before the Senate came to a close at 2 o'clock this morning when resolutions expressing confidence in Senator Robert F. Wagner were brought in.

The resolutions were adopted at an executive session which had been in progress since 9 o'clock last night.

An attempt was made to pass a resolution mildly censuring Mayor Mitchel, but this failed.

When the Senate met in the evening it was after a day during which Mayor Mitchel had been subjected to an exceptionally severe cross-examination at the hands of Samuel Untermyer, chief counsel for Senator Wagner. The Mayor occupied the witness chair practically the entire day. The sole respite was when Colonel Frederick V. Abbot of the Corps of Engineers of the United States Army was summoned as a witness for Mayor Mitchel in order to afford him an opportunity to return to duty immediately in response to an urgent call from the War Department.

The Senate went into session at 9 o'clock in the evening. Senator Charles D. Newton of Geneseo, Chairman of the Board of Managers appointed to supervise the contempt proceedings, at once moved that an executive session be ordered and that the Senate, in order to save the time that would be necessary to clear the Senate chamber and galleries, which were packed to suffocation, withdraw into the Senate Finance Committee room.

Untermyer Cross-Examines Mitchel.

Samuel Untermyer, chief counsel for Senator Wagner, took up the cross-examination of Mayor Mitchel the moment the Senate was called to order yesterday morning. The early part of the testimony dealt with the circumstances under which the interview attacking Senator Wagner had been given to the newspapers by the Mayor.

Mr. Untermyer then took up the record of Senate proceedings on March 22—the day of the interview—and read the speeches by Senator Brown and Senator Wagner indicating that after conferences of the Republican and Democratic members of the Senate, an agreement had been reached that it would be better to obtain the land needed for the Rockaway Point fortifications through condemnation proceedings than through exercise of the option obtained by the Federal Government from the Rockaway Pacific Corporation, contingent on a conveyance of some land by the city to the company. Senator Brown, in the statement which was read, set forth that General W. W. Wotherspoon, State Superintendent of Public Works and a member of the Military Condemnation Commission, had assured the Republican Senators that the incidental delay would not interfere with the development of the Rockaway defenses, and that it would not be difficult to avoid any substantial consequential damages.

Mayor Mitchel, in reply to questions from Mr. Untermyer, said that he had learned of this action after his statement had been made, possibly on the next day.

"Do I understand that on March 23 you did not know that the majority of the Senate in conference and the minority in conference had both agreed that the course of wisdom and patriotism was to take this property by condemnation and not under the agreement?" asked Mr. Untermyer.

"I did not say that," said the Mayor. "If you leave out the words 'wisdom and patriotism' I know that fact."

A moment later the Mayor admitted that he had learned of the condemnation proceedings on the evening of March 22, the day of his interview, from Senator Charles F. Murphy of Kings. Both were guests at a dinner

Austria to Break with Us If We Join War on Kaiser

Vienna, April 3, (via London, Thursday, April 5.)—It appears certain that Austria-Hungary will sever diplomatic relations with the United States if Congress declares that a state of war exists between America and Germany.

The Government has placed a special car at the disposal of Ambassador Penfield, who will probably leave Vienna on Thursday. Before leaving Ambassador Penfield will be received by Emperor Charles. The Ambassador will travel by way of Switzerland.

RUSSIAN ATTACHE STRANGELY SHOT

ACCIDENT, FRIENDS INSIST

Police Suspect Spy Attacked Diplomat Who Came from Petrograd Recently.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, April 4.—Suffering from a dangerous gunshot wound in his chest about which he remains stubbornly silent, Michael Borzatovsky, Commercial Attaché of the Russian Embassy in Washington, is in a critical condition in the Church Home and Infirmary. He was shot about 4 o'clock this morning in his bedroom at the Baltimore Country Club, where he was a guest.

Two theories are entertained regarding the affair, which the members of the Baltimore Country Club have done their best to shroud in mystery. The friends of the attaché in Baltimore declare the wound was self-inflicted accidentally while he was removing a revolver from his clothes.

The police have been told the wound was inflicted from a gun and not from a revolver. They find it hard to reconcile the fact that the man said goodbye to his friends at 11 o'clock Tuesday evening, and that the shot was fired after 3 o'clock in the morning, with the statement from club members that the shooting occurred when Mr. Borzatovsky was undressing to go to bed. They are following clues which lead them to believe he was the victim of a shot from a German spy, bent on assassination.

Close to adopted to the latter theory by the report that Borzatovsky, who came to America within the last two weeks, was returning from a conference with the Russian Ambassador at Washington with an important message for the new Government in his home land.

It was only with the utmost difficulty that detectives and police got any information regarding the shooting, and in a number of instances the information was absolutely incorrect and designed deliberately to lead the inquirers off the track.

On the person of the Russian diplomat was a large sum of money, but detectives scout the theory that robbery was the motive, if, as is confidently believed in many quarters, the wound was not self-inflicted. They believe that interests here inimical both to the Russian and the United States Governments regarded it as extremely dangerous for Brozatovsky to return to Russia, and resorted to desperate means to prevent him from getting there.

Borzatovsky came to the United States from Petrograd eight days ago and went immediately to Washington, where he had business for his Government with his embassy. Some years ago, in Petrograd, he had made the acquaintance of E. Griswold Thelin of Roland Park, who is the Baltimore manager of the Prudential Insurance Company, and also of other Baltimoreans at that time in the Russian capital. On his return journey he decided to visit these persons, and Mr. Thelin arranged for him to remain at the Baltimore Country Club, where he arrived on Saturday last.

Entertainments were given in his honor, and there was a particularly brilliant dinner party on Tuesday evening. Present there at the table were some of the most active and influential members of the club, in addition to Mr. Thelin and other Baltimore friends of the visitor. The party dispersed after 11 o'clock, and the departing guests left Borzatovsky apparently in fine spirits.

George S. Jackson, President of the Baltimore Country Club, said that two bellboys had told him Mr. Borzatovsky remained for possibly two hours, or even longer, in the green room writing letters. Soon afterward he retired to his room and later attendants hearing a shot went to the room. They found Borzatovsky with a serious wound in his chest. He was conscious and calm. He asked that Mr. Thelin be called. Mr. Thelin summoned Dr. R. V. Norment, and in the physician's automobile the wounded man was hurried to the Church Home and Infirmary.

Mr. Thelin informed the doctor there had been an accident. Mr. Borzatovsky said he had been partly undressed; that some whim prompted him to examine his service revolver, the gift of a friend; that quite unaccountably it had exploded.

Had Mysterious Bundle.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 4.—Michael Borzakovsky arrived in San Francisco recently on the Koreau Maru on an unexplained mission to the United States. A red, sealed bundle, closely guarded by two Russian detectives, gave an air of mystery to the Russian agent's trip. Borzakovsky was the guest during a few days' stay here of A. M. Wyrodseff, the Russian Consul-General.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Michael Borzatovsky, who was found shot at the Baltimore Country Club today, was a commercial messenger for the Russian Government, but had no connection with the Russian Embassy here, and was not a Count, embassy officials said tonight. They added that they understood he had shot himself accidentally while handling a pistol.

AUSTRIA TO PROPOSE PEACE

OPPOSES PRUSSIAN JINGOES

Pressure Brought to Bear on Reactionaries Who Demand Territorial Aggrandizement.

PEOPLE STIRRED BY RUSSIA

But Dual Monarchy May Be Compelled by Germany to Break with United States.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, April 4.—The Frankfort Gazette's Vienna correspondent sends his paper a long telegram declaring that there never was in Austria a party "like the Prussian Conservatives" who sympathized with the Czar's absolutism. He says: "It needs direct warnings of saner individuals to prevent the bulk of the population of Austria-Hungary from making untimely demonstrations in favor of the new Russia."

The correspondent then says Germany should note very carefully Count Czernin's insistence on the fact that Austria is not after annexations, and continues:

"Germany also can therefore hardly desire to make peace dependent on the possibility of annexing territory. But if certain German parties should attempt this they must be absolutely clear that such efforts would find no echo in Austria-Hungary."

This is the plainest possible indication that pressure is being put by Austria on German reactionaries.

The Vossische Zeitung states there is slight possibility that the Entente countries would be unanimous in the wish to confer with the Central Powers, but that a separate peace with Russia would be more conducive to German interests.

"Since the revolution Russia is much occupied with interior affairs," it says, "and a large part, if not a majority, of the Russian people want peace, in spite of what is said in England. The Chancellor has made it quite clear that Germany is ready for a peace with Russia which would be honorable for both sides."

LONDON, Thursday, April 5.—What The Evening News correspondent at The Hague terms an obviously inspired telegram from Vienna to the Frankfurter Zeitung says:

"Germany cannot possibly wish to make peace dependent on the possibility of annexation. If certain German parties should still attempt this it must be made clear that such efforts would find no support in Austria-Hungary."

The telegram describes the Austrian terms simply as a "guarantee for integrity and possibility of existence—that is, in relation to Serbia and Rumania."

The newspaper makes further quotations from President Wilson's denunciation of the German Government and demand that there be no peace with the Hohenzollerns.

A dispatch from The Hague to the Exchange Telegraph Company says that Austria-Hungary will break diplomatic relations with the United States as the result of strong German pressure.

At the conference attended by Emperor William and Emperor Charles and the Ministers and Generals of the Central Powers, the correspondent says, the chief subject dealt with was the American situation.

The conference is also said to have received important declarations from Count Czernin von Chudenitz, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, on the possibility of an early peace. The Emperor of Austria intends, it is added, to make a statement to the world shortly to that effect in the name of the Central Powers.

The Westminster Gazette says the conferees "can hardly fail to notice that the overthrow of their system and the clearance from the world of war lords and war makers is more than ever projected into the foreground as the primary object of the Allies. That is the central theme of President Wilson's address to Congress and the main purpose for which the Western democracy enters the war."

The Pall Mall Gazette says that President Wilson "indicates quite clearly his determination to make no treaty with perverts for whom treaties have no meaning," and adds that all of the allied nations are in line with his resolution.

Popular Celebration in France to Mark Our Entry Into War

It was suggested that the demonstration should be of a popular character, in order to enable the French people to participate in it.

PUTS GREAT HOPES IN AMERICAN AID

COMMISSION TO SAIL SOON

Westminster Gazette Says It Will Discuss the Scope of Our Co-operation with Allies.

LONDON, April 4.—The British nation tonight is awaiting with the same intense interest as the American people the decision of Congress, whose proceedings are fully reported in the English press. This is not because any doubt exists here as to what the result of the vote in the American Congress will be, but because the nation is anxious to have a formal official expression of its sentiments of satisfaction at America's entry into the struggle on the side of the Allies cross the Atlantic from Parliament, which will adjourn tomorrow for the Eastern recess, and there is a general desire that Congress arrive at its decision in time to allow this to be done before the House of Commons rises.

Pending the decision of Congress, the Ministers and responsible officials in London hesitate to make any public expression of their ideas and sentiments on American co-operation with the Allies.

The present mood of the British public is perplexed. On the one hand, it has daily evidence from the western front of the splendid success of the Allies' continuing advance; on the other hand, the War Office is constantly insisting upon the urgency of providing more men for the front, and the Ministers are imposing increasing food restrictions, warning the country that still greater sacrifices than any yet endured will be needed.

There were two instances of this today. General Robertson, Chief of the Imperial Staff, at Army Headquarters, declared that the Germans were now stronger by a million men than at any time before, and that the struggle would entail heavy sacrifices and greater determination. Winston Spencer Churchill in the House of Commons, in the course of a discussion of the air service, referred to America's entry into the war as "God-granted aid to struggling Christendom," and declared that but for this aid no prudent man could have said that the issue of the war was settled.

"Never since the victory of the Marne had the position been more serious, added Mr. Churchill, and even with America in the struggle a most oppressive situation lay before the nation, and the most vehement efforts were needed. The most terrible months of the war were coming, and it would only be by the highest wisdom, utmost daring, and truest comradeship that the Allies could come safely through.

Faced by the gloomy predictions, the people, who only a few weeks ago were inclined to belittle any practical assistance the United States could render, even if she came into the war, have now a tendency to go to the other extreme and hope for everything from American co-operation. While it is recognized that the greatest aid possible in the immediate future would be from the American Navy and in the realm of finance and supplies, keen curiosity is displayed as to the line co-operation with the new ally will take.

The Westminster Gazette says that a commission will soon be sent to the United States to decide the scope of this co-operation.

Ambassador Page had another prolonged conference with A. J. Balfour, Secretary for Foreign Affairs, today, and the American Naval Attaché was in close communication with Admiralty officials on the naval co-operation. All reports of American war preparedness were read with eagerness and satisfaction.

An interesting phase of the situation is the renewed peace talk and, although Premier Lloyd George, questioned in the House of Commons today about these rumors, said he was not aware of any peace terms being suggested by the Central Governments, there is a very general belief that the reports from Vienna and in inspired German papers of renewed peace tentatives are

MAY BLOCK SEPARATE PEACE

America's Stand a Menace to German Negotiations with Duma Government.

COMMENT OF GERMAN PRESS

WISH FOR A BRYAN TREATY

Plan 'Foolishly Rejected' Would Have Held Us Off for a Year, Tageblatt Says.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 4, (via The Hague.)—Reports of yesterday's proceedings in the American Congress, scant as they are, leave no doubt in the minds of the German people and Government that President Wilson will have his way in everything, and that their eleventh enemy is about to make his appearance in the theatre of war.

Nobody is excited here, but nobody is underestimating the effect of America's entrance into the war against Germany. In military circles it is considered that the immediate effect on the various fighting fronts will not be considerable. In political circles what is most feared is that America's action may influence the present rulers of Russia to a degree that they will resist the temptation to accept the peace offered by Germany. The masses of the German people are utterly at a loss to understand this war with a nation 4,000 miles away, with whom they have no quarrel whatever. The news from America arrived so late that most of the afternoon papers abstained from lengthy comment, contenting themselves with explaining to their readers the workings of the Washington Government machinery. But the Tageblatt states the German position very lucidly as follows:

Sees the Hand of England.

"In his last speech the Chancellor prepared us for the fact that there was no chance of continuing on peaceful terms with the United States. If the English press pretended that it was just this speech that had knocked the bottom out of the barrel, this is only another of those tricks which have had such fatal success with American public opinion. The English press also hoped to minimize thereby the Chancellor's declaration that the German people would go into this war without hatred or enmity, but would be sure to bear patiently this new burden.

"Are the American people in a like condition of mind? It is difficult to answer this question.

"It is a foregone conclusion that Congress will grant all of President Wilson's demands made in his message. He had little trouble to overcome the opposition which was raised against him in the last Congressional session. Of the few Senators who resolutely carried out the operations of obstruction against his policy very few are left, if English sources have informed us correctly. They gave way under the pressure of public opinion even in some of the Western States, where that Zimmermann letter seems to have had some effect after all.

"Since then there has been a feverish war propaganda. Meanwhile the Bryan pacifists did their best to avoid the worst. But it was quite clear that when once the war fever caught Madison Square there would be no stopping this hysterical wave.

"Hatred? Enmity? We know nothing about it. The emotions dictating to Congress its action and which were nourished by President Wilson and his partisans were of another kind. They were nothing but anger over supposed violations of American rights. Despite all efforts to enlighten him President Wilson clung tenaciously to his original view, and he still upholds it with surprising acuteness.

"In order not to disavow his pretended pacifism, Mr. Wilson now seeks to avoid an American declaration of war against Germany. That is why he insists on a fiction, as though Germany by her U-boat war had been guilty of a warlike action, necessary now, for America has recognized the existence of a state of war.

Wish for a Bryan Treaty.

"We realize now what a big mistake it was that German policy saw fit to refuse to conclude the Bryan peace treaty such as England and other powers entered into with the United States. If such a contract existed today the United States would be compelled to submit even the gravest differences to a court or arbitration before breaking relations. This would mean gaining at least a year. It is not at all impossible that President Wilson in his embarrassment would have taken that course to

Text of War Resolution Adopted by Senate and the Detailed Vote Upon Its Passage

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Following is the text of the resolution declaring war upon the Imperial German Government, which was adopted by the Senate tonight:

Whereas, The Imperial German Government has committed repeated acts of war against the Government and the people of the United States of America; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the state of war between the United States and the Imperial German Government, which has thus been thrust upon the United States, is hereby formally declared; and

That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to employ the entire naval and military forces of the United States and the resources of the Government to carry on war against the Imperial German Government; and to bring the conflict to a successful termination all the resources of the country are hereby pledged by the Congress of the United States.

The detailed vote of the Senate on the declaration of war was as follows:

ARMY CALL READY FOR 500,000 MEN

BACKED BY GENERAL STAFF

Selective Conscription Scheme to be Submitted When War Resolution Passes.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The plan of selective conscription, under which the first increment of 500,000 men is to be obtained under the universal military service plan of raising an army for the war with Germany, will be presented to Congress by the War Department as soon as that body adopts the war resolution.

In his address to Congress the President said that the entrance of the United States into the war would "involve the immediate addition to the armed forces of the United States already provided for by law in case of war at elast 500,000 men, who should, in my opinion, be chosen on the principle of universal liability to service, and also the authorization of subsequent additional increments of equal force as soon as they may be needed and can be handled in training."

The War Department has a well-worked-out plan, representing the views of the General Staff and Army War College, as to how this army may be raised and the machinery for registering and enrolling the various increments of 500,000 men.

But the plan has been carefully guarded, and Secretary Baker said today that the War Department's recommendations would not be made public until after they had been sent to Congress. While the department has a plan, Secretary Baker asserted today that the initiative with respect to the raising of an army rested with Congress, and that the Administration would carry out the will of that body as embraced in the legislation to be enacted.

In view of the President's recommendation in favor of universal liability to service, and the sentiment throughout the country in favor of universal military service, it is now assumed in Administration circles that the legislation soon to be enacted by Congress will be based on that principle.

In raising the first increment of 500,000 only young men of certain designated ages are to be called to the colors. These will include mainly unmarried men 18 to 19 years of age, but may include men up to 23. The age limits to be recommended by the War Department to Congress were not disclosed at the department today.

The unmarried males from 18 to 24 years of age in the United States at the beginning of the present year are estimated to have been as follows:

Total, 18 to 24 years	5,756,674

These figures are based on the 1910 census plus a 10 per cent. increase suggested by the Census Bureau as approximately correct for the period 1910-1916. It is not to be assumed that all these unmarried men would be called to the colors or that they are all without dependents. In addition to exemptions in favor of married men, and others with dependents, there will also be exemptions in favor of men needed in war in-

HOUSE WILL PASS RESOLUTION TODAY

Continuous Session Will Be Held from 10 A. M. Until Declaration Is Adopted.

COMMITTEE FOR IT, 17 TO 2

Both Sides File Reports, the Majority Reviewing the Wrongs Suffered at Germany's Hands.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The war resolution, in the form reported to the Senate by the Foreign Relations Committee, was reported today by the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, and will be the order of business in the lower body of Congress tomorrow. Chairman Flood obtained unanimous consent agreement that the House should meet at 10 A. M. and proceed immediately to consider the resolution. No time limit was fixed, but there was a tacit understanding that the resolution will be passed by night.

Announcement was made tonight by Representative Fred A. Britten, Republican of Illinois, a member of the Naval Affairs Committee, that he would offer this amendment tomorrow to the war resolution:

Provided, however, that no part of the military forces of the United States shall be ordered to do land duty in any part of Europe, Asia, or Africa until so directed by act of Congress.

Unless such an amendment is included in the war resolution Mr. Britten will oppose its passage. Mr. Britten has not evinced pacifist tendencies before, but has been one of the radical preparedness advocates.

"The resolution, authorizing the President to employ the entire naval and military forces of the United States to carry on war against the Imperial German Government is nothing more nor less than a complete declaration of war," said Mr. Britten. "I do not believe the great masses of our people are in favor of such a resolution, and I am certain they are opposed to the use of our military in the bloody trench warfare which has already annihilated the flower of the youth of the most civilized countries on earth.

"It is not yet too late diplomatically to consider the differences between Germany and ourselves, and I am sure a sincere effort in this direction would prove more valuable and creditable to the country than a declaration of war."

Two members of the Foreign Affairs Committee, Representative Cooper of Wisconsin, ranking Republican, and Representative Shackelford, a Democrat, of Missouri, voted against a favorable report on the resolution. Seventeen votes were cast in its favor.

Representative Cooper contended in the committee that the English blockade was responsible for the present conditions, and the United States should not single out Germany for a declaration of war.

Both majority and minority reports were filed from the committee. The majority report, filed by Chairman Flood, arraigns the German Govern-

President at Theatre Is Cheered by Audience

WASHINGTON, April 4.—President Wilson, attending a theatre tonight after working most of the day on war plans, was greeted with enthusiastic cheers. The orchestra played "The Star-Spangled Banner," and as the President was recognized the audience rose for a tumultuous demonstration.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—At 11 minutes past 11 o'clock tonight, the Senate, in the presence of a great throng on the floor and in the galleries, passed the resolution declaring a state of war between the United States and the German Government, and pledging all the resources of the United States for the successful prosecution of the war.

While the recorded vote was 82 to 6, the Senate's true alignment on the question of war is 90 to 6, as the absent Senators all favored the resolution. The House is expected to pass an identical resolution tomorrow by a still more overwhelming vote.

The six Senators opposing the declaration were equally divided between the two parties. They were La Follette of Wisconsin, Gronna of North Dakota, and Norris of Nebraska, Republicans; and Stone of Missouri, Lane of Oregon, and Vardaman of Mississippi, Democrats. All were members of the group of "willful men" whom President Wilson denounced.

Of the other six opponents of armed neutrality at the last session Senators Cumming, Kenyon, and Kirby voted for the resolution tonight. Senators O'Gorman, Clapp, and Works have retired to private life.

The vote came after thirteen hours of debate, that had lasted continuously since 10 o'clock in the morning.

Awed by the Occasion.

The passage of the resolution was marked by no outburst from the galleries. On the floor the Senators themselves were unusually grave and quiet. Many of them answered to their names in voices that quivered with emotion.

As the last name was called, and the Clerk announced the vote, there was hardly a murmur of applause. The great crowd was awed by the solemnity of the occasion and sobered by the speeches they had heard.

The resolution was adopted in the form approved by the Committee on Foreign Relations. Only one effort was made to change the committee's draft. That was in a substitute offered by Senator McCumber of North Dakota, in which the United States would simply proclaim certain principles of international law, with the warning that war would be made on any country violating them. Mr. McCumber cast the only vote for the substitute.

Throughout the long hours of discussion only five speeches were made against the resolution, and all efforts in opposition to it ceased with the conclusion of Mr. La Follette's four-hour attack on the President and defense of Germany's course. The remaining hours of the session were consumed by brief statements from Senators, one after the other, telling why they regarded war as necessary, how they had gradually come to change from advocates of peace to believers that war was essential to the safety and honor of the nation.

Last Stand of Germany's Apologists.

Today's debate, slow-moving as much of it was, postponing for weary hour after weary hour the declaration for which the country waited, was in itself the culmination of almost three years of intermittent discussion.

That long discussion had the same subject on the part of most Senators as today's debate, resentment of German outrages of every sort, murders on the high seas, affronts to Americans in Germany, and gross violation of American hospitality by the Imperial representatives in the United States. During these three years, as was again the case today, there was a bipartisan minority defending the acts of Germany, extenuating her offenses, and doing everything to hold the United States back from vigorous assertion of her rights.

Both these aspects were summed up in the speeches today, and both aspects seemed to lead to the end of today's debate—a solemn declaration of war against the house of Hohenzollern. For the subject matter of discussion has been increased from month to month by new German outrages, while the defenders of Germany in the Senate have presented a constantly dwindling front. The vote tonight, which every recent event insured would be overwhelming, might be regarded as the point of intersection of these two converging lines of change.

The loss of American sympathy for Germany was never more evident than it was in today's proceedings in the Senate. Senator Stone of Missouri, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, still held out for submission to German dictation, as did Senator Vardaman of Mississippi. And three Republican Senators spoke against war—La Follette of Wisconsin, Gronna of North Dakota, and Norris of Nebraska.

But Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, next to Mr. Stone, the Democratic leader of the Foreign Relations Committee, who has been regarded by some as a pacifist, today took the last step in the march he began, when he accepted responsibility for the Armed Neutrality bill, by supporting vigorously the President's demand for war and handling the resolution embodying that demand. Senator Kirby of Arkansas, a Democratic member of the "little group of willful men," announced that as war was inevitable he would not weaken the country's stand before the world by voting against the resolution. Senator Kenyon of Iowa, who refused to sign the manifesto of Senators supporting the Armed Neutrality bill, announced his support of the war resolution in a ringing plea for the destruction of the "bloody dynasty of Hohenzollern," and his colleague, Senator Cummins, who fought the Armed Neutrality bill with all his might, was among the supporters of the war resolution.

As this gradual drift manifested itself more and more in the direction demanded by the country, old observers, inured to the deliberate processes of the Senate, got, perhaps, an added sense of climax from the debate. To them the apparently endless addresses were the breathless hush before the breaking of a tornado. They knew what the end would be; everybody knew it; and they could read its terrible significance in the most casual utterances of the day.

Plain Talk of "Treason."

The delay increased the tension that has followed the President's last call for an extraordinary session of Congress to the breaking point, and the break came at last with almost unprecedented violence. It came when Mr. Reed of Missouri, in restrained voice and deliberate manner, accused Senator Norris of treason, and Senator Williams of Mississippi, Pomerene of Ohio, and James of Kentucky, supported the charge, inferentially, by the severe questioning to which they subjected the Nebraskan.

The rules of the Senate expressly forbid accusing a Senator of motives unworthy of a Senator, but Mr. Norris admitted the extraordinary situation by not invoking the rule in his defense, and not resenting the charge. He denied the truth of the charge, but contented himself with saying that his accusers would in calmer moments regret what they had said.

The clash came over a sentence in Mr. Norris's speech for peace, in which he said that Congress, by declaring war, would "put the dollar mark on the American flag." As he explained his remark, he meant simply that the war in which the United States was about to engage had a commercial origin, that most of the persons slain by German forces had taken their dangerous voyages for the sake of profit, and that American exports to the Allies had caused the German blockade to be turned against Americans.

But his interlocutors were in no mood for explanations. Senator Reed sent for the notes of Senator Norris's speech, read them to the Senate and declared them to be an insult to the President. Then, using the language of the Constitution's definition of high treason, he went on:

"If that be not giving aid and comfort to the enemies of the United States on the very eve of hostilities, I, at least, do not know what would give more comfort to a Hapsburg or a Hohenzollern. If that be not treason, it would at least give more comfort to the enemy coming from a Senator of the United States, than if 1,000 or 10,000 private citizens rose in open revolt. If that be not treason, as the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. Williams] suggests to me, it grazes the edge of treason. We are going into this war, not to save money, but to pour out our blood that liberty might live. The President calls for war, not to save a few paltry dollars, but to vindicate the sovereign rights of the United States."

Senator Norris then made his explanation, deprecating any reflection on the President. The country, he said, was war-crazy; he admitted that war would certainly be declared, but under the influence of passion Senators, he said, had somewhat lost their reason.

"All except myself," commented Mr. Williams, while his colleagues laughed.

Although the day's debate was slow, there was no filibustering. Even La Follette, though he began to talk in the middle of the afternoon and ended only after the lights were turned, did not try to delay matters. He is naturally a long talker, and his criticism of President Wilson, his denunciation of Great Britain, and his defense of Germany were taken by his hearers not as tactics of delay, but as a defense of himself in voting against war.

Some Stirring Moments.

At times the debate, under impulse of the mighty events it foretold, rose to the ancient heights of Senatorial traditions. Senator Hitchcock's speech, in which he frankly related his own change of opinion in the face of increasing evidences of Germany's determination to follow her ruthless course without regard to warnings or to rights, and his final plea for a united country for the war, made a profound impression.

Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, the scholar of the Senate, and a recognized authority on international law, made the speech that was expected of him.

And when Senator La Follette took his seat, Senator Williams, in a vigorous reply rose to a flight of patriotic eloquence that gave the galleries the throb and thrill that they had been waiting for.

For these orations the stage of the Senate was grandly set. Every Senator was in his place and remained there. The rail of the Senate was lined by members of the House, who remained standing all day long and through the night till the end came. The galleries were crowded to the doors, and around the elevated rear of the galleries a packed line of tireless watchers, standing, carried the bowl of faces up to the lofty ceiling. If a few spectators withdrew, their places were instantly taken by others, waiting their chance in long lines at every door.

Officials and Diplomats There.

The crowd retained its density through the night, but as the evening wore on its character changed. Brilliantly dressed women, with escorts in evening clothes, came from dinner parties or theatres, seeking a more vital drama. Secretary Lansing, Counselor Polk, and Assistant Secretaries Phillips and Long of the State Department, Solicitor General Davis, and Secretary Tumulty were among the prominent officials in the evening audience.

Even during the day a sprinkling of diplomats was constantly renewed in the diplomatic gallery. Mrs. Lansing, wife of the Secretary of State, was there for many hours. Secretary and Mrs. McAdoo were long listeners. Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British Ambassador, came to hear the discussion that was destined to see another country take its place in the conflict with Germany.

STORY OF THE DEBATE.

Question of War or Peace Discussed with Vigor and Solemnity.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—As soon as the Senate met Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska obtained unanimous consent to take up the war resolution. Senator La Follette at that time was not in the Chamber.

The Nebraska Senator then made an opening statement in behalf of the resolution, saying:

"What I shall say will be short. The time for action has arrived. The time for discussion has passed. The President of the United States has already stated more clearly, more conciusively, and more effectively the reasons which make this great step now to be taken necessary.

"The joint resolution provides for war against the Imperial German Government. It is framed on the lines of other war declarations of Congress in that it directs the President to employ the military and naval forces of the country to carry the war to a successful conclusion. It also conforms to the precedents of other declarations when Congress enters upon solemn business of war by declaring that a state of war already exists.

"It places the responsibility of this war squarely upon the shoulders of the Imperial German Government, which is charged with having committed repeated acts of war against the United States. Over and above all this, however, the measure is unquestionably also a declaration of war.

"Mr. President, in presenting the joint resolution I am impressed with the solemnity of this occasion. Some may be filled with joy at the prospect of war. To me it is depressing and dreadful. The enormous cost which the people will pay, which the people must pay, the great increased cost of living which they must meet, the enormous burden of taxes which they must pay, and the still greater heritage of debt which they must incur stagger my mind. The awful sacrifices of life that must follow sicken my heart. I am sure that other Senators have the same feeling; I am sure the great body of the American people have it also.

We Alone Ask No Material Gain.

"Our country has nothing material to gain by victory. We want no more territory; we demand no indemnity. We have no historic grudges to settle and no racial antipathies to gratify. In these respects, Mr. President, we differ from other countries, already involved in this awful struggle. Pan-Slavism struggles with pan-Germanism. Italy fights to get back the Trentino. France is resolved to recover her lost provinces. Great Britain has almost within her grasp German commerce and German colonies. Russia fights to win Constantinople. Germany not only wants her place in the sun, but she wants to dominate Central Europe, while Austria, Bulgaria, and Rumania all seek to extend their borders.

"We alone of all the nations will spend our treasures and sacrifice our lives without possibility of material gain. We are going to war to vindicate our honor and our independence as a great nation. We are going to war, as the President has stated, in defense of humanity. Such quarrel as we have with Germany was not of our seeking. It was forced upon us. We did much to avoid it.

"For nearly three years our country has steadily held to its purpose to avoid war if possible. This has been true not only of the President but of Congress. It has been true of the American people. One desperate act of the Imperial German Government after another has added to the provocation. I do not mean to say, Mr. President, that Germany has desired war with us; I do not believe it; but the German Government has been desperate and has taken desperate chances.

"The invasion of Belgium shocked the sense of justice of the whole civilized world and subjected American neutrality to its first great strain. The sinking of the Lusitania, with hundreds of innocent passengers, men, women and children, many of them Americans, sent a thrill of horror through America and would have produced war, had it not been for the moderation of President Wilson and his success finally in securing from the German Government an agreement to modify its methods and conform them to the rules of international law and of the dictates of humanity.

"It is customary, Mr. President, to say that this agreement was violated by Germany, but it is more just and more correct to say that Germany has reserved the right to revoke it under certain conditions and exercised that right by revoking it on February 1. This also was an act of desperation. It was not intended to provoke war with us, but it was followed by acts of war upon us. They were not made for the deliberate purpose of injuring us but rather to starve the English people. The effect, however, was the same. We could not submit; a great nation could remain great and independent, if it did so. No great nation could maintain its place in history if it permitted another to order it off the sea, if it permitted another to put a bottle up its commerce, if it permitted another to dictate to it in the exercise of its unquestioned right and to impose the penalty of murder of its citizens in case of refusal.

War Now the Only Alternative.

"The President stated in his address that we were confronted with the alternative of resistance or submission; and, Mr. President, we should remember that even then this people did not declare for war and our great President did not recommend war. He asked the only other alternative there was and recommended to Congress that this country assume a position of armed neutrality so that it might assert and defend upon the high seas its rights and the privileges of its people without actually going to war.

"When the President made that recommendation a little more than a month ago, the country received it hopefully but with unanimity; the Congress received it practically with unanimity. The resolution authorizing it, passed the House of Representatives almost unanimously. That resolution would have passed the Senate by an overwhelming vote if it had not been for a filibuster in the closing days of the session, which made it impossible for nine-tenths of the Senate to cast the vote that it was ready to cast in support of the President's position. So the people of the country, the Congress of the country, and the President of the country have taken one step after another and have adopted one policy after another in the hope of avoiding this terrible last alternative with which we are now confronted.

"Mr. President, I do not think it would have been impossible that armed neutrality could succeed. I thought so when I stood here and advocated the armed neutrality bill that if Congress with practical unanimity stood behind the President in authorizing armed neutrality Germany might have yielded; Germany might have seen that the position of the United States was definite and firm and unmistakable as well as honorable and Germany might have hesitated to continue the invasion of our rights upon the high seas.

"Unfortunately, however, the opposition to that measure, the filibuster successfully conducted upon the floor of the Senate, resulted in an official refusal of Congress to take the President's recommendation. It went out to the world officially that the different branches of the Government of the United States were at loggerheads.

"The result was that our neutral rights have been more imposed upon since that time than they were before. Five or six, possibly seven, American vessels, upon innocent errands of commerce upon the high seas, have been sunk. Some of them were not even upon the way to a neutral port but were returning to the United States in ballast, and in three of the cases, at least, the lives of American citizens have been lost. Nearly a hundred lives have been lost since we stood here, discussing armed neutrality, and the time has passed, unfortunately, when we can longer consider armed neutrality as an expedient short of war.

Ready Now for the Sacrifice.

"The American people, Mr. President, have clung to the hope through all these months that the dread alternative might be avoided. Like the Saviour of Man in the Garden of Gethsemane they have prayed that the bitter cup of sacrifice might pass from them. They have prayed that it might not be necessary to make the sacrifice for the protection of humanity and the vindication of national honor; all in vain.

"All patience, all moderation, and all long-suffering have been in vain—not entirely in vain, though, Mr. President, because we have avoided the horrors of war for possibly two years, but the time has now come when delay is impossible.

"Mr. President, I have opposed war; I have been bitterly opposed to it. What influence I have had in my State and in this body has been exerted against it; as long as there was any hope to avoid it, I used my legitimate influence for that purpose.

"I supported armed neutrality here with the fervor that I did because I thought it offered an escape from war with honor, and even hoped to the seventh hour, Mr. President, when I knew that a majority of the Congress of the United States was overwhelmingly for war and upon the proper occasion would vote for war, even when I knew that, Mr. President, I sought out the President of the United States and begged him to cling longer, if possible, to armed neutrality as an expedient and to peace as a hope, but it was vain. The President was in possession of such information as made it impossible for him to listen longer to the arguments of those who sought to avoid war. He has spoken to the Congress: the country is ready and the Congress is ready.

"While the vote has not yet been recorded, the decision has, as we all know, been reached; it is war. I cannot at this moment cast my vote against it without doing a vain and foolish thing. My act would only serve to weaken my country in the face of the enemy and in the face of inevitable war. Therefore, Mr. President, I have obeyed the instruction of the Committee on Foreign Relations and made this report to the Senate, and I am now ready to take my place with those who will back to the utmost the President of the United States in prosecuting this war for the honor of the country and in the interests of humanity."

"Clock of Patriotism Strikes."

Senator Swanson of Virginia said the German Government had "repeatedly and grossly violated its treaty obligations to us and wantonly broken solemn assurances."

"The issue is not peace or war," Senator Swanson continued. "War has already been declared upon us. The issue is whether we shall accept war or abject and cowardly submission."

Reciting the sinking of American ships, German plots and outrages in this country, Senator Swanson said the Zimmermann plot to incite Mexico against this country "reaches the lowest depths of national turpitude."

"We have long suspected a disposition by Germany to dispute the Monroe Doctrine. Now is the time to teach this mischief-making German Government that our territorial sovereignty cannot be made a subject of war bargaining.

"The advocates of peace now would place upon this nation the shame of a still greater submission. They would endure still greater affronts and suffer still greater submission."

Reciting the warnings given to Germany against ruthless submarine warfare, Senator Swanson asked if they were "mere empty boasts and bluff, or the solemn voice of a resolute people."

"No," he answered. "Congress will not by cowardly action declare that diplomatically we roar and then when rebuffed strike with the gentle hand of a woman."

He styled Germany's barred zone decrees as "tyranny and arrogance."

"We have almost forgotten the wrongs of the past in the outrages of the present," he continued, asserting that unless American rights were upheld "Old Glory will be sunk to low depths of shame and humiliation."

"What else can Germany do to wage war against us?" he demanded. "Armed neutrality would now be a cowardly makeshift. We cannot avoid war. When the war-made autocracy that now rules Germany has been chastened, overthrown, ties of friendship now severed and the Union reunited. The clock of national patriotism then strikes for each of us in our hour of work and responsibility."

Party Lines Gone, Says Lodge.

Senator Lodge, ranking Republican member of the Foreign Relations Committee, said:

"No one is more conscious than I that this is a moment for action and not for debate, but I wish briefly to state why I support it with the greatest earnestness of which I am capable.

"This most momentous power, intrusted to Congress by the Constitution, is the authority to declare war, and never has Congress been called to more solemn exercise of this great function than at this moment. We have submitted long wrongs and outrages from the Central Powers of Europe with a long patience. We have borne and forbore to the very limit of endurance. Now the inevitable end is here and we are about to declare war against Germany.

"Speaking for myself and, I hope, for my associates generally on this side of the chamber, I desire to say that in this crisis and when the country is at war party lines will disappear, and I am confident, not be confined to the minority. Both Democrats and Republicans must forget party in the presence of the common danger. This is not and cannot be a party war. It is a war in which all Americans must be united, and one must ask a loyal citizen, high or low, who seeks to serve his country in the field or in civil life, to what party he belongs. Any more than it would be possible to ask his religion or his race. As Americans we shall all, I am sure, be prepared to give to the executive the money, men, and all the necessary powers for waging war with energy and driving it forward to a successful conclusion.

"We have only a very small army and we must proceed at once as rapidly as possible to build up a large one, fit to defend the country in any emergency. We must provide for the future, for the supply of men for the army by a system of universal military training. I agree with the President that this new army should be chosen on the principle of universal liability to service.

"Our navy is strong in certain branches and very weak in others. It must be our business to supply the deficiencies as rapidly as possible. Fortunately those deficiencies are of the kind which can be most quickly supplied, and it is our duty to see to it that all the money and all the legislation necessary for both the army and the navy are given at once.

For Quick Co-operation with Allies.

"The President has said that war will involve the utmost practicable co-operation in council and action with the Governments now at war with Germany, and as incident to that the extension to those Governments of the most liberal financial credits, in order that our resources may so far as possible be added to theirs. I am not only in full agreement with this policy as advised by the President, but it seems to me that nothing is more important than to follow it out.

"I am as thorough a believer in the general policy laid down by Washington when he advised the people of the United States not to enter into permanent alliances, but the man who won the American revolution through the alliance with France would have been the last to lay down a hard and fast rule that under no circumstances and for no purposes were we ever to ally ourselves with other nations. Far-seeing and wise, he knew very well that dangers might come which would make a temporary alliance or agreement with foreign nations imperative. That time has arrived.

"It would be madness for us to attempt to make war alone upon Germany, and find ourselves, perhaps at the end left isolated, at war with that Power, when all the nations had made peace, because we had not associated ourselves with them. The Allies of the Entente, as they are called, are fighting a common foe, and their foe is now ours.

"We cannot send a great army across the ocean, for we have no army to send. Yet I should be glad for one if we could send 10,000 men of our regular troops, so that the flag of the United States might at least be unfurled in the fields of France. I believe that the mere sight of that flag in that region, made so desolate by war, would stimulate the courage and help the success of those who have the same aim that we have, and who seek the same victory.

"We can also help the Allies, as the President recommends, with large credits and with those supplies which we can furnish, and which they lack. We cannot do more in any direction to bring this war to a speedy end than to give those credits and furnish those supplies."

Referring to the President's statement concerning German spies in this country, Senator Lodge said he believed that "the overwhelming mass of our citizens of German descent are just as loyal to the United States as any citizens could be," but that German agents must be dealt with, to quote the President's address, "with a firm hand."

Favors Seizing German Ships.

Senator Lodge said one of the first acts of the United States should be to seize the German ships, now in United States ports, and putting that tonnage in the world's service.

"We have never been a military nation," Mr. Lodge continued. "We are not prepared for war in the modern sense; but we have vast resources and unbounded energies and the day when war is declared we should devote ourselves to calling out those resources and organizing those energies so that they can be used with the utmost effect in hastening the complete victory. The worst of all wars is a feeble war. War is too awful to be entered upon half-heartedly. If we fight at all, we must fight for all we are worth. It must be no weak, hesitating war. The most merciful war is that which is most vigorously waged and which comes most quickly to an end.

"But there are, in my opinion, some things worse for a nation than war. National degeneracy is worse; national cowardice is worse. The division of our people into race groups, striving to direct the course of the United States in the interest of some other country when we should have but one alliance, one hope, and one tradition—all these dangers have been gathering about us and darkening the horizon during the last three years. Whatever suffering and misery war may bring, it will at least sweep these foul things away. It will unify us into one nation.

"I believe also that on our entrance into this war under the conditions which it has assumed, our future peace, our independence as a proud and high-spirited nation, our very security are at stake. There is no other way, as I see it, except by war, to save these things without which national existence is a mockery and a sham.

"But there is a still higher purpose here, as I look upon it. The President has said with great justice that Germany is making war on all nations. We do not enter upon this war to secure victory for one nation as against another. We enter this war to unite with those who are fighting the common foe in order to preserve human freedom, democracy, and modern civilization. They are all in grievous peril; they are all threatened.

A War Against Barbarism.

"This war is a war, as I see it, against barbarism, panoplied in all the devices for destruction of human life which science, beneficent science can bring forth. We are resisting an effort to thrust mankind back to forms of government, to political creeds and methods of conquest, which we had hoped had disappeared forever from the world. We are fighting against a nation which, in the fashion of centuries ago drags the inhabitants of conquested lands into slavery; which carries off women and girls for even worse purposes; which in its mad desire to conquer mankind and trample them under foot has stopped at no wrong, has regarded no treaty.

"The work that we are called upon to do when we enter this war is to preserve the principles of human liberty, the principles of democracy, and the light of modern civilization; all that we most love, all that we hold dearer than life itself. We wish only to preserve our own peace and our own security, to uphold the great doctrine, which guards the American Hemisphere, and to see the disappearance of all wars or rumors of wars from the East, if any dangers there exist.

"What we want most of all by this victory, which we shall help to win, is to secure the world's peace, based on freedom and democracy, a world not controlled by a Prussian military autocracy, but by the will of the free people of the earth. We shall achieve this result and when we achieve it, we shall be able to say that we have helped to confer a great blessing upon mankind, and that we have not fought in vain."

A burst of applause came from the galleries when Senator Lodge concluded.

Vardaman Speaks in Opposition.

Senator Vardaman, Democrat of Mississippi, one of the men who participated in the filibuster at the recent session, said he wished he could vote with the majority of his colleagues but he "must follow the path of duty" as he saw it.

"I must see the path of duty through the mists of passion," said this Mississippi Senator.

Some spectators left the galleries as Vardaman spoke, and he interjected the remark that he did not care whether they remained or not.

"The atmosphere enveloping this Capitol for the past year," Vardaman continued, "has been surcharged with the spirit of prejudice, hate and love—all good and bad passions have stirred; have lost their bearings and their poise. Everything seems out of joint. Of all the times when Congress and the people should keep their head now is the time. Self-assumed superiority and intolerance and bigotry are attributes of little minds, incompetent in leadership and directing affairs of this great nation.

"The provocation is great," he said, referring to German acts against this country. "The tide of passion runs high. Each senator should remember he may, by his vote, be signing the death warrant of hundreds of thousands and burdening generations with crushing burdens endangering their very existence."

Senator Vardaman said that he did not question the patriotism of those differing from him, but predicted that the wisdom of their course would be determined by time alone.

"For the life of me, I cannot believe that war is for the welfare of the world or the people of this nation. I do not condone the crimes of the German Government against the people of the United States and I would not deny that the law has been violated and that we have the right to declare war. If the issue of war or peace should be submitted to the people who must fight the war, the voice of the people would be heard in thunderous tones directing the President to find some other way than war.

"I am not going to vote for this resolution," Senator Vardaman continued. "I do not believe it is necessary to go to war. But I am not going to delay or interfere with its passage.

"Once in the war, he concluded, he would support the President.

Stone, Against War, Will Accept Decision.

Senator Stone, in opposing the resolution, said:

"I fear that, involving the United States in this European war will be to commit the greatest national blunder of history. I shall vote against committing this mistake, to prevent which I would gladly lay down my life. Until the Congress shall otherwise command I shall stand as I have stood from the beginning, and even now I lift my voice in solemn warning against this blunder.

"But the constituted powers of my Government, the constitutionally authorized to speak for this people on this momentous issue, shall decide for war and we go into the war, then I shall cast all doubts and forebodings to the wind, and my eyes will be blind to everything but the flag of my country borne by American boys through the storm of war, and my ears will be deaf to every call except the call of my country in its hour of peril.

"If Congress unfurls the battle flag, however profound my sorrow, I will at once stand in obedient salute to that flag, dutifully willing and ready to perform any service it makes any sacrifice necessary to bring the cause we espouse to a successful issue. To my countrymen I say, that while we may differ, as we do, about the policy of entering this war, once in it all differences must end.

"In war there can be no divided patriotism. In war the eyes of an American can behold but one flag. In a place like that all gaps must be closed and our front become as solid as a wall. If we declare for war, there must be no halting; we must make war in earnest. We know what that means, but when war is declared, if it is declared, honor and patriotism will demand that we shrink not even from the mouth of hell.

"If your decision be for war, there is nothing that any sane, honorable, patriotic American could do that I will not do to make that war a success. I will stand ready instantly to take my full share of the responsibility and burden."

McCumber Urges One More Effort.

Senator McCumber, Republican, proposed that recognition of a state of war be delayed by the passage of a resolution to declare the future sinking of any American ship without warning or failure to take care of American passengers or other violations of international law, an act of war, and authorize the President to use the military forces of the country to carry the war to a successful termination.

"I am pausing on the brink of this war," said he, "long enough to allow Germany to withdraw her declaration of unrestricted warfare on neutral ships and neutral citizens. I am allowing her the opportunity to retreat. Without condoning a single past act, I am chalking the deadline and leaving it to her whether she will again cross that line. She can answer by word or act. If she immediately ceases her unlawful assaults upon our vessels and citizens, she can avoid war with us. If she overstepped this line again, she will do so after having measured the consequences, and the war will be of her own choosing."

Mr. McCumber said he believed that the German people do not understand the position of the United States, and had a conviction that we were insisting upon the right of our merchant ships to deliver without molestation or interference contraband to their enemies.

"By my resolution," he said, "I want the fairness and righteousness of our position to be put before the German people before we either initiate or declare war. I want to put the onus of that war on the other country. I have an abiding conviction if we pass this resolution there will be never another American vessel sunk without notice, and we shall secure recognition of our vital rights without plunging in this conflict."

Senator McCumber said that a "very considerable portion of the people" did not favor war.

"If this last effort of mine," he concluded, "should fail, I shall acquiesce in the judgment of the majority and support my Government in its every war sword until peace, honorable and just, shall be restored."

Norris Blames Wall Street.

A vigorous speech in opposition to the resolution was made by Senator Norris of Nebraska, who charged that "Wall Street" and other centres of wealth were interested in profits, and also that newspapers and news agencies had been in a propaganda to foster war sentiment.

"I am most emphatically and sincerely opposed to taking any step that will force this country into the useless and senseless war," said he. "But I shall not permit my feelings to interfere with bringing success and victory to American arms."

Senator Norris cited loans to the Allies as a huge American interest in the war's outcome.

"Through these instrumentalities and others of those who expect to make millions more, if our country can be drawn in, a large number of the great newspapers and news agencies of the country have been controlled and enlisted in the greatest propaganda that the world has ever known to manufacture sentiment in favor of war.

"The enormous profits of munition manufacturers, stock brokers, and bond dealers must be still further increased. Congress, urged by the President and backed by artificial sentiment, is about to engulf our country in the greatest holocaust the world has ever known."

Citing a stock broker's letter, predicting increased financial benefits from America entering the war, Senator Norris continued:

"He expresses the view undoubtedly of Wall Street, and of thousands of men elsewhere, who suffer only dollars coming to them. War does not bring prosperity to the soldier; not to the broken-hearted widow and mother; not to little children. War brings no prosperity to the great mass of common and patriotic citizens. War brings prosperity to the gambler in Wall Street who has already possessed of more wealth than can be enjoyed. Such men could not go to war; they must remain in their offices; even the drafting officer will not find them.

"We are going into war upon command of gold," Norris continued. "We are about to do the bidding of wealth's terrible mandate and make millions of our countrymen suffer untold generations bear burdens and shed their life blood, all because we want to protect our commercial right to deliver munitions to the belligerents. I feel that we are about to put the dollar sign on the American flag."

Senator Norris concluded by predicting that the conflict would take America into entanglements that it would not end with this war."

Reed Denounces Dollar Talk.

Senator Reed, Democrat, of Missouri replied to Senator Norris by declaring that his charge that the war resolution was placing the dollar sign on the American flag was "almost treason."

The assertion that the nation was going to war on the demand of gold was "an indictment of the President of the United States, an indictment of Congress, of the American people, and of the truth."

"It is not the truth!" shouted the Missouri Senator.

Senator Norris, Senator Reed asserted, was a man blinded by his obsessions and obsessed with the "fear of money or good fortune."

"He is so obsessed with this fear," said Senator Reed, "that all that is necessary to get him to take a false vision is to suggest that some wealthy man or interest, however remote or contingent, is concerned in something or will make profits from something."

Concerning Senator Norris's statement that a war declaration would "put the dollar sign on the American flag," Senator Reed said:

"I am sore at heart that such a statement should be made at this time, in this place. If that is not giving aid and comfort to the enemy on the eve of hostilities I fail to see what could be. If that be not aiding treason, so near treason that the enemies of America will gait as much consolation as if 10,000 citizens had denounced the Government after a war declaration.

"It grazes the edge of treason," Senator Williams of Mississippi interjected, and Senator Reed indorsed the interjection.

"The President is not calling America to arms for the sake of a few paltry dollars," Senator Reed continued, "but for the life, honor, and integrity of this country—to say that neutral nations shall not be crushed under the iron heel of that military despotism that threatens the life and civilization of free countries. Is it not, in fact, the world."

Senator Norris disclaimed any intention to reflect on anybody.

Senators James, Williams, and Pomerene here joined in a sharp tilt with the Nebraska Senator, at which spectators laughed and applauded. Some hissed statements by Senator Norris and were warned against such demonstrations.

When Senator Reed said that the Nebraska Senator owed it to the country to make clear his "dollar mark" statement, Senator Norris replied that he could not help wrong constructions being placed upon his words.

"What would the Senator think if I said that he and other Senators, opposing the resolution, were seeking to place the picture of the Kaiser on the American flag?" asked Senator James.

"I would not pay any attention to it," said Senator Norris.

A few hisses came from the galleries.

"Your speech will be paid attention to by the American people and particularly of Nebraska," Senator James retorted.

"I hope it will," Mr. Norris answered.

Senator Pomerene of Ohio interrupted by saying that about 300 Americans, including women and children, had been killed by submarine warfare, and asked:

"How many more does the Senator want to see killed before he is ready to defend our citizens and their rights?"

"If any Government were seeking out Americans with intent to kill them because they were Americans," said Senator Norris, "I would go to war when the first one was killed. That has not been the case here either with those killed by British mines or German submarines. In Mexico more than 500 have been killed because they were Americans, and that was all right."

"I think," replied Mr. Pomerene, "that Senators will distinguish between the actions of a responsible Government and one that is irresponsible."

Senator Norris said that Americans had not been killed deliberately by submarines and mines.

"I'm not defending the policy and I have condemned it," said he.

"I do not mean that you are defending that act, but I do mean to say that you are assaulting the American people," Senator Pomerene asserted.

"That statement is absolutelc unfounded," retorted Senator Norris.

"The Senator pleads in extenuation that the murder of Americans on the high seas has been only incidental and commercial traffic," said Senator Reed.

"The best you can say is that murder has been indiscriminate."

Senator Tillman of South Carolina said that the President had made it clear that war was upon the German Government and not the German people.

"The Kaiser and his slavish underlings, aiders, and abettors alone are responsible," said he. "The Hohenzollerns, indeed, have compelled us to fight for our dearest rights. The German people, having been educated for more than a generation to bow down and worship that dynasty, have become indifferent to their own liberties and rights because they never had any. I want to point out the Hohenzollerns and specify that we are warring alone with them and not with the German people. The Russian people have settled with the Romanoffs and we ought by every means encourage the Germans to settle with the Hohenzollerns and Hapsburgs."

Kenyon Ready to Vote War.

In announcing that he would vote for the war resolution, if for no other reason than that the nation should not be divided, Senator Kenyon, Republican, of Iowa, said the fight for world democracy against autocracy was an impelling reason.

Senator Kenyon said he had been strongly opposed to entering the war, but he went on:

"Patience has its limitations. The limits have been reached. War is not of our choosing. The German Government is practically waging war upon us. Uncle Sam, that patient giant, has been at bat for peace. There will be no difficulty in securing enlistments if the people believe that this is a war to save the democracy of the world and the honor of our nation. If the rule of kings, Kaisers, and Czars be overthrown and the government of the people arise, then the hand of Providence will be apparent.

"This is no time for censuring one another or denouncing those who have been earnestly contending for peace. It is a time for 100 per cent. Americanism. The great Republic must accept the challenge of autocracy and go forth in battle for the world's democracy. When we do, we must hit hard.

"Let us be done with the making of money. Those who would at this time make excessive profits from war materials or the food the people need are just as guilty of treason as those who give aid or comfort to the enemy, and should be treated as such."

Senator Kenyon said that he was opposed to any alliance in the war, and that if anything beyond co-operation was proposed the President must again come before Congress.

"The question of sending an army to Europe," he continued, "is not settled by this resolution."

Gronna Against the Resolution.

Senator Gronna, Republican, of North Dakota, who opposed the Armed Neutrality bill, said he would vote against the resolution, holding that the maintenance of honorable peace with all nations was possible.

"War will be an unpardonable error and blunder," he said. "But after it is declared we will have but one cause—to do our duty in our country's defense. When that time comes I shall do my full duty."

Another of the Armed Neutrality filibusterers—Senator Kirby, Democrat, of Arkansas—said in an impassioned speech that he would vote in favor of the war resolution because he believed that it would pass overwhelmingly, and he desired to have the country united, although he was opposed to entering the war.

"I have felt from the beginning," said he, "that the policy we were pursuing would result in war, as it has to-day. For that reason I voted against the Armed Neutrality bill, which its friends now say is inefficient.

"But there is a new policy laid down and to be enforced with the sword. I do not believe the majority of Congress think we should be forced into war under existing conditions. But I am for my country, right or wrong.

"I am not going to vote against the resolution. No good could be accomplished. The great majority are for it. But if I thought that my vote would delay it I would stand here a thousand years and vote against it. I will vote for the resolution and I may appear that we are going along together."

Time to Stand Up and Be Counted.

"The time has come to stand up and be counted," said Senator Ashurst. "If we are to keep this nation powerful and able to work out the problems that will confront it, we must keep an unweakened fibre. We must face problems as we find them, not as we would like to have them presented. What does it profit a nation if it keeps its hide unpunctured and rots its heart?"

Senator Myers of Montana said:

"We can maintain peace no longer and maintain our honor and our rights. There is one of two courses—submit or fight. The question is, Shall we take orders from the German Government? If we do not accept Germany's defiant challenge, then the men who fought at Bunker Hill will have died in vain to establish a nation too degenerate or too cowardly to survive."

"The most eloquent speech that can be delivered here," said Senator Colt of Rhode Island, "is a vote for this resolution and to support the President of the United States. To my mind, there are only three courses open—submission, armed neutrality, or war. Submission cannot be thought of for a moment, when we reflect on the honor and dignity of the United States. Armed neutrality has been tried and has proved a failure. You cannot have a condition of armed neutrality and defend yourself against this monster of the sea that lies in ambush.

"I regard that we are as much in a state of war as if a German battleship had bombarded the City of New York and killed innocent non-combatants. The battle today is simply for the overthrow of Prussian militarism, a menace to liberty, civilization and Christianity."

La Follette Speaks Four Hours.

Senator La Follette began his speech by reading a letter to Representative Helgesen of North Dakota from a woman, protesting on behalf of her son against the slaughter of war. The Wisconsin Senator received close attention from floor and galleries.

"I had supposed until recently," said the Senator, after reading the letter, "that it was the duty of Senators and Representatives to vote and act their convictions on questions coming before them. Quite another doctrine has been proposed by the newspapers of the country. It is the doctrine of standing behind the President, without inquiry as to whether he is right or wrong. I have never subscribed to that doctrine and I never shall. I have stood behind him when I believed him right, and I shall continue to oppose him when I believe him wrong.

"If it is important for us to speak on matters of domestic policy though we may, unfortunately, be in disagreement, it is infinitely more important to speak and vote our convictions when the question is one of peace or war, involving certainly the lives and fortunes of our people, and it may be the destinies of all of them and even of the civilized world as well. If unhappily, on such a momentous question the most patient research and conscientious consideration we could give leaves us in disagreement with the President, I for one, regret fully, but none the less firmly, must remain so."

The Wisconsin Senator referred to the President's speech to Congress when he severed relations with Germany and the one when he urged armed neutrality. He said that conditions between country and Germany had not changed greatly since the diplomatic break.

Declaring that he became convinced that the arming of merchantmen would be wholly futile and a "lure to their destruction," Senator La Follette spoke of how he had been criticized by the Executive for opposing the armed ship bill. The President's daughter, Mrs. McAdoo, listened from a gallery.

"Representatives of the President saw fit, by methods I do not care to characterize, to prevent my speaking," the Senator said. "The President issued a statement in which he saw fit to characterize as 'willful' the conduct of Senators who in obedience to their conscience and oaths of office, opposed the bill. I know of no grave charge."

Senator La Follette read a sheaf of telegrams reporting "straw votes," postcard and other polls, in various communities opposing war. He asserted that of 15,000 or 20,000 letters and telegrams he had received regarding his vote on the armed ship bill, 80 to 90 per cent. had approved his stand. The Senators, who opposed the armed neutrality bill had been attacked and "scurrilously libeled" in the newspapers, he said, contrary to the spirit of fairness which once pervaded the nation.

Attacks England as Lawbreaker.

Asserting that a minority is frequently able to shape the national policy, Senator La Follette digressed from his prepared speech to make a plea that the people make themselves heard.

"The poor who are called to rot in the trenches," he said dramatically, "have now no organized mouthpiece, they have no press, but some time they will be heard, I hope, in an orderly and peaceful way and before long, when, if we take this step, prices of necessaries will multiply and they will come to be taxed double again and again. The poor will be heard; they will have their day."

The Wisconsin Senator referred to the President's statement that Germany had violated her submarine pledges, and continued:

"Our promise, so called, was conditional upon England being brought to obedience of international law. Was it quite fair to lay before the country the statement that Germany made unconditional promise and had deliberately violated it?

"It was England, not Germany, who refused to obey the Declaration of London, containing the most humane ideas of naval warfare which could be framed by the civilized world up to that time. Keep that in mind.

"If this is war upon all mankind, is it not peculiar that the United States is the only nation of all neutrals which regards it as necessary to declare war upon Germany? All have refused to join in a combination against Germany. Some may have a clearer view than we. This suspicion of a desire for war profits does not attach to them."

Senator La Follette said that the United States had not the confidence of the other American republics because of its war policies. He predicted that entrance of the United States would not shorten the conflict, "but will vastly extend it by drawing other nations in."

It is idle, the Senator went on, to talk of a war on the German Government and not on the German people.

"We are leagued," he continued, "or are about to be, according to the President's speech, with the hereditary enemies of the German people. Words are not strong enough to protest against a combination with the Entente Allies, which would have us indorse the violations of international law by Great Britain and her purpose to wreak vengeance on the German people. We do not know what is in the minds of those who made the compacts in which we are to share."

Why Not a Referendum?

Reverting to the President's assertion that the German people were thrown into war without an opportunity to say anything about it, the Senator asked:

"Will the supporters of this war bill have a vote on it before it goes into effect? Unless they do that, it ill becomes us to speak of Germany. Submit this question to the people. By a vote of ten to one they would register their declaration against war."

The German people, he asserted, were more solidly behind their Government than the people of the United States would be behind the President, in waging war on Germany.

"The Espionage bill and the Military bill that have been drawn by the war machine in this country," he said, "are complete proof that those responsible know that it has not popular support. The armies necessary to be raised to aid the Entente Allies, cannot be raised by voluntary enlistment."

Praising the character and services of German-Americans in this country, Senator La Follette said that

LEADERS IN FRANCE WELCOME OUR ENTRY

"Greatest Event Since the Civil War," Is Jules Cambon's Comment.

PREMIER RIBOT PLEASED

Press Eulogizes Wilson for His High-Mindedness and Expresses Great Joy.

PARIS, April 4.—"It is a red letter day for us," was Premier Ribot's comment on President Wilson's speech. In conversation with his friends the Premier expressed the deep joy felt by everybody in France over the entry into the conflict of the great American democracy.

A statement will be made in the Chamber of Deputies on Thursday, if the American Congress has taken action by that time. United States Ambassador Sharp called at the Foreign Office last night and was received by Premier Ribot and Jules Cambon, Secretary General of the Foreign Office.

Premier Ribot received the American correspondents today at the Quai d'Orsay.

"This is a memorable day in your history and in the history of the world," he said.

"It is the greatest event since the civil war," remarked M. Cambon, who was present.

Premier Ribot, both in what he said and by his manner, gave every evidence of his satisfaction with the action of the United States and his high appreciation of President Wilson.

Talking with the American correspondents during the day concerning President Wilson's address, M. Cambon said:

"There can be no doubt of the emotions with which the French people read this message. It makes a profound impression, even among those not swayed by the passion of war. It is a veritable accusation against Germany.

"We in France have applied ourselves to establishing Germany's responsibility for the origin of this war and how it sought to avoid every effort to prevent war. The German Government put aside the arbitration proposed by the Imperial Czar of Russia and the endeavors of England and France. The President's interest is not to determine the origin of the war. It is in the manner in which it is conducted. He convicts the Germans for their profound inhumanity, which is the basis of the German character.

"President Wilson draws a distinction between the German people and those who govern them. We have a proverb that a people always has a Government which it merits. The United States has the Government it merits—we see the result. The American Government has been created by the efforts of Americans. They fought for their ideas of Government in the War of Independence and in the civil war. The Germans submit to autocracy. Still, I think it important that President Wilson has assured the German people that the war is not against them. His words will cause profound perturbation among the rulers of Germany. It is a veritable punishment for them."

M. Cambon thought the message would have a repercussion throughout the world.

"The President's message is a great battle won from Germany," he continued. "I am convinced it will shorten the war considerably. President Wilson's word is that of a peaceful pacifist, because what he does will shorten the war and bring the United States into the peace settlement, in which his ideas concerning the prevention of war in the future will have an opportunity for consideration. I doubt whether war can altogether be prevented, but it can certainly be made rarer and more difficult."

Although to a certain extent discounted, President Wilson's address has made an enormous impression in France. The numerous vague and sometimes contradictory forecasts and rumors as to its probable contents, published continuously during the past few weeks, had served more than anything else to sharpen expectation. Consequently the message itself came almost with the force of novelty, and the joy of the press is unbounded.

The message fulfills the wildest hopes of France. The front pages of the principal newspaper organs are entirely given up to it, and portraits and enthusiastic pen pictures of President Wilson are published under such headings as "A Great Citizen."

"President Wilson's message," says the Matin, "is a logical sequence of the attitude he has maintained firmly for more than two years. It will cause a profound sensation in the world."

The Petit Parisien says:

In the Figaro, Alfred Capus says:

"This memorable date marks the moment when the whole world realizes the deeper meaning of the war of 1914, and the impossibility of living on an earth with a powerful, armed Germany. It will be a glory to the United States of America to have embodied a universal sentiment and, forsaking the role of spectator, to have entered the struggle to free the peoples of the world from the continual menace which a nation grown monstrous and imposed upon them. President Wilson will share the honor with his country and will leave his name inscribed on this magnificent page of history."

Stephen Pinchon, former Foreign Minister, writes in the Petit Journal:

"To those who are striving to rid Europe of the leprosy which is gnawing it and threatens to spread through the whole world, the United State brings an invincible force—that of its credit, its industrial and commercial resources, and its fleet. In addition it brings a moral power greater than all these. The wild beasts who are sowing death and destruction in our occupied territories may still do much damage, but from now on their days are numbered."

LAURIER PRAISES WILSON.

OTTAWA, April 4.—"President Wilson's message is one of the most important contributions since Lincoln's time to the literature of freedom and democracy," Sir Wilfrid Laurier said in a statement made here today. "It is greatly inspiring to the free peoples of the world, who are battling for the rights of civilization against the tyranny, autocracy, and maniacal efforts of Prussianism. As intense lover of peace, the President draws the sword more in sorrow than in anger, but with the firm determination that the American people will exhaust every effort to assist in freeing the world from the frightful menace of barbaric war waged at the dictation of a few men for whom there should be no place whatever in civilization.

BRITAIN SHORT OF DOCTORS.

Battle of the Somme Cost Them 400 Medical Men.

LONDON, April 4.—The Earl of Derby, Secretary of State for War, in moving in the House of Lords today the second reading of the bill to review military exemptions, said:

"We lost more than 400 doctors, killed or wounded, in the battle of the Somme alone, and at the present moment we are, I won't say critically, but lamentably short of medical men, and I am afraid we will continue so in the immediate future."

The War Secretary, while regretting the necessity of introducing the bill, said that extensive and more drastic measures were required to secure to the army the men necessary.

dustries and men who fail to meet the proper military requirements.

After deducting from the 5,756,674 unmarried men between 18 and 24 years a percentage representing the physically incapable, as estimated from the results of examinations of applicants at army recruiting stations over a period of nine years, there would yet remain ten times as many men as would be required to fill the first increment of 500,000 men.

In the light of developments of the last two years in the European war the War College recently favored a first-line army of 1,500,000 and an army of 1,500,000 that could be in readiness in ninety days as the best military policy for the United States. Census figures indicate that the whole of such first-line army could be made up of men from 19 to 20, and that the other unmarried men from 21 to 24 years would supply a force twice as large as the proposed second-line army.

Careful Selection at First.

In picking the 500,000 men for the first call, as well as of the other increments, careful selection will be applied to bring into the service those with the fewest responsibilities. There will be a registration of all available men in the country, and from these lists the men will be chosen for the first call. It is expected that it will require about four months to complete these registration lists.

Want 20,000 Skilled Men.

It was announced at the War Department today that 20,000 mechanics and artisans were wanted at once to join the Quartermaster Enlisted Reserve Corps. Men of many trades, from blacksmiths and butchers to motorcyclists and tentmakers are wanted, and rapid promotion is promised to those who prove themselves fit. The call for these men was issued in the following form:

"Twenty thousand men, of all trades, wanted for the Quartermaster Enlisted Reserve Corps.

"The Department persons qualified to fill the following named positions will be enlisted in the Quartermaster Enlisted Reserve Corps for a period of four years, unless sooner discharged by proper authority, and promoted to the higher grades as vacancies occur and the reservists' qualifications, education, and service justified. Promotions will be rapid in the case of men of high character who show most proficiency in their particular lines. The positions are as follows:

Bakers, blacksmiths, butchers, cargaders, (pack trains,) carpenters, carpenters, (foreman,) chauffeurs, checkers, clerks, cooks, electricians and helpers, engineers, (steam,) farriers, forage masters, horseshoers, horse trainers, laborers, machinists and helpers, masons, truck and stone,) mechanics and helpers, (automobiles,) motor-car masters and assistants, motor-truck masters and assistants, motor cyclists, overseers of labor, painters, painters, (foreman,) packers, (with pack trains,) pack masters, (foreman,) pack masters, plumbers, (foreman,) saddlers, (foreman,) saddlers, stablemen, stenographers, storekeepers, teamsters, tentmakers, train masters, typewriters, wagon masters, wagon masters, (assistant,) watchmen, wheelwrights.

Recognizing that from patriotic motives many are willing to do their share to further the preparedness of their country to meet aggressions from foreign nations, Congress, on June 3, 1916, authorized the formation of the enlisted reserve corps as an auxiliary of the regular army, such reserves to be made up of men from all walks of life and skilled in various trades and businesses as indicated above.

ment for its submarine warfare, refers to Germany's espionage system in this country and the bomb plots for which German agents were held to be responsible, and declares that the ruthless disregard of Germany for American rights has forced this nation into war.

"It is with the deepest sense of responsibility of the momentous results which will follow the passage of this resolution that your committee reports it to the House with the recommendations that it be passed," says he majority report, which goes on:

"The conduct of the Imperial German Government toward this Government, its citizens, and its interests, has been so discourteous, unjust, cruel, barbarous, and so lacking in honesty and practice that it has constituted a violation of the course of conduct which should obtain between friendly nations.

The majority report follows the line of argument advanced in the President's address to Congress on Monday and is intended as a history of the efforts this nation has made to keep out of the war.

The minority report was filed by Representative Schackelford, who expressed regret that he could not follow the President in the present emergency.

"It is no dishonor for an individual or a Government to overlook injuries which it has received," says Mr. Shackelford in answering contentions that "we have been wronged and should fight to vindicate our honor."

"I cannot believe," the report concludes, "that it would now be to our interest to abandon the traditional policy which has brought us so much glory and happiness, to enter into intrigues and alliances with European countries whose jealousies keep them in constant conflict."

STORY OF DEBATE ON WAR RESOLUTION

men, women, and children sent to watery graves by German submarines.

"But the Senator from Wisconsin hears none of them," said the Mississippi Senator. "I have loved the Wisconsin Senator in a way until recently, but I have no patience with any man who stands up in the Senate at this time applauding the common enemy, who also is the enemy of the human race, and has not one word in praise of the American President or the American people.

"If the American people cannot be aroused now in patriotic fervor they are degenerate sons of noble sires. We are involved in this war now, but not by Congress—involved by the German Kaiser. I join the President in expressing no hostility against the German people themselves. I lived among them two years.

Prize Court and Torpedo.

"The Senator from Wisconsin labored to establish an identity of purpose and action in the violations of our neutral rights by Great Britain and Germany. He proved that he did not know the difference between a prize court and a torpedo. Great Britain has drowned none of our citizens.

"I am a little tired of utterances like that of the Senator from Wisconsin, denouncing the Entente Allies. He endeavors to twist the British lion's tail. Demagogues have been doing that ever since the Revolution, but it is a matter of history that most of the people of England were against the war on the Colonies.

"Which would you rather do, fight Germany now with France and Great Britain and Russia, or fight her alone later? You've got to do one or the other. I tell you that if Germany does win that fight on the Continent of Europe she will begin building and getting ready to whip us, unless the English fleet prevents it."

Referring to the Wisconsin Senator's statement that the United States had nothing to lose, no matter which side won the war, Senator Williams said:

"Let's see. Have we no honor? No regard for the future sovereignty of our country? No regard for our flag? Is sentiment rot? Is patriotism rot? Is there nothing precious except money?

"I'm getting tired of this talk that this is a Wall Street war. That's a lie. Wall Street did not sink the Lusitania, the Arabic, the Sussex and these other ships. I'm tired of lies like that, and I think it is the duty of the American Congress and people to brand them as lies."

Senator Williams said that the resolution did not propose that the United States enter the European war, but that it go into an American war to protect American rights and for the sake of honor, justice, safety, liberty, and equality. Once at war, he added, the United StSates should stay until it became assured that the forces of Hohenzollern and Hapsburg would no longer reign in Germany and Austria, and that the Turk would be forced back into Asia.

Husting Assails "Hyphenates."

Senator Husting, La Follette's Wisconsin colleague, said that while every Senator should have a mind of his own and speak on his own convictions, in times of this kind the conduct of international affairs must be in the hands of one man. He said he believed that if the question "of peace or war only" were submitted to the people, war would be voted down.

"That," he added, "is not the question here. The question is shall the people of the United States support the President and the Congress of the United States in whatever course they deem wisest and safest. I want to say that if 'that question were submitted to the people I would sustain the President and Congress overwhelmingly. I would not go on record as saying the people of my State would be disloyal, and they would be disloyal if they refused to back up the President in the course he has decided to take.

"I wish I could vote against war. It would ease my mind and conscience to vote against any war, but that question is not whether we want war. It is whether or not we are in war."

Referring to "hyphenate" activities, Senator Husting said:

"Societies and leagues have been formed to exalt everything that is German and denounce everything American. We find newspapers denouncing the President. There is nothing too infamous for them to say. It is what they talked in the shops and on the farm. Everything Germany has done, no matter how infamous, has been exalted."

Senator Hardwick of Georgia said the war resolution could not be because the American people or Congress desire war, but because it is an imperative necessity.

"We go to war not on fine spun theories," he said, "but for one cause—that peaceable American citizens engaged in legitimate business have been murdered in cold blood by agencies of an established Government.

"I deeply mistake the temper of American manhood and the mettle of American citizenship if the prayers for peace are for peace at any price. The people want peace, but not at expense of national honor or national safety."

Cummins for Unity in the Crisis.

Senator Cummins of Iowa, one of those who opposed the Armed Neutrality bill, said he desired to have a united nation, and, therefore, would vote for the resolution. The Iowa Senator said he opposed the armed neutrality measure because it gave the President war-making powers, and "would still oppose with equal earnestness at this time an effort of that kind.

"Congress, however," he continued, "is now exercising its rightful constitutional functions. When Congress has determined every loyal American will yield instant, undivided allegiance to its decree. There will be no division. And no man will be permitted to outrun me to make America strong and victorious in the struggle that is before us.

"I still believe there is another better course than a declaration of war. If I believed there was a fair opportunity to fight for that better way I would not hesitate to take time to submit my reasons for its adoption. But I know, and every man knows, that war will be declared, and I intend to give evidence of unity among the people by subordinating my judgment to that of my fellows in Congress. I want the world to know that when this Government has acted through its constitutional authorities every man and woman, too, who loves the old flag will stand by the Government, by the country."

Senator Pittman of Nevada sympathized with the mothers whose letters had been read to the Senate.

"If it were true that it would lessen their burdens," he said, "I would weigh the insults we have suffered before I voted, but I cannot conceive that they can be lessened. I would rather lose a few hundreds of men in this war now than lose millions later. We must conquer Germany or she will conquer us later."

Senator James of Kentucky predicted that German-Americans would be found loyally fighting for America. He indicted Germany for having "murdered our citizens, sunk our ships, dynamited our factories, spread spies throughout our land, and sent her warships within three miles of our borders to prey upon our commerce, while Zimmermann sought an alliance of Japan and Mexico."

"And yet," he said, "we are told we should halt and hesitate. We are not warring upon Germany, but in defense of America."

A War of Defense, Says Borah.

Announcing that he would vote for the resolution, Senator Borah of Idaho said it would not commit this country to a war of aggression, "but to a war for the defense of American rights and the American people."

"That our people might be spared participation in this war," said Senator Borah, "we drew back in every way from the contest. We did more than any other power did to keep out of this conflict, and even put aside the ordinary prudence of a nation and refused to prepare even for defense. Now, in the midst of the peril and turmoil, our unpreparedness is the greatest guarantee we could give that we wanted to be at peace with the world.

"We must announce once for all to the world that patriotism in America has not departed. More than 500 Americans have been assassinated within sight of our flag and nearing of our border. We have submitted in patience. A different policy than we have pursued is not only essential but a guarantee of peace."

Senator Borah paid a tribute to German-American citizenship and predicted that 98 per cent. of the German-Americans would be perfectly loyal.

Senator Harding of Ohio challenged the statement that the war spirit was due to press propaganda.

"In voting for this resolution I am not responding to the alleged hysteria created by subsidized or English-paid press," he said. "I think the American press is the most free and independent, the best advocate of Americanism."

Senator Harding said, however, that he was voting for the resolution in the name of world democracy, because he believed it was the right of any nation to have any form of government its people desired.

"I have doubted in the last few months," he said, "if we had that unanimity necessary to the preservation of this Republic, or had reached a stage where we were without a soul. We seemed to be a divided people. I vote for this resolution not as a war thrust upon us, but as an affront; a war that will at least put a soul into our people."

Senator Smoot made the last speech, a short prayer that God would "hasten the day when liberty will be enjoyed by all people of the earth."

As the debate ended, Senator McCumber said he would not ask for a roll call on his substitute resolution, which was voted down viva voce. Senators Hitchcock and Poindexter then demanded a roll call on final passage of the resolution, and the call began amid tense silence.

Upon announcement of the result by the Vice President, the Senate adjourned and Senators and spectators solemnly filed out of the chamber.

PRAISE FOR SPEECH IN SOUTH AMERICA

Press Commends President's Address and Expresses Sympathy with United States.

SANTIAGO, Chile, April 4.—The Diario Illustrated expresses the opinion that the United States is taking a stand in defense of democracies, which represents the true desires of the American people.

The Nacion says the American Navy will render great service in defending merchant ships from submarine attacks and will hasten the end of the war by assisting the Allies financially.

Calling the United States "the great Republic of the North," the Mercurio says:

"Whatever may be the turn of events, we shall go forward with the United States, which we know to be a great people, eminently pacific, which has defended us against the rapacity of other peoples hungry for conquest.

LIMA, Peru, April 4.—Although regarding the prospect of war between Germany and America as deplorable, the Comercio says the nations of South America should always walk hand in hand with the United States.

RIO JANEIRO, Brazil, April 4.—President Wilson's address to Congress is expressed with remarkable clarity, says A Noite, which adds:

"President Wilson has thrown the light, among other important aspects of the situation, upon the Machiavellian work of Germany in North America, a work both formidable and audacious which began even before the declaration of war. This information will be of great value to future historians, whose duty it will be to determine upon whom shall fall the unspeakable responsibility for this world conflict."

WATCHWORD FOR DEMOCRACY.

London Chronicle So Styles the President's Address to Congress.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, April 5.—The newspapers this morning take occasion to amplify their praise of the decision of President Wilson to range America on the side of the Allies in the fight against Prussianism. An editorial in The Daily Chronicle says:

"The democracies fight now uncompromised. Their hands are free to assert without reserve the claims of human freedom, and their great Russian ally fights no was then with its eyes on the same goal as they. That this has made it easier for the United States to join us is in the very nature of its democratic action, for a people like the Americans can only put out its full effort in a cause whose ideals can fully and unreservedly be squared with its own."

well founded, and that the conference of the two Emperors and high officials of the Central Empires at German Headquarters is likely to have a striking sequel which would not be unconnected with the entry of the United States into the war.

FIGHTERS BESIEGE PAGE.

Americans in British Service Anxious to Form a Unit of Their Own.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 4.—Ambassador Page was approached today by several Americans serving as officers in the British Army, who asked if it would be possible for them to be shifted to the American unit which it is proposed to organize in London when America comes into the war. All the Americans enlisted in the British Army, they said, would undoubtedly be glad to make a change to the American forces, and they asked the Ambassador if he could give an idea of what the attitude of the American and British Governments would be toward it.

The Ambassador informed them that he was sure that the British officials would be eager to make the arrangement for a shift if a desire were expressed by the embassy here or the State Department in Washington.

There are various estimates of the number of Americans serving under the British flag in France. These range from 15,000 to 25,000. A trifle under 7,500 wearing the British khaki have admitted themselves to be Americans, and there is no way of telling precisely how many others there are who have not declared themselves. Nearly all are serving in the Canadian forces, and, except for the 7,500 who have announced their American citizenship, all are down as Canadians.

Major Astor has informed the American Ambassador that no less than 500 Americans serving in the British ranks have asked to be transferred to the contemplated American unit.

As one way in which the American Government might aid the Allies in finances it was suggested to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent today that a scheme might be arranged whereby huge war loans, running into hundreds of millions of dollars, might be taken up by the American Government in bond issues, to be put on the market in America at a low rate of interest, such as 3 or 3½ per cent., the interest to be taken care of by the American Government if desired, until the war was over. Such action, it was pointed out, would give all the financial support necessary to some of the Allies that seriously fell the strain of the war. Such bond issues, it was suggested, would make the exporting of gold to America no longer necessary.

COMMONS WAIT ON CONGRESS.

Defer Official Notice of Wilson's Speech Till It Is Discussed Here.

LONDON, April 4.—Andrew Bonar Law, member of the British War Council and Government spokesman in the House of Commons, today stated in the lower House of Parliament that until President Wilson's speech had been discussed by the United States Congress the British Government was satisfied it would not be right to take official notice of it.

Mr. Bonar Law was asked by T. P. O'Connor whether the Government "proposed to respond to the universal feeling in this country that some acknowledgment should be made in the House of Commons to the great speech made by President Wilson." The Chancellor of the Exchequer replied:

"The House will understand that the Government is as anxious as any member of the House to do what is right, but what I think was an epoch-making speech, but until it is discussed in Congress we are satisfied it would not be right that official notice should be taken of it. In these circumstances any perfunctory discussion would seem to us to be undesirable."

Arthur Lynch asked whether in view of the expected entrance of the United States into the war, and in view of the Allies the Government would give instructions that the severe censorship of dispatches sent by American correspondents should be abolished. Mr. Bonar Law replied:

"Dispatches of American correspondents always have been treated with consideration, and censors will of course have regard for the new conditions which have arisen, subject, of course, to the obvious requirements of the situation."

Incidental mention of President Wilson's name in the House of Commons today by Foreign Secretary Balfour brought forth another outburst of cheering. Mr. Balfour was replying to a question whether the war aims of the Allies had been altered in any way as affecting Constantinople and Austria-Hungary.

"I think it is undesirable," he said, "to add anything to the statement of the Allies' war aims already made on Dec. 19, in the joint reply to the note of President Wilson."

Although the members had not expected to hear the President's name, it was greeted with an immediate and enthusiastic response.

SEES AID IN FOOD PROBLEMS.

Lord Devonport Thinks America's Services Invaluable to the Allies.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 4.—Prominent Englishmen continued to register their praise of President Wilson and their gratification over the impending entrance of America into the war.

Lord Devonport said to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent today:

"I welcome, as every Englishman will, the assistance of the United States in the struggle in which the British Empire and her allies are engaged. As Food Controller I appreciate to the full the immense value of their close co-operation in the great problems with which I am called upon to deal. Food supplies and ships to carry them are an essential factor of victory. In both respects the United States will render undoubtedly invaluable services."

The Right Hon. Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade in the Asquith Cabinet, said:

"By America's declaration of a state of war between herself and Germany the greatest democracies of the world are now ranged side by side against the greatest tyrannies. The virile decision of the United States to resist and subdue barbarism in its latest and worst forms has given humanity reason for unqualified hope and profoundest satisfaction."

Lord Sydenham has written THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent as follows:

"The President's great address will find an echo wherever throughout the world freedom is cherished. In clear tones he has pointed out the duty owed by Americans to the cause of national liberty, and has called on them to fight for the rights of nations, great and small. Most wisely he has sharply discriminated between the German people and their governing classes who forced the war upon Europe and conducted it with atrocious barbarity. All the Allies will warmly welcome their new brother in arms, and to us the vindication of the honor of the United States and the solemn reassertion of the principles they were created to uphold will powerfully appeal. For the first time the English-speaking peoples stand side by side in defense of their rights and those of humanity. Their relations will henceforth assume a new complexion, holding out bright promise for the future peace and progress of mankind."

William J. Locke telegraphs:

"Confident in the sacredness of our cause, Englishmen, who, like myself, know and love your great country, have trusted her and kept silent, but now that we can speak our hearts are almost too full for words. England rings with exultation over a united America's entrance into the gigantic conflict with the black powers of evil. In assurance of victory for freedom, humanity and all the principles of civilization that America and ourselves hold precious, we stretch out our hands across the seas in joyous, proud and solemn greeting to our fellow-fighters in the good fight."

AIRMEN CARRY WILSON'S WORDS INTO GERMANY

British Aviators Sprinkle Trenches with Copies of His Address Translated Into German.

LONDON, April 4.—President Wilson's address to Congress, translated into German, is being distributed liberally over the German lines by British aviators.

It is understood the same thing is being done by French aviators.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—A German translation of President Wilson's war address probably will be distributed in the German trenches on the Western front and in German cities by British and French airplanes assigned to this educational work. It is understood that the British and French embassies in Washington have cabled a suggestion to that effect to their Governments, and if the humorous feature of the matter strikes the Foreign Offices in London and in Paris as it has Washington, the idea doubtless will be carried out.

AUSTRIAN MINISTERS IN GRAFT CASE RESIGN

LONDON, April 4. — The Austrian Ministers of Justice, War, and Finance have resigned after the revelation of a grave scandal connected with army supplies, according to a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company from The Hague, which quotes German newspapers as its authority. According to the dispatch the three ministers assisted Dr. Franz, formerly Director of the Vienna Deposit Bank, to escape the consequences of having illegally sold foodstuffs to the army at exorbitant prices.

At the trial of Dr. Franz documents were produced which convinced the judge that the ministers had forged a paper which was used in the banker's behalf. They were summoned as witnesses and admitted their guilt, later resigning. The affair is said to have caused a tremendous sensation in Viennese political circles.

AUSTRIA TO PROPOSE PEACE SHORTLY

Parliament, in the name of his Government, the declarations made by the German Chancellor and the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister concerning Russia," says the Overseas News Agency (the official German news bureau).

In his address before the Reichstag on March 29 Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg recalled the former friendship between Germany and Russia and declared Germany would not attempt to overthrow the new Russian regime, adding: "The only thing we hope is that in Russia foundations may develop which will make her the strong and firm bulwark of peace."

In a recent address before the Bulgarian Parliament, which may be the declaration referred to in the Berlin despatch, Premier Radoslavoff expressed the hope that the revolution in Russia would open the way to an understanding between Russia and Bulgaria.

COPENHAGEN, April 4, (via London.)—Berlin reports say yesterday's Vorwaerts, the German Socialist organ, in its arraignment of Count von Hertzing's rectification of the peace conference overtures of Count Czernin, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, probably throws light on the intentions of Count Czernin.

It declares that it is immaterial what Italy, France, or Great Britain thinks of Count Czernin's interview, but that the sole question is what revolutionary Russia thinks of it and whether the country is ready to accept a peace compromise, "which would allow the rich harvest of the revolution to be garnered in all security."

PACIFISTS CLAIM PROMISES OF VOTES

A Number of Members of Congress Agreed to Reject War Resolution, Lochner Says.

WILL FIGHT CONSCRIPTION

Lobbying Not to Stop with Vote on War—Hurry Call for Recruits Sent to Eastern Cities.

WASHINGTON, April 4—The Emergency Peace Federation today sent to several Eastern cities a hurry call for reinforcements to assist in the effort to prevent Congress from passing the war resolution asked for by President Wilson. Desertions made the call necessary.

The pacifists and the "Pilgrims of Patriotism" continued their opposite work on Capitol Hill. Dr. David Starr Jordan led a delegation assigned to endeavor to get the views of the pacifists before the House Foreign Relations Committee. The delegation was informed that the committee was in executive session on the war resolution and could not be disturbed. The delegation waited near by for a chance to present its anti-war resolution.

Louis P. Lochner, ex-Secretary of the Ford Peace Commission and now directing the activities of the pacifists in Washington, said late in the day:

"We have spent the day lobbying in Congress; we will continue the work. If the war resolution passes we will start to work against conscription. We are dead against this whole thing and have no intention of ceasing our activities. We expect more people here within the next few days to assist us.

"We have promises from a number of Senators and Representatives to vote against the war resolution. But the information was secured in confidence, and for that reason I cannot tell you the names of the men or how many of them there are. We have no other plans now than to continue lobbying, and that you may be certain, we will do."

Few pacifists appeared on the streets with any identifying insignia beyond small pasteboard buttons, each having upon it the national shield surrounded, in black letters, with the words: "No foreign alliances." These buttons were freely distributed.

Alexander Bannwart, who had a fist fight with Senator Lodge on Monday, spent the day trying to convince his pacifist colleagues that they should stand behind President Wilson. He succeeded in arousing the ire of more than one pacifist. Bannwart, his face marked with tiny scars and his eye black as the result of his encounter in the Capitol, issued the following statement, containing the essential points of his remarks to his pacifist colleagues:

"The pacifists of the country have won a great victory. I have heard President Wilson deliver his unselfish, friendly message, which some have called a declaration of war. We are not going to have the kind of a war the pro-Allies and the militarists expected and the pacifists feared. This war will not be a backfire against democracy. Wealth will not be conscripted, and no war debt will remain for future generations to stagger under. It is a war against a Government that has run amuck.

"The President's message will give the German people the courage and the vision to overthrow their Government. With democracy in control, peace will result. It means a world nation, all parts of which will be jealous of the right of peace for all and special privilege for none, whether national or individual.

"It is a joyous privilege to enter upon such a war. It is the duty of pacifists and militarists to keep the war on the high plane President Wilson has placed it. Our only danger is that selfish interests who have urged war with hate in their hearts may prevail. Thank God, we have Wilson to thwart them."

Bannwart's colleagues scoffed at his remarks, and they especially disapproved when he said he was ready to enlist when needed. He had not signed the no-enlistment declaration, which pacifists continued to circulate, and said he would not do so.

Threats Sent to Congressmen.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Several members of Congress turned over to the Department of Justice today telegrams and letters threatening their lives for supporting the war resolution. The department's agents are seeking the senders of the threats.

DUTCH SAY OUR STEP ENDS GERMAN HOPES

Press in Holland Thinks the Situation in Berlin Will Grow Worse.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, April 4.—Commenting on the American situation and the new peace proposals the Nieuwe Rotterdamsche-Courant says:

"As far as neutrals are concerned no good can be expected. The only big neutral power has now taken sides in order to shorten the war—although it does not appear so. The Central Powers also are now busy trying to shorten the war. The peace proposal of December was the outcome of the situation on the battlefield. Bucharest had just been captured and the Central Powers could point to their military achievements. That cannot happen again. If one calls attention to the military situation the present at least looks worse for the Central Powers than in December. The Turks have just suffered several heavy defeats in Mesopotamia, and if a conference is called before the Germans can show what advantages they have gained by their retreat in the West this retreat must be recognized as a defeat. Meantime the retreat continues. The Allies are now only half an hour from St. Quentin, the evacuation of which is expected hourly."

The Handelsblad says:

"The entrance of America into the war must destroy all hopes of complete victory with booty or the changing of frontiers—should any such hope still be entertained by responsible people. We are inclined to believe that the hopes of the submarine campaign are no longer very great. Germany and Austria will be more than ever willing to talk about peace. But what leads us to hope for a shortening of the war is the entrance of America. The Republic, as one man, with President Wilson at its head, whose humanitarian and peace-loving ideals are so honestly meant—the republic which does not want a conquest of Cuba—will ever co-operate in a peace which does not want the conquered party in the dust. And it will not tolerate that a reasonable and fair peace proposal be rejected."

The Telegraaf says:

"The fact that America must begin by making an army at the moment she declares war must undoubtedly appear ridiculous to the Prussians inasmuch that England's experience has not taught them that the Anglo-Saxon does the same work in a day which the Teuton requires a week for. The possibility of American army corps on the European front also will not incline Hindenburg to laugh. American transports can go direct from San Francisco and Vancouver to Asia and reach the front through Siberia. And then, too, the entrance of America is the most cruel blow to Germany's economic life. Even if she escape complete defeat on the battlefield she is no longer able to prepare herself for the freedom of the world after the war."

De Vaderland says:

"So far as Holland is concerned, it is quite certain that her position has grown worse. In the struggle between Germany and England we lie between the hammer and the anvil, but now comes a heavier hammer, that of America. We cannot foretell the results for our country. That we shall be still more oppressed goes without saying. If America follows the same lines as England with regard to exports from America then our rations will diminish still more and our communication, already reduced to a minimum, become almost illusory. And if Germany does not abandon the struggle and commences the conflict with America, giving freer scope to the submarine campaign, the furor Teutonicus will know no bounds, and anything afloat on the Atlantic Ocean will be sunk. It will be necessary to adopt a modus vivendi, making possible for us to secure provisions. What this will be is impossible to say until after the first events, but it is certain that there are hard times in store for our Government and still great demands to be made."

AMSTERDAM, April 4, (via London.)—The Nieuws Van Dem Dag regards President Wilson's words in his address to Congress as showing that the United States will participate in the world war as vigorously as it can.

"For neutrals," says that newspaper, "it makes a great difference whether America joins fully or only partially in the war. A fresh declaration of neutrality will have to be made and America must be recognized as a full belligerent. Thus, for example, armed American merchant ships must be kept by our Government outside our territorial waters.

"The effect which America's participation will have on our shipping cannot yet be foresent. This must be left for the future to disclose, and it will, in the first place, depend on the measures Germany takes against the new enemy."

MILITARY SCHOOLS MUST AID THE ARMY

War Department Counting on 20,000 to 30,000 of Their Graduates to Drill Recruits.

IN GREAT NEED OF OFFICERS

House Debate Reveals Serious Shortage of Trained Men — Baker to Disclose Plans Today.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—A serious shortage in officers to train the army of 500,000 men asked for by the President in his war message was disclosed during a debate in the House today on the Military Academy Appropriation bill.

That the War Department is depending to a large extent upon the graduates of military schools to act as training officers was asserted by Representative Julius Kahn, ranking Republican of the Military Affairs Committee. Mr. Mann, the minority leader, said it appeared "the graduates of fresh-water military schools" must be utilized to train the emergency army.

Chairman Dent of the Military Affairs Committee admitted that he did not know where a sufficient number of officers would be obtained, but thought they would be found by the War Department. Secretary Baker, he said, would come before the committee tomorrow to reveal the plans of the department.

Mr. Kahn spoke after communicating through Representative McKenzie of Illinois, with the the War Department. The War Department, he said, estimated that 2,000 officers on the detached list, from 1,000 to 2,000 from the various branches of the army, and 20,000 to 30,000 graduates of military schools would be available for training duties.

Mr. Kahn asserted, amid applause from the floor and the galleries, that no American soldier should be sent to the European trenches prior to a year's training in this country. It would be "butchery," he said, to send untrained men abroad. He feared, he said, that it would be impossible to find enough officers to train American soldiers in the details of modern trench warfare and was apparently pessimistic over "the unpreparedness of this country for a great emergency."

Mann Has Doubts.

"Where is it intended to get men to train the army of 500,000 spoken of by the President and the added increments in the regular service and militia?" asked Mr. Mann. "We are supposed to raise an army of 500,000, and then an additional 500,000."

"I want to say very frankly," said Chairman Dent, "that I do not know at the present time where we could get a sufficient number of officers to train a half million men, but after the national defense law of last year has had the benefit of a fair trial and opportunity I think the time will come when we can get them."

Mr. Greene of Vermont, Republican member of the Military Affairs Committee, interjected that "so far as I am aware, no minority member of the committee has been taken into the confidence of the War Department in any preliminary discussion of what may be demanded in the way of legislation or given any hint or suggestion of what the policy of the department will be in the application of any law now on the books."

Chairman Dent said Secretary Baker wanted to appear before the full Military Affairs Committee tomorrow to discuss plans of the department. Representative Kahn said he had asked Mr. McKenzie, another member of the committee, to telephone to the War Department regarding its plans. When Mr. McKenzie returned to the Chamber, Mr. Kahn said:

The War Department replied that it has 2,000 men on the detached list of officers. They have 1,000 to 2,000 more who are available from the various branches of the army—commissioned officers. They have from 20,000 to 30,000 men in the various colleges of the country under military training—graduates—who they say are probably not the best material for training recruits, but they will do in an emergency. So they figure that in all we have something like 35,000 men who could be put to work training an army."

"Two years ago," replied Mr. Mann, "I urged an army of a half million trained men, one half in the regular army and one-half in the volunteer, so that we might have them trained for war—which everybody knows I have not been in favor of—men trained sufficiently at least to train other men.

"Now what is the suggestion today? As to the 20,000 more or less of men who have graduated from so-called military schools, some very good and some very poor schools, most of them have been out of college for a number of years or are engaged in some other occupation. We have no string on them; they were not educated at our expense. It is idle talk to say that you can gather that number of men together now to train recruits, and it is equally idle to say they are competent to give good training. And that is only in the war. There is probably no list of them. Here we are apparently on the verge of raising an army and nobody knows how it is to be done. Nobody has proposed a method by which it can be done so that men are trained to take care of themselves if they go into an army, much less if they go into war.

Clark Takes a Hand.

Speaker Clark left the chair and inquired how many officers were required with a company when it went into battle.

"Three officers with each company," said Mr. Tilson of Connecticut. "They need this number. If one of the commissioned officers drops out a non-commissioned officer will have to take his place."

"How are they going to detail this large number of officers to go about the country and drill soldiers? They must be in command of companies and regiments," said the Speaker.

"The Sergeants must take their place," replied Mr. Tilson.

"Is the average Sergeant fit to command a company?" asked Speaker Clark.

"I would rather not have it so," said Mr. Tilson, who served as a Second Lieutenant in the Spanish-American war and recently saw service on the Mexican border with the Connecticut guardsmen.

"Has the War Department a list of men who are fit to drill soldiers or command companies?" Speaker Clark asked Chairman Dent. "And how many officers will it take to drill the 500,000 men the President spoke about in his message?"

"My information is that the department has such a list," said Mr. Dent.

Speaker Clark said he believed Americans had a way of rising to any emergency, and added: "I have no doubt if the War Department will go to work and pick them out they can find at least ten privates in every company in the regular army fit to command a company and drill it."

"I understand the department has had the regular army officers prepare and transmit a list of those men for that very purpose," interjected Representative Schallenberger of Nebraska.

"I now say what I have said before," continued the Speaker, "that I believed 100,000 men died unnecessarily in the first year of the civil war from disease and everything of that sort because the officers did not know anything about such matters. They were good men in the ordinary discharge of the duties of life, but they did not know how to take care of the men, how to make camps or enforce sanitary regulations. Every man in the United States who is fit to command a company ought to be sorted out and put through some drill."

CHAMP CLARK'S ADVICE TO GALLERY PATRIOTS

"The Men Up There Who Applauded Had Better Go Downtown and Enlist," Says Speaker.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—"You had better go downtown and enlist," was the advice given to men in the House galleries by Speaker Clark today in rebuking them for applauding a speech by Representative Kahn of California. Mr. Kahn was saying that it was necessary to train American soldiers for at least one year before they were sent to the European trenches. The galleries applauded several times when Mr. Kahn told of the danger of the "slaughtering" of Americans if they were sent unprepared to European battlefields.

"The rules of the House forbid the people in the galleries to applaud or show dissent or assent regarding anything said on the floor," said Speaker Clark. "The men up there who applauded had better go downtown and enlist."

RETURNING AMERICANS THINK WAR'S END NEAR

Americans returning yesterday from Berlin and other German cities, on the Spanish liner Alfonso XII., said they were confident that Germany would be compelled to plead for peace before the end of the year, because the masses of the people were starving. Up to the present the lack of food has only affected the civil population, but now it has spread to the army. When the soldiers have their rations cut in half they will realize that the war is going against them, the passengers said, and this may lead to a revolt.

An American, well known in business circles, said: "The economic conditions existing now in Germany over the food supply will compel the Government to sue for peace within the next few months. The population of Hamburg, where I spent two weeks just before leaving for Spain to take the steamship for New York, is practically living on turnips. Half a pound of meat and a quarter of a pound of butter is supposed to be doled out every seven days for persons who have the money to purchase the articles, but you don't get them. Persons of all classes of society wait in line all day to purchase food. The financial and industrial conditions in Germany are bad, but the nation could carry on the war another year or more if the food supply held out.

"The German Emperor and his war party have cast their last chance on the success of the ruthless submarine program, to defeat the Allies by starvation. If this fails, which I feel sure it will, then Germany may fight on against hope for a few months more and then take the best peace terms her enemies will offer her. Some idea of the state of Hamburg may be judged from the fact that in 1913 the total exports amounted to $40,000,000, while in 1916 the total was less than $1,000."

BAR GERMAN FLAG AT CHURCH MEETING

A German flag was ripped down from among the decorations in the Washington Square Methodist Episcopal Church, in West Fourth Street, at the opening session there yesterday of the New York Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Conference voted to put up a French flag in its place. This was only one of the outbursts of patriotism that marked the first day of the gathering of Methodist clergymen. Another was the appointment of a committee of five clergymen to draw up a resolution expressing hearty approval of President Wilson's address to Congress, and urging Congress to comply with his request to declare that a state of war exists with Germany.

BERLIN FEARS OUR INFLUENCE ON RUSSIA

get away from the serious position into which his one-track policy has led him. As it is Bryan's last appeal sounds like a huge joke of history, which, in our time, seems to turn everything topsy-turvy, and does not behave at all in conformity with the thoughts of wise men.

"President Wilson is probably fully aware that the consequences of his action may be of much more serious importance to the United States than to Germany. This is absolutely the end of the Monroe Doctrine. No longer will the United States be able to refrain from entangling alliances, which was one of Washington's most cherished principles. The transformation of provincials into world citizens, the interference with European affairs, the proclamation of an imperialistic policy, which the American democracy has always fought with great tenacity—all these are facts today.

"All things in American foreign policy seem turned upside down. The effect on interior affairs will soon become visible. It seems the President's decision is for a full 100 per cent. partnership in the war with the Allies, not only so far as money is concerned, but he is also willing to stake the American fleet and the American army in the cause of the Allies, and, if we are correctly informed, he even plans universal conscription.

"One can imagine what a tremendous effect such a decision must have on the inner political life of his people. The consequences will not come into evidence until later.

Gravity Not Underestimated.

"However, we must not underestimate the consequences of America joining our enemies will have on the war. Perhaps the effect of the appearance of an American expeditionary force on the western front and of the American fleet with the Allies' fleet, which latter has not yet appeared to any advantage, may be limited, but any access of power to the ranks of the enemy is undesirable, even if not decisive. Also let us not forget that it is a nation of 100,000,000 people and the richest in the world.

"Their munition factories will not be of such great help to the Entente in the future, but their treasure, which has grown to an immeasurable size, will be even more willingly put at Entente disposal. France is waiting for this American affluence with badly concealed expectation.

"The Russian Duma Government, too, will hail the entrance of America, a sister republic, into the war with great joy. Especially to the poorer classes in Russia America is a land of promise, to which so many of her people have emigrated, and it is possible the admonition from that side to keep on fighting may seem quite unselfish to the Russian people.

"China's attitude proves that America may exert an influence in other ways also. Nevertheless the German people are of the undivided opinion that the entrance of the last world power into the camp of our enemies will come too late to enable them to realize their war aims, which are the defeat and dismemberment of the German Empire and its allied nations. What we deplore are the intensification and prolongation of the sanguinary slaughter, especially by that nation which for more than a hundred years we have lived in peace and true sympathy and the unparalleled rise of which we have watched with honest and congenial admiration.

"What seems most tragic is that mere force is now to decide what is really a matter of sentiment, a deplorable state of affairs between two great and highly civilized peoples. Posterity will shake its head, more puzzled over this event than over anything else that has happened in this time, when dementia seems running amuck.

"The German people will face the new enemy with the same virile courage and strength that have upheld it throughout this trying war."

Reventlow Glad "Mask Is Off."

BERLIN, April 4. (via London.)—"President Wilson's speech," say the Vorwärts, "will give rise to many explanations. Especially remarkable seems to be his view that the new move may help peace. The President seems also to be of the opinion that a German-American war can come to an end before it is really developed."

"The newspaper adds that Germany will fulfill her heavy task and emerge victorious from the war, and that her people will then undertake the life of a free people among free people.

Count von Reventlow, in the Deutsche Tageszeitung, says the entry of the United States in the European war as a new enemy of Germany will be of no effect, because the United States can injure Germany no more than she has done during her so-called neutrality, and maybe even less. The writer says he greets with satisfaction the fact that the mask has now been finally dropped.

Government Restricts Comment.

COPENHAGEN, April 4. (via London.)—The German newspapers up to yesterday had concentrated their attention on the peace overtures rather than on the crisis with the United States. The absence of comment on the American dispatches testified, to one familiar with German press methods, almost as plainly to a Government admonition to leave the American developments severely alone and avoid augmenting the crisis as if the correspondent actually heard the remarks of the Government representatives at the big press conference held regularly several times weekly in the Reichstag Building in Berlin.

The Tageblatt alone of yesterday afternoon's Berlin newspapers is cited in special dispatches to the Danish press as commenting on the opening of the American Congress. This newspaper takes the expected tone, which is more of regret than of wrath. It expresses no surprise at the President's utterances and warns its readers against underestimating the participation of the United States in the war. It declares, however, that the German nation is absolutely certain that this contingency cannot bring about Germany's defeat.

Scoff at "Gold-Sated Yankees."

LONDON, April 4.—Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent says President Wilson's address to Congress has been answered in the German press by a storm of abuse. He quoted the Rheinische Westfälische Zeitung as saying:

"Beyond striving for gold, the Americans have no ideal. They think everything can be acheived by gold. Their megalomania makes a grotesque impression on us Germans."

The newspaper expresses the belief that the accession of the United States to the cause of the Allies will mean only transitory addition to their strength. It declares that Germany will take up the glove thus thrown down and will wage the fight thus proclaimed against her with such energy that the "gold-sated Yankees" will be stupefied.

The article concludes by giving reasons for believing that the collapse of Germany's enemies is imminent. It says:

"Great events are pending in the west. The gray spectre of starvation stretches its claws over England. Chaos reigns in Russia. It is too late for the United States to change the coming decision."

Professor Richard Fenster of Halle University, writing to the Düsseldorf General Anzeiger, says:

"While President Wilson entangles the New World in the squabbles of the old. General Carranza works for the idea that the American States should draw round their continent a line of demarkation against the world war. * * * When the dwarf scoffs at the giant it may be assumed that he has a feeling of security, which, of all the Powers, only Japan can at the present time give him. * * * If President Wilson places himself in our path he will be blown out of the way militarily, as twice already he has been lifted from the saddle diplomatically.

Thinks We Won't Use Force.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROTTERDAM, April 4. (Dispatch to The London Daily Telegraph.)—The Vossische Zeitung buoys up the hope of its readers that there will be no military union between America and the Entente. It says:

"America only wishes to place herself symbolically on the side of the Entente. Austria-Hungary is a close ally of Germany and has taken unconditionally Germany's point of view with regard to the submarine war. Is there to be war or a declaration of a state of war with Austria? What is there to be, then? No mortal knows. This is the state of affairs with America's policy, which one knows does not ensue from the well-considered decisions of statesmanship, conscious of its fearful responsibility, but ensues from motives which work in jerks from the outside and sometimes by counterjokes from the inside."

Say Their U-Boats Will Answer.

AMSTERDAM, April 4 (via London.)—The Kosinische Volkszeitung declares that President Wilson has dropped the mask, but expresses the expectation that a majority of the Americans will support him in his last extreme step.

"President Wilson wants to take no risks," says this newspaper. "For him and his backers war is business, just as it is for the English. There is no heroism in his action. His great 'moral' conceptions are only so much froth. America has put so much money into anti-German enterprise that the Morgan munitions factories would become mortally injured if Great Britain became insolvent.

"For that reason, and for that reason only, must open war now begin against us. The final conclusion, however, is that our U-boats are now speaking, and that their work will, in the course of the history of the world, have even more importance than the decisions of the American Congress."

The Cologne Gazette says:

"President Wilson in his address to Congress had the audacity to draw a distinction between the German Government and the German people. The German people indignantly reject this artifice. All classes of Germans stand behind the Government, which, after long hesitation, resolved on unrestricted submarine war, and the German people will feel relieved that they can now treat an enemy as an enemy."

The midday edition of the Cologne Gazette of yesterday carried a leading editorial under the caption, "America Before the Decision," in which it says:

"When President Wilson replied to our proclamation of unrestricted submarine warfare with a rupture of relations the world was surprised, but his attitude since that time has been more than a surprise. Nobody, even in anti-German circles in the United States, believed that the tension between the two countries would go beyond a diplomatic rupture. It is not Germany but the United States which took the rupture as a starting point for warfare. The American people do not desire war, but probably it will believe the President if he declares that it cannot be avoided.

"We await to see whether President Wilson will plunge the American people into war in order to make free seas for Anglo-American business. If this is his end, he will never attain it. Our U-boats will continue their excellent work until the sea tyrants lose their breath and the seas become really free. The work of the U-boats will be more glorious the more enemies they have to conquer."

Vorwaerts Demands Reforms.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, April 4. (Dispatch to The London Daily Mail.)—Vorwärts yesterday published a remarkable leader pointing out that at least 70 per cent. of the German electorate are monarchists and that, therefore, "the strength of the monarchy in Germany should not be underestimated. If the monarchy now finds prudent counselors it can establish and secure itself for all the time that can be foreseen."

On the other hand, the paper says, the bulk of the population, though not anti-monarchical, is democratic and demands a parliamentary Government, or, in short, those reforms which have long since been introduced in other monarchies. The most remarkable fact about this article is that it has been allowed to appear at all. It is almost equivalent to an ultimatum to the Hohenzollerns, although, of course, without any really effective threat behind it.

FIFTH ARTICLE.

The householder in Germany does not have to go every morning to a hotel office and get his food cards for the day. He goes through a different procedure. It is much simpler, so far as obtaining the cards is concerned, but infinitely more difficult and troublesome when it comes to getting the allotted food on the cards.

In the first place, the householder or the flat dweller obtains his cards in weekly or monthly lots, and is not put to the necessity of going every morning to get his authorization for his daily bread and meat. Having food cards for a week or a month will enable the holder sometimes to purchase in quantities that he could not manage on a daily card, and so to take advantage of little bargains that may be worth while. He gains nothing extra in the way of food supply by purchasing larger quantity than for daily need, because his limit for the week or the month is what his cards call for, and if he uses that all up in two days or less it is his lookout what he shall do for the remainder of the period. He can get no more cards, and without cards he can get no more food. So it is to his interest to conserve his cards just as much as it is to the interest of the Government to have him do so.

Cards are issued to householders in Berlin at offices established by the Magistracy which is in control of the food distribution of the city. The Magistracy works in conjunction with the "Kriegsernahrungsamt," or War Food Office, which is the imperial establishment for control of food distribution throughout the empire. It is the President of this War Food Office, Dr. Batocki, who is known as the "Food Dictator" of Germany.

The head of the house obtains the necessary cards for every member of his household, servants and all. After he is once well established, and his servants are known to the authorities, he may arrange to have the cards delivered to one of them. But care is taken always to see that the cards are rightfully distributed, and that no doubling up occurs.

How Hotels Are Supplied.

The householder has need for a good many more cards than the dweller in a hotel or the person who eats regularly at restaurants. Part of the supplies necessary to the reasonable success of any meal are taken care of automatically by the hotels and restaurants, but the householder must look out for them on his own behalf. Such things as fat, or lard or whatever its substitute may be in Germany, for instance. Each person is entitled, in theory, to a certain infinitesimal allowance of fat a week, and to households that is a matter of great importance. To hotel dwellers it is nothing at all, for there is no method by which the hotel dweller could avail himself of this microscopic portion of fat, or of his similar allowance of sugar, or petroleum, or syrup, and so on.

The hotels and restaurants draw the cards of this kind for their guests and then buy the supplies covered by the cards and peddle them out again to the guests, making, according to my experience, just as much difficulty and bother about it as possible. That method probably resulted in procuring an extra allowance for some insider at the expense of the share of the innocent guest who did not know or stand up for his rights. But it was a sufficiently workable method.

Having obtained his full quota of cards of every description, the householder is prepared, so far as authorization of that kind is concerned, to purchase his food and go to it. But he is first to be registered with the authorities as a customer of the different shops at which he is to buy his supplies. You cannot just go out into the street in Berlin and patronize the first shop you find or the one which happens to strike your fancy. If that were permitted there would be constant trouble because some shops would have more food than they could sell and others not nearly enough to go around. The result would be failure of shops and general complication. The Government which goes to so seek to it that there are enough shops of the various kinds to insure this even distribution.

That is Accomplished by means of the "Kundenliste," or list of customers. If you have an apartment at No. 114 Thland Strasse, you will be registered as a customer of some particular meat dealer in that neighborhood, and also as a customer of a certain baker, a certain milk dealer, a certain grocer and so on through the whole range of your food cards. The Magistracy or food control organization will undertake to see to it that the dealers with whom you are registered shall always have enough of the food you are entitled to buy from them to take care of the wants of all the customers who are on their registered lists. The idea is good and in the main it works well. But it also provides constant and immense trouble for the customer, or mostly for his maid or other servant who takes charge of the actual purchase of the daily supplies of food.

Long Delay at Shops.

For instance: The maid gets up at 4 or 5 o'clock in the morning and starts out to lay in the daily supply. She goes first to the baker's to get the half-pound of bread per person to which the family is entitled for that day. It is a little shop on a side street with only one entrance, a narrow door capable of admitting one person at a time or of permitting one at a time to leave, but not of admitting one at the same time that one is going out. There are perhaps 150 customers on the register list of this shop, perhaps 250. All of them are actuated by the same desire for bread at the same time in the morning, and most of them are standing in line outside the shop before your maid gets there. It may be the finest day that has ever breathed o'er Eden, but most of the time in Berlin this last Winter it was about the worst weather that had ever been experienced by the German capital, and that was one of the great hardships which Germany endured in the Winter of 1916-17.

Your maid takes her turn in that line and waits as patiently as she can for the chance to get her bread. It may be snowing, or raining, or sleeting, or displaying any other of the numerous pleasing features lavished upon Berliners by their weather bureau. No difference. There the maid must stick until she gets into the shop or give up the chance of getting bread for you that day. It may take an hour or it may take two hours—all the same.

But it happens every once in a while that the demand has been greater than the baker had calculated and his supply is not sufficient to go all the way around his list of customers. So some times after the maid has stood in the rain or snow for an hour or two and is within half a dozen numbers of her turn at the counter the supply is exhausted and there is no more bread to sell. Then up goes the "Ausverkauft," or "sold out," sign, and there is nothing for her to do but go her way and come back later, when the baker shall have had opportunity to get more flour and bake more bread.

So it goes, also, with other shops. She takes her turn with the grocer and butcher, and especially if there are children in the family and she has milk to buy must she count on standing in line in the open street for anywhere from one to three hours before she gets her supply. It is no wonder that under these circumstances the wives and women relatives of Berlin householders whom you meet are always talking of the trouble they are having with their servants, and of the difficulty of keeping a good maid, despite the cheerful provisions of the German law regarding the fulfillment of a contract for service or labor.

American Women Plucky.

Of the women I met in Berlin who live in their own houses or apartments there was just one who did not discourse upon the difficulties she was having with the servant question, and that one was an American, wife of a prominent German, who made it a point of policy to talk as well as it possibly could. She frankly declared that she despised people who complained about conditions, and that it was her duty—it was all she could do to be cheerful under all circumstances and accept what came along in that spirit.

But she was one out of very many. The servant problem is acute in most households, because of the hardships that must be endured in buying the daily food, and it seemed to me that almost every day I met some friend or acquaintance who told me that his maid or cook had given notice of intention to leave because she could not longer stand the strain of that street waiting in all kinds of weather. Almost always this kind of notice was accompanied by the explanation or excuse that the maid or cook was going back into the country where her relatives lived, and where food was much more plentiful and not under such severe restrictions in distribution.

But if it worked that way for persons who had the means to employ servants, how about the poorer classes who have no servants and who, in addition to doing their own buying and preparation of food, have to work daily in mill, factory or shop for ten hours or more? Persons in such circumstances have to live under exactly the same regulations as those with plenty of money, so far as food is concerned. If it happens that there is in the family one—the mother perhaps, or a daughter—who can take charge of the table and of getting the food, while the others go to their daily tasks, they may get along fairly well. But in Berlin and the other large cities of Germany there are thousands of unattached young women—the young men are all at the front or in the army—who are working for their living and who confront this problem of obtaining food and still doing their work every day of their lives. It is especially among these young women that the doctors who have been able to make any real investigation of the results of the food privation in Germany have found the proofs of undernourishment, as manifested especially in the blood count tests.

It is frankly admitted by medical men in Germany that the necessity of going through much of this routine in order to get food every day has resulted in a marked increase of mortality among aged and infirm persons. Old people who might have gone along for several years more if they had not been obliged to undergo the hardship and exposure consequent upon the daily effort to get their food allowance have been unable to withstand the added strain, and in many cases have crumpled up and died. That difficulty was greatly increased during this last Winter by the severe and unusual cold weather that afflicted Germany and all Europe for six weeks, without interruption, from Christmas time on. There had been no such Winter weather in Berlin since the year of the war with France. It brought untold suffering to Germany and past question added materially to the number of deaths, especially among old people.

Middle Class Public Kitchens.

There is one way of avoiding this difficulty and hardship of standing in line for the daily food supply. It is a means frequently adopted by the poorer classes, but among those who are better placed it is hardly regarded as available. It is that of taking meals at the public eating houses supplied and maintained by the Government. The Government has recognized the reluctance of the middle class people to make use of the public feeding system at first operated in Berlin and other cities, by establishing what are called "mittelstandkuchen," or middle class public kitchens, at which meals somewhat better than those served in the old public kitchens are provided and at a slightly higher price.

After the establishment of these middle class public kitchens in Berlin last Winter there was a considerable increase in the numbers of those who took meals at the public eating places. The severity of the weather and the failure of potatoes had added enormously to the hardship of individual handling of the food question, and the result showed itself in the public kitchens. These kitchens are a story by themselves. But from the outline here given of what a householder must go through in order merely to get the limited supply of food which Government control in Germany now allots, it will be clear that there is very much more to the food problem of Germany than the mere scarcity of food.

TURKS STILL FLEE IN PERSIA

Russians Continue the Pursuit from Kerind Toward Khanikin.

PETROGRAD, April 4, (via London.)—Further progress by the Russians moving west from Kerind, in Persia, is announced by the War Office today. The Turks are continuing to fall back before them toward Khanikin, on the Mesopotamian border. The statement reads:

"Our detachments are continuing their pursuit of the Turks in the direction of Khanikin.

"In the western area of the Black Sea our torpedoboats sank two Turkish schooners laden with grain."

British Mine Sweeper Sunk.

LONDON, April 4.—The British Admiralty announces that a mine-sweeping vessel of an old type struck a mine on Tuesday and sank. The announcement adds that twenty-four men of the crew of the vessel are missing.

DEFEAT RUSSIANS, CROSS THE STOKHOD

Petrograd Admits That Germans Inflicted Heavy Losses in Volhynia Battle.

MUCH BOOTY CAPTURED

Sharp Fighting Reported Elsewhere Along the Eastern Front, and Also in Rumania.

PETROGRAD, April 4.—German troops have forced a crossing on the Stokhod River, in Volhynia, after pressing back the Russians, the War Office announces. Some of the Russian detachments suffered heavy losses. They had been defending munition dumps, and finding their position serious they crossed to the right bank of the Stokhod. The point where the Germans succeeded in fording the river was in the region northeast of Helenin, a town thirty-five miles northeast of Kovel. The statement follows:

After strongly bombarding our positions south of Illukst, the Germans attacked and occupied our field posts and trenches in the region south of the Poniewesch Railway line, but were expelled and driven back by a counterattack.

Last night the enemy directed a violent fire with artillery and minethrowers against our trenches in the region of the village of Novoselki, south of Krevo. At daybreak an enemy column, in strength of about a company, forced its way into our first line trenches near Novoselki, but as the outcome of a counterattack by our scouts, was dislodged and driven back.

Yesterday the enemy opened a heavy artillery fire against our munition depots on the left bank of the St. Stokhod, in the region of the river Chervitche-Helenin station and on the river passages. The fire was delivered partly with chemical shells. Simultaneously the enemy discharged thirteen gas waves from the Helenin-Berovno sector.

Under cover of the artillery fire the Germans took the offensive on the Toboly-Helenin front and pressed back our troops. Part of the Germans succeeded in crossing the Stokhod in the region northeast of Helenin. As our left flank detachments, which were defending the munition dumps, found themselves in a serious position owing to the pressure of the enemy, they crossed to the right bank of the Stokhod. Some of our detachments suffered heavy losses.

Our artillery successfully bombarded an enemy train passing through the neighborhood of Svidniki, on the Kovel-Rovno line.

Our raiding troops attacked the enemy as he was attempting to fortify his positions in the region six miles west of Rafailova. Having penetrated the barbed wire entanglements, our troops occupied three rows of trenches and bayoneted the Austrians.

On the remainder of the front rifle firing and reconnoitring operations occurred.

Rumanian Front—Several enemy reconnoitring parties attempted to approach Rumanian trenches in the region southeast of Monestar-Kachiniul, but each time were driven back by our rifle fire.

In the direction of Tultcha, in Dobrudja, Bulgarians attempted to cross the St. George branch of the Danube. They were beaten back by our fire.

On the remainder of the front there were exchanges of fire.

BERLIN, April 4, (via London.)—German forces yesterday captured, on the Middle Stokhod River, the Toboly bridgehead, held by the Russians on the western bank, according to the official announcement issued today by the German Army Headquarters Staff. Considerable booty was taken by the Germans.

BERLIN, April 3, (by Wireless to Sayville, April 4.)—Rather lively artillery fire from Russian guns and several outpost engagements along the Russian front are reported in today's Army Headquarters statement regarding operations in this war area. More than 100 Russians were taken prisoner by the Germans in two of these encounters. The statement reads:

Eastern Front: Front of Prince Leopold—Northwest of Dvinsk detachments of experienced raiders brought one officer and ninety-three men, with two machine guns, from a Russian position. Likewise, near Malyavitchi, northeast of Bogdanoy, a reconnoitring advance was completely successful. One officer and twenty-five men were taken prisoner.

Northeast of Baranovitchi several Russian companies attacked one of our field posts which, in spite of the strong artillery fire which had preceded the attack, fully maintained its position.

Lively Russian artillery fire on both side of the Zlochoff-Tarnopol railway; on the Zlota Lipa, and on the Dniester was not followed by infantry attacks.

On the Ilistritsa-Solotvinska advancing Russian raiding detachments were driven away.

Front of Archduke Joseph and Army Group of Field Marshal von Mackensen—There were no important events.

CANNOT ATTACK RIGA LINE.

Danish Officer Also Says Germans Seek to Allay Russians' Fears.

COPENHAGEN, April 4.—A "personage particularly well informed politically and militarily," who is easily recognizable as Colonel von Haeften of the General Staff, in charge of the military department of the Foreign Office, has informed the Politiken that there is no prospect of a German offensive on the Riga front. Colonel von Haeften says:

"The Spring thaw that is now setting in is enough in itself to deprive an offensive of any chance of success. Even if the Germans succeeded in taking the Russian positions, it would be impossible for them to move artillery and supplies forward for an advance on Petrograd. They would be hopelessly bogged.

"A modern offensive cannot be improvised. Months are needed for preparation, so it is extremely improbable that the German leaders will change their original plan owing to the new political situation resulting from the Russian revolution."

Colonel von Haeften also doubts whether Field Marshal von Hindenburg contemplates an offensive on the Sereth front in Rumania, but thinks he will adopt a defensive attitude on the east front generally.

The Politiken continues:

"The statements of the German General Staff, which have certain inherent probabilities, are another example of the German determination to quiet Russian apprehension in every possible way. They are issued, as is clearly evident from the tone of the various newspaper comments, with the design of not interfering by outside pressure with the growth of the peace sentiment in Russia and particularly with the spirit of disorganization.

"The belief is cherished that the Russians, if left to themselves, will inevitably continue to quarrel over internal questions, whereas the menace of a strong German offensive would weld all Russian parties together in defense of their national existence."

Packers Ordered to Reserve Meat.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 4.—Chicago packers have been ordered to hold in reserve 5,000,000 pounds of meat for the Government. Officers from the Quartermaster's Department will be detailed as purchasing officers to go direct to the producing centres. The necessary supplies will be requisitioned at the cost price plus what the Government considers a reasonable profit.

FRENCH CLOSE IN ON ST. QUENTIN

Capture Important Heights and Three Villages South of the City.

ENEMY FLEES IN DISORDER

Nivelle's Troops, in Dashing Attack, Rout Them from Well-Prepared Positions.

BRITISH STRAIGHTEN LINE

Take a Town Southwest of Marcoing After Some Hard Fighting.

LONDON, April 4.—The French and British troops are rapidly closing in on St. Quentin, their line now extending in a semicircle around the city two miles from its outskirts, from Selency, on the northwest, (held by the British,) to the neighborhood of La Folie Farm, on the southeast.

General Nivelle's troops continued to advance today over the whole front from the Somme to the Oise despite intolerable weather conditions. The Paris War Office tonight says the French captured a "very important dominating position," on which stand the villages of Grugies, on the Somme, and Urvillers and Moy, on the right bank of the Oise. These three villages were occupied.

The French dashed forward with such fury that in the neighborhood of La Folie Farm, about a mile and a half north of Urvillers, the Germans were thrown into disorder, and abandoned their lines of well fortified trenches, leaving behind their wounded and considerable material, including three 150-millimeter howitzers and several lorries belonging to the air squadrons.

The French have now reached the foot of a ridge 393 feet high, which stands just on the southern outskirts of St. Quentin. This ridge is crowned by a road running from Gauchy to Neuville St. Amans. By the capture of the position at La Folie the railroad connecting St. Quentin with the Oise at Mezières has been cut and the Germans have only one line, that to the north, on which to escape from the city.

On the west bank of the Somme French patrols during the night pressed forward as far as the outskirts of St. Quentin. On the British front west of the city the Germans made a strong counterattack during the night in an attempt to recapture the six field guns they lost yesterday. They were driven off after some sharp hand-to-hand fighting.

Further to the north the British succeeded in straightening their line between the Bapaume and Péronne highroads converging on Cambrai. The village of Metz-en-Couture was captured and fighting is now going on for possession of the Ilavrincourt wood north of the village.

The text of the French official statement issued this evening reads as follows:

During the course of the day, despite violent snow squalls and the soaked condition of the ground, our troops continued to push back the enemy along the whole front between the Somme and the Oise. They drove him from a very important dominating position marked by the villages of Grugies, Urvillers, and Moy, which were captured by our troops.

North of the Folie farm the Germans, thrown into disorder by the irresistible attack of our soldiers, precipitately abandoned three lines of trenches, which were protected by wire entanglements, leaving behind their wounded and important material. Three howitzers of 150 millimeters and several lorries of the air squadrons fell into our possession.

South of the Ailette River there has been no change. Violent artillery fighting took place in the region of Margival and Laffaux.

In the Woevre our long range guns caught under their fire enemy detachments reported in the Vigneulles railway station. An intermittent cannonade occurred on the rest of the front. In the Vosges a German airplane was brought down by the fire of our special guns.

The afternoon statement follows:

East and west of the Somme our troops continued to make progress over the whole front attacked by us yesterday. Beyond Dallon French reconnoitring parties pushed forward as far as the southwestern outskirts of St. Quentin. Northeast of Castres our troops reached a line south of Grugies. On our right the village of Moyeur-Oise was captured. Everywhere the enemy was subjected to a violent artillery fire, especially in the region of Essigny.

South of the Ailette the fighting was continued on the outskirts of Laffaux and in the village, which we penetrated in spite of violent resistance of the enemy over every yard of ground. South of Vauveny German counterattacks were broken up by our fire, which inflicted heavy losses on our opponents.

We easily repulsed two attacks on outposts, northeast of Prosnes and east of Auberive. There is nothing to report from the remainder of the front.

The text of the British statement follows:

The enemy made a determined counterattack during the night in an endeavor to recover the six guns captured Monday west of St. Quentin. The attempt completely failed after hand to hand fighting, and all six guns were brought in.

This afternoon we attacked and captured the village of Metz-en-Couture, northwest of Epehy, and took a number of prisoners. The fighting continues eastward of the village and in the neighborhood of Havrincourt wood.

Our troops successfully raided trenches this morning northeast of Noreville-St. Vaast.

There was considerable activity in the air yesterday. A number of fights occurred, in the course of which one German airplane was brought down. Five of our machines are missing.

Further reports show the total number of prisoners taken by us in the fighting Monday southeast of Arras as 8 officers and 262 other ranks. Seventeen machine guns and four trench mortars were also captured.

BERLIN, April 4, (via Wireless to Sayville.)—The German official communication issued tonight says:

From Lens to Arras yesterday the artillery duel was a lively one. West of St. Quentin and between the Somme and the Oise the French continue their violent reconnoitring attack. They have paid with sanguinary sacrifices for the ground which has been abandoned by us step by step.

Near Laffaux, on the road running from Soissons toward the northeast, French attempts at advances, which were launched after a strong fire, failed.

In and near Rheims batteries and works of fortifications and also traffic which was noticed were taken under our fire.

One hostile airplane and two captive balloons were shot down by our flyers.

The text of yesterday's statement follows:

North of Arras there was a violent artillery duel. Several British reconnoitring detachments advancing against our positions were repulsed.

Reconnoissances in force by the British and French in the district of engagement northeast of Bapaume and west of St. Quentin caused extremely heavy losses to the enemy, as evidenced by observation and the declarations of prisoners. Near Noreuil we were taking back more than 300 British as prisoners when they came under British machine gun fire, so that only sixty reached our lines.

East of the road from Coucy-le-Château to Soissons our artillery fire dispersed gatherings of troops which had been noted while in Champagne, south of Ripont, the annihilating effect of our fire frustrated an attack which was in preparation.

In air engagements the enemy lost four airplanes, of which two were shot down by First Lieutenant Baron von Richthofen.

500,000 BEFORE JULY CALLED FOR BY BRITAIN

LONDON, April 4.—General Sir William R. Robertson, Chief of the Imperial Staff at Army Headquarters, addressed a conference of trades unionists today for the purpose of explaining the Government's proposals on the question of man power.

General Robertson emphasized the fact that while the War Office was not a leech it must have more men to meet the desperate effort the enemy was now making. His speech, as officially given out, was in part as follows:

"As to the retreat from the Somme. The optimists say Germany is defeated and is therefore retreating. Both are wrong. Germany is retiring because she dare not stand up to further punishment in the positions she occupied. No one retires in war voluntarily. But she is not yet beaten.

"We must meet this desperate enemy effort and must have men. We ought not to expect to win a war such as this unless and until every man and woman in the country does a full day's work of an essential nature. * * * Our immediate needs are a half million between now and July."

AZTEC'S COMMANDER ARRIVES IN PARIS

Makes An Affidavit Which Is Transmitted to Washington—Only One of Gun Crew Missing.

PARIS, April 4.—Captain Walter O'Brien, commander of the American steamer Aztec, which was sunk by a submarine off Brest on Sunday night, and Lieutenant Gresham, who commanded the American naval squad on board the vessel, arrived in Paris this morning from Brest. Captain O'Brien and Lieutenant Gresham went at once to the American Embassy, where they made detailed reports on the sinking of the Aztec, which were immediately cabled to the State and Navy Departments at Washington.

Lieutenant Gresham wore the uniform of an American naval officer, which showed the effects of rough usage. The detachment of bluejackets remained at Brest with the civilian survivors. Captain O'Brien and Lieutenant Gresham said that they were under strict orders from the Navy Department to make no statement except through official channels. Thy were unable to learn definitely, they said, how many were lost and how many survived, as some of the ship's boats may have reached the English or remote Continental ports. After cabling their reports to Washington, Captain O'Brien and Lieutenant Gresham had luncheon at the residence of Ambassador Sharp.

Philip de Ronde, President of the Oriental Navigation Company, owner of the American freighter Aztec, received a cable dispatch yesterday from the agents in Havre giving an incomplete list of the survivors. It contained all the names, except one, of the naval gun crew on board. The missing name was that of John Eopolucci, boatswain's mate, first class, of Washington, D. C.

The message said that Lifeboat 1 was capsized as it was being lowered into the water. No. 2 boat contained Walter O'Brien, Captain of the vessel, fifteen bluejackets, and seamen, and Lieutenant William F. Gresham, U. S. N., the commander of the gun crews from the Aztec. The Captain's boat was picked up by a French patrol boat, the dispatch said, and towed into Brest. The third lifeboat was in charge of the second officer, and had eighteen survivors of the crew, while the number unaccounted for was stated to be eleven.

Norwegian Steamer Sunk by U-Boat

NEW ORLEANS, April 4.—A cablegram reporting that the Norwegian steamer Farmand has been torpedoed and sunk by a submarine, apparently in the Bay of Biscay, while en route from Havre for Lisbon, Portugal, was received here today by the steamer's agents from their representatives in Bergen, Norway. The Farmand, a vessel of 138 tons, was owned in Norway, and carried a crew of eighteen, whose fate and nationality are unknown. She left New Orleans on Jan. 17 for Havre, and left that port for Lisbon on March 15.

HEARS KAISER'S DEATH IS EXPECTED SHORTLY

British Correspondent Learns He Is Fatally Ill—Change of Government Likely.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, April 5.—The Morning Post gives prominence to a dispatch from its Washington correspondent, who cables a report given on the authority of German bankers in America, who are on most intimate terms with the German Government, that the German Emperor is fatally ill of Bright's disease. Death is expected within the next few months.

The Emperor, according to the correspondent's informant, has for some months past, been in the depths of depression. The efforts of his physicians and entourage to rally him have been unsuccessful, and the disease has so completely fastened itself upon him that recovery is impossible. The correspondent adds:

"With his death, according to the German bankers, the house of Hohenzollern will lose the throne of Germany, as the Crown Prince is known to be a moral degenerate and the German people could not accept him as their sovereign. Either Germany will become a republic or a limited constitutional monarchy, the real power being exercised by a Parliament elected by universal franchise. It is the opinion of the German bankers, knowing the conditions existing in Germany and the temperament of the German people, that unless there should be a sudden uprising, which they do not now anticipate, a constitutional monarchy rather than a republic will be the outcome."

Eat Your Fill of Good Bread

IT costs little—it is nourishing and it is palatable. No other food can well take its place and certainly your ten cents buys the best food value on the market today when it buys good bread.

The ten cent loaf of

WARD'S BREAD

is good bread—pure and clean, well tasted and very nutritious. But beyond that, it is sound economy to buy it because there is practically no waste and in comparison with other foods it "goes" farther.

The ten cent loaf of TIP-TOP or DAINTY-MAID bread keeps fresh longer than the small loaf. It is much more satisfactory in eating qualities—it slices, butters and toasts better and in every way is ideal for family service. If you start buying it today you will prove the truth of this and help solve your food problem.

And now comes the largest flour mill concern in the world, with an output of 29,750 barrels per day, to add its convincing quota of evidence as to the value of The Dictaphone.

The Pillsbury Flour Mills Company of Minneapolis in 1912 investigated the claims made for The Dictaphone. They found those claims sound and they acted immediately, discarding the wasteful shorthand system, and adopting what was obviously a better way to handle correspondence.

They now dictate to no fewer than 43 Dictaphones.

Whether the product be flour or steel or luxuries, The Dictaphone makes good. Well-known representatives of practically every trade in America are dictating the day's mail to The Dictaphone, and finding it as serviceable as their own right hand.

Daily more and more of the keenest business men of America are investigating The Dictaphone. Your inquiry will come some day. Let The Dictaphone experts on office organization have a chance to answer it now.

People on the way up

TWO MILLION of these people buy The Saturday Evening Post every week and buy it to read. The Saturday Evening Post is never given away with a set of books or other premium. Its circulation follows the flag, not the book agent.

These two million pay the full price for it. The Saturday Evening Post is never offered at a special price or in clubs with other periodicals at cut rates. It is worth all that is charged for it.

These two million are the pick of the flock—the men and women from seventeen to seventy who are growing.

In business: the grayhaired President with young brains—the all-alive executives under him—the never-say-die salesmen—the up-and-coming clerks—the get-ahead cubs.

In the law, in medicine, in journalism, in public life: the men who win cases and save lives, who fight for clean politics and a better America.

In the country: the farmer who goes to town in his automobile and the young man who goes to the State College of Agriculture.

In college: the boy who has more than the batting averages in his head, and the professor who can interest his classes in a dry-as-dust subject.

In the schools: the teachers who try to equip their scholars for America and the twentieth century, instead of the days of old Rameses.

Among women: the clear-eyed upstanding ones who think in terms of something besides cup custards and sex stories.

The Saturday Evening Post is the Dominant Publication of America, because its readers are the men and women who dominate and will dominate American life and thought.

The Saturday Evening Post's editorial policy is constantly changing, but fundamentally changeless. It offers infinite variety, but is always basically the same. Its editorials, articles and stories all tie into a consistent, constructive American policy.

Its editorials are clear, well-informed, but not noisy. In them, truth is never sacrificed to "pep," sanity to sound.

Its articles are able, interesting, progressive. They attack when criticism is warranted and serves a useful purpose, but half-baked, ill-informed muckrakers, with their backstairs scandal of corporations and individuals, are not admitted to its columns.

Its stories strike twelve, but not "sex o'clock." It has attracted the best of the older and first presented the best of the newer writers.

Cameron Mackenzie's story, The Man Who Tried to be It—a year of business life told in terms of living men—teaches business theory and practice better than a course at a school of finance.

The influence of Samuel G. Blythe's novel, The Price of Place, based on accurate inside information of political conditions, was felt at the polls.

Irvin Cobb's story, Field of Honor, brings home better than all the editorials and articles what war does to the man who goes to the trenches and the woman who stays behind.

Montague Glass' Potash and Perlmutter showed the good where too many had looked only for the bad, and helped break down race prejudice.

In every number stories like these unite with The Post's editorials and articles to portray American Life—its ideals, its struggles, its defeats and its successes in a way that has made it recognized as the dominant and representative American Publication, not only at home, but in every country abroad.

The only business that can afford to advertise is a business on the way up. The people who make advertising pay are the people on the up grade. They read

BURNING OIL SMOKES OUT THE LOWER CITY

Firemen Battle for Hours with Blaze in Water Street—One Man Mortally Hurt.

OTHERS HAVE CLOSE CALLS

Many in the Financial District Rush from Offices in Fear of a Conflagration.

One man received burns which will cause his death and others had narrow escapes yesterday afternoon in a fire which destroyed the four-story building of the New York Lubricating Oil Company, at 35 Water Street, between Broad Street and Coenties Slip, and filled the financial district and the rest of lower Manhattan with dense smoke.

David Slevin, a cooper, 35 years old, employed on the third floor, was so badly burned about the face and body that it was reported at Volunteer Hospital late last night that he had no chance to recover. Ten others who were employed in the building are all believed to have escaped, but not all had been accounted for last night. If any had failed to leave the building there was no hope of finding the bodies in the burning lake of oil which remained ablaze below the street level after the rest of the building had been ruined. The fire is said to have started from a lamp which an employe had taken into the cellar.

Within a few minutes after the fire started at 4.30 o'clock volumes of heavy black smoke from thousands of gallons of burning lubricating oils began to pour out of the windows of the building, and, clinging close to the earth, to roll along the streets in all directions. A little later people in office buildings as far north as Liberty Street were choking from the smoke and others between City Hall Park and the Battery were going from their offices to the street in the belief that, from the density of the smoke, the fire was probably on the same block with themselves.

The narrow streets leading to the block where the fire was raging were soon jammed by thousands of people. When Chief Kenlon arrived at the second alarm he ordered the fire lines extended, and, giving up all hope of saving the burning warehouse, began to concentrate his efforts on saving adjoining buildings. Several lines of hose were run up to the roofs and upper stories of nearby buildings on the other side of the street. Without hoping to put the blaze out in the oil warehouse the firemen kept playing eleven streams on it to another the flames so that they could not spread. Rivers of water were poured into the building from 4.45 until about 6.30 o'clock without making any apparent impression on the fire, which still continued to pour out smoke, which made it hard for the eye to penetrate more than 100 yards in any part of lower Manhattan and gave rise to the belief in Brooklyn that a conflagration was raging between the financial district and the waterfront.

At 6.30 o'clock the roof and most of the flooring had fallen, so that there was little to feed the blaze above the street level. With thick walls of brick confining the fire on all sides and the blazing oil and woodwork floating on water several feet deep into the basement, the fire was pronounced under control, although it was still producing a great deal of smoke. The Fire Department gave out no estimate of the damage.

RUTH LAW BACK TO ENLIST.

Will Join Army Aviation Corps After Flying in Europe.

Ruth Law, the young American flier who made the record flight from Chicago to New York last Fall and who in private life is Mrs. Charles Oliver, returned yesterday with her husband on the Spanish liner Alfonso XII, from a ten weeks' trip to England and France. While abroad she visited the aviation camp at Hendon, near London, and those at Le Bourget and Villa Coublay, near Paris. She intends to enlist in the Army Aviation Corps.

"The American machines in France," said Miss Law, "are far too heavy for use at the front, but are employed in training novices. Those used at the front by the French and English aviators are mere shells, and the airplanes for the United States Army should be constructed on the same lines."

Miss Law brought back a war dog, named Polu, which she bought from a wounded French soldier.

Another American aviator on the Alfonso XII, was Blair Thaw, brother of Lieutenant William Thaw of the French Army Flying Corps, who was accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Benjamin Thaw. Mr. Thaw, a member of the First Aviation Corps of the National Guard of New York, brought two airplanes for war duty.

ASSEMBLY VOTES FOR STATE CONSTABULARY

Democrats Bitterly Oppose Measure Creating a New Police Force, Which Now Goes to Governor.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 4.—By a vote of 81 to 60 the Assembly this afternoon passed the Mills-Wells bill creating a State constabulary force similar to that of Pennsylvania. The measure now goes to the Governor, who has already announced that he will sign it. Speaking in behalf of the bill, Majority Leader Adler declared that it would benefit every section of the State, cities, towns, and rural districts. He defended the bill from the criticism that it copied the Pennsylvania State police. Assemblyman F. A. Wells brought out the fact that the possibility of strike duty kept many men from enlisting in the National Guard. He asserted that the creation of the State police would mean that the guard would not have to serve in that capacity any more.

All of the Democrats, eleven Republicans, and both Socialists voted against the bill.

The bill calls for the organization of four troops, mounted, of forty-five men each. A Superintendent to be appointed by the Governor is to have absolute control over the force. He will receive a salary of $5,000 a year. Each trooper will get $900 a year.

B. R. T. Carries Guardsmen Free.

The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company has issued notices that it will carry free hereafter on its surface, subway and elevated lines, members of the National Guard when wearing the olive drab service uniform.

Mobilize Your Telephone

IN these days of national anxiety it is imperative that your city telephones be free to do their all-important part in keeping you in close and constant touch with the outside world.

Today the interior calls that pass between the various departments in your organization make up over half the entire burden borne by your city telephones and private switchboard operators.

Many leading New York businesses already have mobilized their city telephones by freeing them from the calls between departments.

In these establishments the Automatic Telephone system is carrying all of this interior traffic with the speed of lightning and the accuracy of a watch, at a minimum of expense and a maximum of convenience.

Your business needs the Automatic Telephone, even in normal times.

In these exciting days its necessity is more apparent than ever before.

Our New York house is especially equipped to study your interior telephone needs and meet your requirements with the utmost promptness.

FIFTY GIRLS CAUGHT IN CURTAIN OF FIRE

NINETEEN ARE IN HOSPITALS

Four of Them May Die—President of Jersey City Company Aids in Rescues.

In a one-story brick building which formed part of the plant of the Detwiller & Street Fireworks Manufacturing Company, in Jersey City, fifty young women were leaning over a long wooden table at 4:30 P. M. yesterday, rapidly pouring black gunpowder into priming caps for the Russian armies. One of the girls slid a wooden powder tray along the table, which was piled high with the black powder. That a nail in the tray happened to strike a nail in the table, causing a small spark, is the belief of the police.

Blue flames darted both ways along the entire length of the table and flared up to the ceiling, singeing the eyebrows and hair of the young girls leaning over the table before they could jump back, blistering their faces and hands and igniting their clothes. In a wild rush for the four doors of the building and the closed windows the girls tumbled over and upset powder cans and magazines, and before the first reached safety the long, low building was filled with flames and smoke. Edmund J. Bingle, President of the company; Robert Brown, manager of the plant, and Paul Koski of 454 West 125th Street, Manhattan, Munitions Inspector for the Russian Government, rushed into the building and dragged out unconscious girls with their clothes burned off from the waist up.

Half a dozen ambulances from three hospitals, and five police patrol wagons were rushed to the scene and nurses and ambulance physicians administered first aid to the hysterical and suffering women, and hurried them to the hospitals. Four are expected to die. The recovery of several others is considered doubtful, and in all nineteen of the women and one man were burned so badly that they had to be taken to the hospitals. Others who received minor burns and bruises were able to go to their homes. The four women expected to die are:

Frances Regan, 19 years old, of 144 Cornelius Avenue, Jersey City, and Julia Dahlen, 19 years old, of 1,209 Hudson Boulevard, received such serious injuries that their recovery is doubtful. Both were taken to the Jersey City Hospital. Other victims there are: Mary Pirrie, 16, of 236 Bergen Avenue; May Fleming, 20, of 574 Bramhall Avenue; Margaret Murphy, 18, of 46 Yale Avenue; Helen Dreher, 23, of 219 Jackson Avenue, and Rose Rogers, 19 of 163 Jackson Avenue; Margaret Murphy, 18, of 46 Yale Avenue. In St. Francis Hospital are: Margaret Sherry, 20, of 217 Culver Avenue; Elsie Wardell, 18, of 408 Woodlawn Avenue; V. L. Brennan, 20, of 339 Monmouth Street. In the German Hospital are: Helen Hartman, 18, of 222 Stevens Avenue; Elizabeth Vogel, 23, of 193 Clinton Avenue; Margaret Griffin, 21, of 670 Ocean Avenue; Frances MacDonald, 17, of 566 Communipaw Avenue, and Thomas Garland, 17, of 319 Woodlawn Avenue, all of Jersey City, and Catherine Schlessler, 23, of 33 East Twenty-eighth Street, Bayonne.

There was no explosion, according to persons in the building, and those cut off by other buildings from a view of the fire knew nothing of it until they heard the screams of the women. The building itself was practically undamaged. May Flemming, at the Jersey City Hospital, said:

"I worked next to the powder table, and saw one of the girls move her powder tray along it. There was a scraping sound, and then a streak of fire shot down the entire length of the table along the piles of powder. I ran out of the door."

The accident aroused much indignation among the residents of Jersey City because there had been an explosion in the fireworks plant in October, 1914, in which six persons were supposed to have been killed. The bodies of only three were found, and it was believed that the other three had been literally torn to pieces by the force of the explosion. After that accident the town authorities demanded that the company quit manufacturing dangerous articles, and, it was said, the officials of the company agreed.

The Detwiller & Street Company has been merged with the Unexcelled Manufacturing Company of New York. John S. Stanton, Vice President of the Detwiller & Street Company, had not heard of the accident when a TIMES reporter called him up last night.

"It is frightful," he said. "Mr. Bingle is the only one with authority to make a statement for the company, but as regards the question of manufacturing dangerous articles, the manufacture of the priming caps was not thought to be very dangerous in itself. We were manufacturing nothing but the caps. Of course there is always danger wherever there is gun powder."

Assembly Advances Local Option Bill

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 4.—The Hill-Wheeler bill granting local option to cities was advanced to order of final passage in the Assembly this afternoon. An amendment offered by Minority Leader Callahan, providing that localities should receive the revenues which were collected in them, was defeated by a vote of 85 to 49. It is expected that the bill will pass the lower house next Monday night.

WOMEN'S EFFORTS BOOST RECRUITING

Main Office in New York Enlists 40 Men for the Navy Out of 177 Applicants.

A determined effort to speed up recruiting for the navy was made yesterday and as a result 177 men applied at the main headquarters, 34 East Thirty-third Street. Of this number seventy-six were rejected, sixty-one accepted, and forty enlisted. The figures showed an increase over Tuesday, but they are still far below what had been expected.

The members of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Naval Reserve, which has just opened headquarters in the north corridor of the Hotel Biltmore, and a branch office at Broadway and 168th Street, made automobile tours throughout the city urging young men to enter the service. It was announced that 400 signatures had been obtained to applications. The headquarters were crowded all day and the officials detailed uniformed men to aid in the work.

The recruiting officers received a flood of offers of help yesterday. Many gave the use of automobiles and a number of physicians and dentists tendered their services free. Henry Reuterdahl, the marine painter, sent word to the recruiting headquarters that he was at work on a picture for campaign purposes.

The United States Marine Corps enlisted four men yesterday out of a dozen applicants. One was Leclair Smith of Millbrook, N. Y., who took the examination for a commission.

A slight increase in the number of enlistments was reported at the recruiting stations in Brooklyn for the army and navy. Among the recruits added to the Coast Defense Command, stationed at Sumner and Jefferson Avenues, Brooklyn, was a son of Police Inspector James E. Dillon. The Inspector accompanied him to the armory. When the boy made his application the Inspector said: "This is the best I have to offer to my country."

WAGNER INDORSED, INQUIRY ENDED

of the St. Lawrence Society at the Hotel McAlpin that evening.

"Did that information in any way affect your judgment of Senator Wagner's conduct?" asked Mr. Untermyer.

"Not in the least," said the Mayor.

"And even if you had known exactly what transpired here, that would not have affected it?"

"It would not," Mayor Mitchel replied.

"And you would still have given out that statement on March 22 even if you had known of the proceedings that took place on that day?"

"I would," said the Mayor.

"Did you notice from the morning papers the next day the construction that they had placed upon your interview of the day before?" asked Mr. Untermyer.

The Mayor said that he had seen the morning papers some time during the day and had noticed how they treated his statement.

"Having given out that statement the night before, did it occur to you that you were doing a rather serious thing?" Mr. Untermyer then asked.

"I really don't know what you mean," said the Mayor. "I consider this whole matter a very serious one."

At this point Mr. Untermyer called the Mayor's attention to the interview he made public on the next day, in which the Mayor said: "I seem to have touched the gentleman from Prussia on a tender spot." Mr. Mitchel said he had given that interview prior to reading the newspapers containing Senator Wagner's reply to the interview of the day before.

"How did you know that you had touched him in a tender spot if you had not read the morning papers?" asked Mr. Untermyer.

"From what the men who came to interview me told me," said Mayor Mitchel.

Mr. Untermyer read to the witness the headlines of THE NEW YORK TIMES Albany dispatch dealing with the Mayor's interview and Senator Wagner's answer.

"You noticed then that they construed your words as charging Senator Wagner with disloyalty?" asked Mr. Untermyer.

"I did see that," said the Mayor.

"You did also see from the morning papers the statements of Governor Whitman, Senator Brown, and other Senators with respect to your attack?"

"I think that some time during the day I saw them," the Mayor replied.

"Knowing, then, that these words of yours had been construed as a charge of disloyalty and treachery on the part of Senator Wagner to his country and his Government, did you consider that that called for a retraction of the charge?"

"No," said the Mayor.

"You did not think the part of a gentleman and a public official at the head of a great city government called upon you to make any sort of retraction?"

"No," said the Mayor. "Because what I said was true."

"Yet you have stated that you didn't intend to charge disloyalty or treason?"

"Yes."

At this point Mr. Untermyer tried to read into the record the statement of Governor Whitman, Senator Brown, and other Senators, expressing confidence in Senator Wagner and disapproval of the Mayor's statement. He did not have his way until after the Lieutenant Governor had ruled in his favor, after a spirited interchange of argument with Mr. Hughes.

After Mr. Untermyer had read the statements into the record he asked:

"Having seen the papers and having heard what was said regarding your interview, what did you mean in your statement by referring to Senator Wagner as 'the gentleman from Prussia?'"

After considerable fencing, Mayor Mitchel finally said:

"I understood that he was born in Prussia."

"You didn't mean any insinuation or reproach?" asked counsel for Senator Wagner.

"Do you mean an insinuation that he was acting for Prussia now?" parried the witness.

"Isn't it a fact that you intended to be offensive toward Senator Wagner in referring to him as the 'gentleman from Prussia?'"

"Not offensive," said the Mayor.

Mayor's Statement Analyzed.

The rest of the forenoon session was devoted to cross-examination of Mayor Mitchel on his long statement reviewing in detail the negotiations in connection with the proposed transfer of land at Rockaway Point to the United States Government for fortification purposes, which he presented in his own defense on direct examination on Tuesday. The Mayor and Mr. Untermyer got along peacefully until a point was reached where the proposed transfer of 160 acres of city land under water to the Rockaway Pacific Corporation became the subject of inquiry. Mayor Mitchel took exception when Mr. Untermyer characterized it as "turning over to private owners" the lands under water, and declared that a sale was intended.

"Did you not know that the City Charter specifically provided that lands under water in the City of New York should be inalienable?" asked Mr. Untermyer.

"I think that is too broad a statement of the law," the Mayor replied.

Mr. Untermyer read from Section 11, Title 1, of the City Charter to disprove the Mayor's contention, but the Mayor held to it. The point Mr. Untermyer wanted to develop was that, through lack of familiarity with the provisions of the Charter Mayor Mitchel had failed to give instructions to the Corporation Counsel to prepare the necessary legislation to authorize the transfer, and that this had caused several days' delay, which should not be charged up against Senator Wagner.

The first measure prepared with the end in view was afterward repudiated because it was too broad and, in the Mayor's opinion, gave too great powers to the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund, who, under its provisions, could have turned over any lands under water in Brooklyn and Queens to private owners of uplands. It was, in all except its limitation to these two boroughs, a duplicate of the Walker bill of 1916, which had the support of the Hughes administration, but was repudiated by its sponsor, Senator Walker, during that session.

"Was the Walker bill introduced as a city measure?" asked Mr. Untermyer.

"I am not sure; it may have been," said the Mayor.

Q.—You knew the introducer of the bill repudiated it? A.—I am informed that is true.

Q.—It was a vicious bill, wasn't it? A.—It was not.

Q.—And it was denounced as a grab, wasn't it? A.—I believe it was.

Q.—And its introducer repudiated paternity for it? A.—I believe he did.

Q.—And it was withdrawn? A.—I think that is so.

Q.—In 1917, on the 9th of February, there was introduced this Walker bill, made applicable to Kings and Queens, but omitting Manhattan and the Bronx? A.—That is correct.

Q.—Yes. It was precisely the same bill as the old Walker bill with the Manhattan and the Bronx stricken out? A.—I have never read it, but I think it was.

Q.—And it was introduced this time in the name of Senator Mills without his consent and in his absence? A.—That I know nothing of, of my own knowledge; I believe that was so.

Says R. A. C. Smith Wanted the Bill.

In reply to other questions Mayor Mitchel testified that the first Mills bill, kin of the Walker measure, had been sent to Albany and introduced at the request of Dock Commissioner R. A. C. Smith without prior consultation with the Mayor.

Mr. Untermyer showed from the Senate record that far from being obstructed, as the Mayor had charged, the progress of this bill in the early stages of legislative procedure had been very swift until the suspicion of some legislators had been aroused because its language was too broad. Mr. Untermyer showed from the record that Senator Brown had been one of those to find fault with the bill for that reason, and that the opposition had come from Republicans as well as from Democrats. Mayor Mitchel felt that way about the measure himself and had ordered it withdrawn. This order apparently was not obeyed, for it was discussed in the Senate days after the Mayor, according to his testimony, had given the order.

"Having found that out, you made no investigation to determine how it happened?" the Mayor was asked.

"I did inquire of the Dock Commissioner," said the Mayor. "He told me that he had neglected for two or three days to carry out that instruction."

Q.—You did not charge Senator Wagner with that, did you? A.—I do not.

Q.—And you considered that Senator Wagner's objection to the passage of that bill, if he made any objection, was entirely proper? Won't you answer, yes or no? A.—No.

Q.—You didn't want the bill pressed? You directed its withdrawal? A.—In connection with this undertaking.

Q.—And yet you say that Senator Wagner's action was not proper? A.—Yes; that is right.

Q.—And that applies to all of the members of the Senate who joined in this action, doesn't it? It was improper of all of them? A.—I think they were mistaken as to the purpose, intent, and effect of that bill.

Q.—You think they should have passed the bill that would have given the right to alienate all the lands of the City of New York in Kings County and Queens County under water, yes or no? A.—Yes.

At this point a recess until 2:30 was ordered.

Rockaway Legislation Discussed.

At the afternoon session there was more testimony regarding the progress of the various Rockaway bills in the Legislature.

Mr. Untermyer asked Mr. Mitchel if he did not regard the proposal to transfer the 160 acres of land under water at $500 an acre as a hold-up of the city in view of the fact that the Rockaway-Pacific Corporation was to charge the Federal Government $4,400 an acre. The Mayor said he did not so consider it. He did not think the land was of as much value as the uplands in the vicinity. Mr. Untermyer tried vainly to get the Mayor to admit that a proposed marginal way to be constructed along the shores of Jamaica Bay and the deepening of the channel in the bay would vastly enhance the value of the land.

"What investigation did you make as to title of this land before you undertook to cut in half what you were told was the value of this land and remit half to the Rockaway-Pacific Corporation on account of this question of easements?" Mr. Untermyer asked.

"I did what the charter lays on me as a duty, accepted advice of legal officers of the City of New York."

At this point Mr. Untermyer called for the production of a letter from Mayor Mitchel to Ted Wilcox, real estate expert for the War Department who has conducted the Rockaway negotiations.

The letter, which was dated Feb. 8, was read in evidence. It showed that the Mayor was anxious that, in return for the ceding by the city of the land wanted by the Federal Government, the Government should transfer to the city its holdings of fifty acres on Plum Island, in Jamaica Bay. This constitutes about one-half of the area of the island. The other half is owned by private realty concerns which had figured somewhat obscurely in the debates relating to the Rockaway land transactions.

Mayor Mitchel said he had not made the conveyance of this land by the Federal Government to the city a condition for ceding the land wanted for the fortification project and admitted that he had not mentioned the proposal to any of the lawmakers. The request was made of Mr. Wilcox prior to the introduction of the second Mills bill.

"Were you ever at Plum Island with Mr. Greve?" asked Mr. Untermyer. He had reference to William M. Greve, Vice President of the Rockaway Pacific Corporation and an official of the Neponsit Company, and some property in which ex-Senator William H. Reynolds is interested also. Mayor Mitchel said he could not remember ever having been there in the company of Mr. Greve. He made a similar reply to a question as to whether he had visited the place with Controller Prendergast.

"Do you know that only part of the island belongs to the United States?" asked Mr. Untermyer.

Just as the Mayor was about to answer his counsel interrupted to say that Colonel Frederick V. Abbot, who has been in attendance at the trial under a subpœna as a witness for Mayor Mitchel, had been summoned back to urgent duty by the War Department and should be called at once. He occupied the witness stand for the rest of the day.

Colonel Abbot told of his various talks with Mayor Mitchel and bore out all the Mayor testified to yesterday with regard to his urgent demands for a speedy settlement of the land question related to the fortification project. He also corroborated the Mayor's statement that not a spadeful of earth had been turned, pending such a settlement, in connection with work for permanent fortifications on the site.

"Absolutely nothing has been done," said Colonel Abbot in answer to questions from ex-Senator Harvey D. Hinman, of counsel for Mayor Mitchel. "Nothing can be done until the United States has a clear title to the land, approved by the Attorney General of the United States. That is the law."

Colonel Abbot said that the plans contemplated permanent fortifications, with some of the heaviest ordnance turned out by the Government and guns of the biggest calibre. He said that the work in connection with this project was at a standstill.

The testimony of Colonel Abbot had not been concluded when a recess was taken until 8:30 in the evening. When the Senate reconvened a little after that time an executive session was ordered at once.

TAKES ROCKAWAY LAND.

Whitman Is Ready to Turn It Over to the Government.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 4.—In a telegram Governor Whitman informed the Secretary of War this afternoon that New York State was ready to turn over to the United States the land at Rockaway Point desired as the site for a fort.

Governor Whitman received notification earlier in the day that the commission which he had appointed to take possession of the land had formally assumed control, and he informed the War Department that the State was ready to execute the deed at once.

It is expected that army engineers will at once begin work on the fortification.

SHIPBUILDING ANNOUNCEMENT

I have purchased the entire steel fabricating plant of Milliken Brothers, Inc., located on the north shore (1,800 feet water front) of Staten Island, New York. A large steel shipbuilding department, with six shipbuilding berths, will be promptly installed at this water front steel fabricating plant.

The shipbuilding program for this plant, for 1918 deliveries, will include the construction of a group of Twelve "Standardized Steamships" each of 7,500 net tons d. w. cargo capacity. Classification 100 A1 British Lloyd's or equivalent

Delivery of these "Standardized Steamships" will begin in the first quarter of 1918. Shipbuilding materials and auxiliary machinery are now being purchased for this group of "Standardized Steamships." Shipbuilding berths and necessary additional shipbuilding machinery will be promptly installed, and the shipbuilding department of this plant will be in full operation within four months from date.

Subject to prior sale, the undersigned now offers the 1918 output of this shipbuilding plant for sale to the highest bidders. Proposals from prospective ship purchasers for one or more of these "Standardized Steamships" will be received and negotiated with the understanding that any contracts closed may be transferred to the shipbuilding corporation which will shortly be organized to carry on this shipbuilding business.

THE FINANCIAL MEASURES.

The measures adopted by Congress to provide the Government with resources and credit for the purposes of the war will have consequences of so much importance in respect to the present needs and the future welfare of the country that we urge upon the committees of both houses and the officers of the Administration charged with this duty the wisdom of taking counsel with experienced bankers and men of authority in fiscal matters before they decide upon the policy to be adopted. We hope that the political prejudices or fears that have held the country's financiers somewhat at arm's length will be laid aside in the general interest. It is in no spirit of reproach, but for candid admonition, that we remind the Executive and legislative branches of the Government that the men of finance, of the great corporations, and of the railroads who have for many years been the objects of investigation, pursuit and regulation are now, of all the nation's forces, best prepared to render great and instant service in war, while the Government itself, the peculiar province of the gentlemen of politics, is in many respects the least prepared. We hope the comparison is not out of place, and that it will not be taken unkindly. We wish only to give weight to the counsel that all forces be united now for the public good.

There is need of wisdom and experience, of fertility of resource, of the broad view and of the long view. It has been proposed that a very large part of the funds needed for war shall be provided by new taxes, and that suggestion is welcomed by the country. Certainly we shall resort to taxes for much of the revenue needed, and for the entire bond interest and retirement charge. We shall not, like Germany, pay the interest on bonds out of the proceeds of new bond issues. But if in the zeal for taxation immoderate levies are authorized upon industry, enterprise will be chilled, resources impaired, production diminished, and the very sources of revenue upon which dependence is placed will be dried up. It is well to remember that the most vociferous advocates of the policy of assessing the costs of the war upon those who profit by it are precisely the persons who would have dissuaded the President from defending our rights or proclaiming the great principles set forth in that address that has stirred the souls of men the world over. War profits will and should be laid under contribution for great sums, but economic effects must be soberly considered.

Moreover, that principle of taxation rather thoughtlessly laid down by Mr. KITCHIN, who saw that the emergency taxes had been so imposed that they would for the greater part be paid north of Mason and Dixon's line must be frankly discarded. Not that the North would not willingly pay—it would. The vice of that policy at this time lies in the affront and the injustice it would put upon the people of the South, who are as loyally willing and eager to make their full contribution to the costs of a war for right, justice, and democracy as those of any other part of the country. They would indignantly resent any sectional favoritism. There will of necessity be further taxes upon incomes, and there, too, all considerations of politics and of sectionalism must be laid aside. The Government will not be well furnished forth with funds if it looks for new millions to the less than one-half of one per cent. of the population upon which the present income tax falls. Reason, justice, and sound policy demand that the exemption limit be materially lowered to include incomes in excess of $1,000 or $1,200. There are millions upon millions of such incomes, and if universal service of men is to be demanded it is right that the rule be extended to money.

Inevitably there will be large borrowing, for the needs of our own Government and for supplying credits to the Allied Governments. It would be short-sighted and foolish to think or talk of millions or hundreds of millions when it is evident that preparation must be made to provide the Government with billions. It is by large preparation that we shall best contribute to the shortening of the war. It is in this part of the Government's labors that the knowledge and advice of the country's bankers should be freely availed of, for in a financial undertaking greater than any in our experience an oversupply of wisdom is impossible. In providing for bond issues and new taxes it will be possible to make mistakes that would bring upon the country evils and disasters we ought to escape. Because of our enormous stock of gold, of our industrial resources and activity and of the great trade opportunities that will be open to us at the end of the war it has been felt that we may be spared those years of extreme prostration which have so often followed the strifes of nations. It is to be hoped that no ill-advised legislation will cheat us of this prospect. If SALMON P. CHASE, Mr. LINCOLN'S Secretary of the Treasury, had understood better the resources of credit and taxation ready to his hand the country would have been spared the monstrous evil of the greenback issues, a very Pandora's box, from which came in disastrous succession the dishonoring proposal to redeem bonds in silver, the Bland-Allison silver purchase act, and that of 1890, the dangerous attack upon the faith of the Government and the honesty of its currency, the panic of 1893, largely due to the silver craze, more than a quarter of a century of strife and of danger that cost the country billions. "The bankers in New York and other places," says Mr. BOLLES, in his "Financial History of the United States," "were not less "deeply moved than Mr. CHASE by the "events around them nor less desirous "of aiding the cause of the Union. "Among those he could have found "some who would have kept him from "making mistakes and saved his country from their consequences." The events following the war resolution passed by the Senate last night will be of a gravity and moment demanding the exercise of all possible wisdom in the marshaling of our resources. Where good counsel can be had it should be sought.

CONSULTING THE WOMEN.

A bill before the Wisconsin Legislature proposes to allow the women of the State to decide by their votes whether the majority of them do or do not want the ballot. That is a sensible plan. The growing habit of Legislatures to impose a limited suffrage upon women without giving either the women or the male voters a voice in the matter is indefensible. First ascertain by a vote of the women if the majority of them desire the privilege which enthusiastic suffragists and easy politicians are so eager to thrust upon them. Then let the male voters decide for themselves whether they want this addition to the electorate. That is the fair, orderly, and just method of procedure.

The Ohio Legislature consulted neither the women nor the men. It passed a suffrage bill. A popular referendum will be taken, so that the men at least will have their day in court. Nobody seems to think that it is of any importance to find out what the opinion of the women is. They must be "emancipated," whether they prefer their chains or not.

DEMOCRATIC GERMANY.

From the East and from the West, from Russia and the United States, the movement for the democratization of Prussia, of Germany, is gathering strength. "We are surrounded by democracies," the Frankfurter Zeitung cries, "and must make democratic our own State institutions or be "left out of the running." The "iron ring" is complete, and it is welded of democracies. Isolated, mediaeval, apart from the impulse which stirs the modern world, Germany, dragging Austria at her heels, makes her last stand, a military, feudal absolutist State, driven toward ruin by a caste and a bureaucracy, desperately confronting self-governing States that seek peace, the States to which no other peace is possible than one that secures the right of free peoples to control their destinies and live subject no longer to attack from a State directed by a military oligarchy and recognizing no international law but power.

The Russian revolution removed the one discord in the concert of European democracies. One mighty voice was not long wanting. The entrance of the United States into the war was not for its own sake, not primarily for its rights, but as a free nation adding its strength to destroy autocracy, the common enemy of free nations. As Mr. WILSON has told the world, we are not fighting the German people, but the German Government. In fighting the Hohenzollern we are fighting for the German people, fighting to liberate them from absolutism.

The German people have been made to believe that this is for them a war of self-defense. Yet early in it plain speakers like MAXIMILIAN HARDEN confessed "we willed it." A Hohenzollern war of offense has turned into a Hohenzollern war of defense. The German people have been fighting to save the Hohenzollern. What are they getting out of it? The long months of illusive victories, of real privation, have stimulated thought and discontent. The growing weakness of the Government, the rising popular dissatisfaction, are shown alike by the freedom of speech in the Reichstag and the press, by the promises of the Government to enlarge the Prussian franchise and liberalize political institutions, "after the war." The people are in no mood to wait. More and more they are coming to see that there is a reason for the "iron ring," that all the democratic world is against Germany because her Government is an anomaly and an anachronism, unworthy of an intelligent modern people. The course of democratic Russia, of the United States, cannot be explained as hypocrisy, envy, jealousy. What is the fatal principle in Germany that all the free folk are banded to destroy? The German people begin to see.

THE TIMES correspondent at The Hague learns that the influence of events in Russia and America is beginning to be felt in a manner highly disconcerting to the feudal aristocracy. People are beginning to speak openly of the necessity of democratizing the whole German system, which means clipping the wings of the Hohenzollerns.

That influence must increase with military pressure from the outside and the pressure of scarcity within. Junkerthum will not yield easily, "but it is certain," the correspondent tells us, "that the great weight of "America's influence is increasing "the conviction that if Germany is "to be saved Hohenzollernism must "go." Its departure will signal the hour of victory and peace for all democracies, for the greatest victory ever won by Germany, the victory of the German people.

Our American friends of German origin, so misunderstood for a long time in Germany, too long misrepresented by their newspapers and misunderstood in this country, of which they are loyal citizens, can do no better service to the United States and to Germany than by making clear that the hope of the German people, as of the United States, is the smashing of the German autocracy. A free Germany, taking her place with the democratic nations, now united, against the Hohenzollern incubus will be a far greater Germany than her fanatics of power without popular control or moral obligation ever dreamed.

ORGANIZING FOOD ABUNDANCE.

Every encouragement should be given to the cultivation of abandoned farms, vacant lots, and even back yards. Individually the produce will not amount to much, and collectively the total may never be known with precision. But all that is produced in that manner will be clear gain, both as respects the land utilized and the labor which makes it productive. Even women and children can thus produce what they eat, and reduce the demand upon those who produce a surplus for sale. The large producer must remain the chief reliance for export and for the domestic market alike, and respecting that chief reliance there is need of different methods from those currently suggested. The urgency of the case arises from the fact that agriculturists are a large proportion of the 40,000,000 men in Europe taken from their accustomed occupations, and that there are no other men to send to the soil now used for battlefields instead of farms. Here, too, the lure of munitions wages and the recruiting sergeant is reducing the supply of farm labor. There could not be a worse time to raise the cry that men should be sent to the land. Fortunately there is an alternative. When labor is scarce it is the very time to use labor-saving machinery. Instead of sending men to the farms, machinery should be sent in abundance never known, although the production of food in factory methods is characteristic of American agriculture. It has been customary to criticise American farmers for their small production per acre. The acre is not the American unit of agricultural production, because hitherto there has been so much land that it has been wasted as ruthlessly as the food cheap land produces. The American unit of agricultural production is the man, aided by the machine. Man for man, Americans have no need to fear comparison with any agriculturists in the world. That is the testimony which comes to us from England, and is the best reply to those who have criticised American farming. The head of the British Food Production Department is Sir ARTHUR LEE, who knows American conditions well. He married an American woman and has served England in the United States for years. When put in charge of the food service in England he expressed sentiments worthy of attention here. After expressing his intention of importing American agricultural machinery, and his regret that he could not import American farmers, he added:

> Your farmer has revolutionized farming methods. Like the American in other walks of life, he is continually on the lookout for a more efficient way in which to do things. The result is that he has the most modern agricultural implements in the world. With these and his natural bent for industry he gets the most out of the soil.

France is of the same opinion. Although imports are restricted severely through the difficulty of paying for them in depreciated exchange and of finding vessel room, exception is made for 40,000 tons of agricultural machinery with which it is designed to supplement the scanty labor supply. Both the British and French banks are extending exceptional aid to their farmers, but with restrictions such as are not appended to the aid given our farmers. Abroad, farmers are required to use the funds for seed or fertilizer or machinery. Here, the farmer whose produce is selling at the highest known price is supplied with cheap credit for discretionary use. His costs are to be reduced, although his profits are the biggest ever known. It would be better to supply the farmers with machinery than with money. The organizers could make up little circles of farmers whose land could be planted, cultivated, and harvested for them, with their assistance, as many of them could not do it for themselves. England and France are buying our tractors by thousands under the greatest difficulties. In all the United States there are only some 34,000 tractors in use.

This is the most fertile foreign hint of how to help our farmers, but experience has taught those abroad other ways not yet suggested among us. The organizers of food abundance might pay a bounty for planting, and trust the farmer to raise what he plants. Or they might promise a bounty for bushels sold. The farmer is of necessity among the world's most reckless speculators. His venture is conditioned upon the weather, over which he has no control. It would encourage a farmer whose Winter wheat is a disappointment if he were sure of a minimum price for replanting Spring wheat. Since he might withhold what he raised for an excessive price, a maximum price might also be named, at which he might be compelled to sell, or to risk commandeering, in the manner in which it is proposed to clear out the cold storage warehouses.

These are extraordinary suggestions for extraordinary times. There is no present sign that it will be possible to raise too much food. But there is a possibility that abundance of food may be held at a price which the poor cannot pay. Food traders are considering many things not thought of by eaters of food. They are fearing the reduction of the demand, through thrift and amateur production, at a time when the prices are abnormal. They are fearing that the farmers will illimitably increase their production, and wondering whether good harvest weather may not make up for the deteriorated conditions of the planting season. The traders may be left to take care of themselves. Security given the farmers against an unfortunate result of their speculation would promote abundance.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Never Was Call More Significant.

There is room, of course, for wide conjecture as to just what would have been said by President WILSON to Colonel ROOSEVELT and by Colonel ROOSEVELT to President WILSON if the fact that the President was attending a special meeting of the Cabinet when the Colonel called at the White House Tuesday afternoon had not made a talk between the two impossible at the time. None can doubt, however, that the conversation would have been worthy of men in each of whom the elements of true greatness are present in such large measure, or that each would have made clear to the other, as well as to the whole country, that at this time past differences, political and personal, can be and are forgotten by good citizens—that they can and will unite in common service to the country.

By going to the White House Colonel ROOSEVELT made public profession of patriotic devotion, and did it with characteristic emphasis. If the circumstances had not been just what they were, presumably he, who knows so well the regulations and rules by which calls on the President are governed, would have announced his desire for a meeting in time for the appointment of an hour for his reception, but he had just read the Great Message on his train coming up from the South, and it would not have been like him to let formalities stand in the way of carrying out his suddenly formed purpose to declare his approval of the President's words and his eagerness to assist with all his powers in putting them into action.

As it was, he could only leave his card. That he could do no more is to be regretted, but even that was a magnificent "gesture," as the French say, and the effect all through the country will be of the best conceivable sort. Surely when President WILSON and Colonel ROOSEVELT are in accord as to the national policies, those of us who have been patient and those of us who have been in a hurry need quarrel no more and can unite in the course on which now we are all agreed. Only the irreconcilable pacifists will stand apart in a complaining, scowling group. They are few, and, though still audible, their voices are getting husky, and in a few days only a pathetic squeak or two will be heard from them.

Germany's Food Situation.

It has long been recognized that without a detailed and correct knowledge of the situation in Germany as regards food, an essential element in judging the European situation—the probable duration and probable ending of the war—would be wanting. That knowledge has been supplied by the articles on the subject which have been written for THE TIMES by one of its representatives who took pains to study it thoroughly. Quitting Germany as he did, only when Ambassador GERARD was recalled, he has been able to tell conditions as they existed very recently, and, writing in this country under no censorship, he was free to tell what he saw and experienced without regard to the political and military consequences of his revelations.

In other words, he was both able and willing to tell the exact truth, and all of it that a single investigator in a large country could learn. That, if not the whole truth, is much of it, and quite enough to serve as a trustworthy basis for judgment.

The picture presented in these articles is not quite as black as has been painted by some of the journalists serving one or another of the allied belligerents. The articles do not reveal, that is, a population in an actual state of starvation. They do reveal one, however, that is insufficiently fed to a degree causing a steady decrease of physical strength and efficiency, and a deterioration that has already progressed to an extent highly disquieting from the German point of view. With exceptions few enough to be negligible, only the soldiers on the firing line and the workers in the rear who directly serve them now escape the depressing effects of continuous hunger.

And not only is the obtainable food inadequate as to quantity, but its quality is, as a rule, such as to excite the repulsion that is a nearly fatal obstacle to digestion and nutrition. The much-vaunted substitutes for the accustomed staples are all wretched things, mere palliatives of hunger, quieting it for the time being. But not satisfying it, while the difficulties and toils of getting the allotted ration add appreciably to the sufferings of the people.

Obviously this state of affairs cannot last forever. In no other nation probably would it be endured patiently as long as in Germany, but even there it may at any moment produce the sort of discontent that could so easily bring peace and relief to an overtried race.

Personal Appeals Suggested.

Prominent, and perhaps first, among the immediate needs of the country is that enlistment for the Navy and the Marine Corps should be accelerated. The ships that are our first line both for defense and for the offense that is the best of defenses must be manned fully and promptly if they are to be efficient in what may be the early hour of emergency, and the devices and appeals now in use, though all so good that not one of them should be abandoned, evidently should be supplemented by others. The recruiting for these branches of military service is in energetic progress, but it is too slow.

The remedy, or at least a remedy, would be for more people to engage in the task of solicitation and exhortation than those who can devote themselves more or less wholly to it. Almost everybody knows one or more young men to whom could be addressed personal suggestions in regard to the navy as offering a "career" well worthy of consideration, quite apart from the opportunity it provides for the display of patriotism at this time.

The material side of the subject should not be overemphasized, but neither should it be neglected, and no young man should be allowed to retain the delusion that to enter the navy is to make a desperate sacrifice of his future. He might easily do worse ashore in civil life as regards both conditions of work and remuneration for it. Indeed there are few better places than the navy in which to acquire proficiency in any one of a dozen skilled trades—proficiency that later will be as useful in peace as it will be now in war.

MEXICO AND GERMANY.

General Carranza and His Advisers Realize Dangers of an Alliance.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There is no doubt that a very strong pressure is being brought to bear upon the de facto Government of Mexico by both the German agents or spies who have of late made the City of Mexico their headquarters and a certain pro-German element composed principally of military leaders in the army supporting General Carranza, men altogether ignorant about the past, present, and future.

This group of men is not supported by the country at large, but merely by the armed men under their immediate orders. There is no doubt that General Carranza and his advisers realize the danger and undesirability of entering into an alliance with Germany and are trying hard to keep away from it.

Public opinion in Mexico in regard to the European war is divided; there are as many pro-Allies as pro-Germans. The educated classes, the broad-minded Mexicans, are pro-Allies, of course, while the military element sympathize with Germany, in the hope, I suppose, that should civilization be overturned by Prussian militarism they would be amply "rewarded" by the almighty Kaiser, who would give back to Mexico the territory we lost in the war with the United States in 1847. Mexico should, of course, thoroughly rely on any treaty entered into with the Germans, who have so far proved to be "absolutely reliable" in the matter of upholding their obligations. Belgium could furnish those Mexican dreamers sufficient proof to substantiate this statement.

I wish to point out distinctly the difference between certain group of irresponsible and narrow-minded individuals of the military element of Mexico and the Mexican people. The latter realize that it is to the best interests of the country to keep away from all Geman propaganda or influence of every sort and description, and to be on the best of friendly terms with the United States. Mexico lost territory in 1847 through the fault of her rulers at that time, and it would be most unwise to try to get it back; her desire, legitimate as it is, should not go beyond holding what she now has at any cost. Past errors and offenses against our nationality by the present Wilson Administration should be overlooked, and Mexico should help in every possible way toward the early termination of this titanic struggle between civilization and scientific barbarism.

VERSALIO GARCIA.

Marshal MacMahon.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your editorial article of March 18 you stated that Marshal MacMahon had too much sympathy for the Comte de Chambord, and that Gambetta had saved the French Republic.

As a friend of the MacMahon family I would like to ask your permission to clear up the false impression which your comment may have made. Marshal MacMahon was a man of honor to the tips of his fingers, and he would under no circumstances have acted the part of a felon and committed perjury. I am now an American by marriage, but my first husband was a French Captain on the staff of the Marshal. Moreover, I have almost lived "en famille" with the MacMahons, so I am in a position to know what his feelings were on the subject in question. My husband was present when the Marshal received the Ambassador of the Royalist Party, who demanded that the gates of Paris be opened to King Henry V., who was in the vicinity. The quick retort of MacMahon was: "If Monseigneur comes to the gates of Paris I shall be compelled to turn on him the cannons of the fort Mont Valerien!" This reply is well known, and, indeed, has been the occasion of many reproaches which the Royalist Party made to him. He was a Royalist at heart, and so was his wife, nee Duchesse de Castries, but though the friends of Gambetta have emphatically maintained that he saved the republic, he could not have done it without MacMahon's consent. The French Army was then almost entirely reactionary and would have backed its illustrious and beloved chief with enthusiasm. This was known to the Royalists.

As for the Comte de Chambord, whom I knew personally, he was a man of much intellect, and he had a vast knowledge. The unscrupulous politicians made people believe that he was a man such as you described in your editorial, because he, too, was, above all, a man of honor and disregarded political expediency when it conflicted with his lofty principles. He could not bear to see the three-colors under which his granduncle and his grandaunt, namely, Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette, were beheaded, and with them several thousands of faithful subjects. Like all his partisans, he rather preferred to renounce the crown of France than to be tortured all his life by the sight of the flag which had been saturated with his own blood. He wanted the white flag or no throne. Mrs. CHARLOTTE SPRINGER,

MRS. HOWE'S DAUGHTER

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As the daughter of Julia Ward Howe I thank you for placing the "Battle-Hymn of the Republic" on the editorial page of your paper on this great day, when our country stands once more revealed to the world as the champion of liberty. In this way I feel that my mother has had her part in the triumph of the cause for which your paper has fought so valiantly all these long and weary months. It would seem fitting that the "Battle-Hymn" should be sung in our churches next Sunday.

"He has sounded forth the trumpet that shall never call retreat!" These words have never had so great a significance as they have today.

Who hears that trumpet call and does not leap to answer it is no patriot. This world crisis is the crucial moment in our history. Democracy is on trial for its life, Liberty is at stake, Civilization itself is menaced.

MAUD HOWE ELLIOTT.

New York, April 3, 1917.

An Attempt to Divide the Nation.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I know that a great number of patriotic people throughout the Northwest will agree with me when I express wrath at the methods used in the advertising campaign of the Emergency Peace Federation as conducted in this part of the country.

Not merely do we repudiate the ordinary pacifist arguments as advanced, but we consider insulting the attempts in these paid advertisements to set the West against the East, and to get us to save the peace at any price propaganda by dividing the nation along sectional lines.

It awakens fury, mingled with contempt, to read, "We of the East appeal to you [of the West] to save the country from war. * * * You of the West do not realize how we are being stampeded into war. * * * The voice of the West can prevent war." As if, forsooth, Americanism and a sense of national honor became less keen when a man quitted the Hudson and went to dwell by the Mississippi!

Of all the blunders committed by the pacifists and their pro-German overlords none has seemed more grievous than this—to attempt, in a national crisis, to array section against section, and to display America to the world as helpless in the face of a great foreign peril simply because she is miserably divided. WILLIAM STEARNS DAVIS.

Justice for Germans Here.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

At one of the prominent golf clubs in the metropolitan district all employes of German extraction were recently summarily discharged, apparently for no reason save for the blood that was in their veins. I understand that the same course has been pursued elsewhere.

Such a procedure seems to me a grave error of judgment. I do not know how loyal the men of German blood in this country feel, but I have no doubt that, with very few exceptions, they will be loyal in their acts. If any German does start anything, then summary treatment of the wrongdoer is sure to follow, and it ought to follow. But we should not begin by punishing any man just because he is of the Teutonic race.

As my esteemed friend, the Rev. Mr. Lacey, pointed out in these columns, and as the President implies in his splendid address, the task of the Allies, of whom, thank God, we are at last one, is to destroy the Prussian State. That is the evil menace to civilization, and that power must be wiped off the fair face of the earth. To reach that end it is necessary to wage war on Germany, but we do not desire to exterminate the German race, or bring to them any suffering other than military activity requires. The discharge of inoffensive employes does not further our military aims, and, intensely pro-Ally as I have always been, I consider such a course as a moral injustice.

L. W. BATTEN.

Substitute War Workers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I rectify certain recent newspaper misunderstandings concerning our newly established "war substitute department"?

The new department has been organized merely to advise and assist various downtown corporations which expect to be under the necessity, owing to lack of suitable male assistance, of employing women to handle temporarily the work of their offices during the war.

The new department proposes merely to advise corporations which expect to fill the places of male office employes during the period of their enlistment, so that these positions may be properly conducted until the men return.

The National Surety Company has not dismissed any of its male office employes in connection with its war preparations, nor does it intend to, nor to suggest that other corporations do so. JOEL RATHBONE,

"All for America!"

The Frenchman says, "Vive la France!" the German says, "Deutschland ueber Alles!" The Italian says, "Viva l'Italia!" The Englishman sings, "God Save the King!" The American says—nothing:

May I suggest: "All for America!" It has a double meaning. We are all for America. It also means that everything we do is for America. The slogan is as good for peace times as it is for war.

American Aviators Might Help.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is it not at least possible that President Wilson's message will be censored in Germany and delivered to the soldiers and to the people in an incomplete or more or less falsified way by the Imperial Government?

If that should be the case, would it not be a magnificent work for the American aviators in France to drop in quantities upon German towns copies of the message translated into German? HENRI PIERRE ROCHE.

"God Is Marching On."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your printing "The Battle-Hymn of the Republic" this morning was a most appropriate and inspiring act. Surely God is marching on—always has been. We have come too far down the long, long road of man's mental and spiritual evolution for anything like the Prussian phantasmagoria to be translated into abiding reality.

COLUMBIA AWAKENED.

Shed is the robe of tolerance, dark-stained with Teuton mire;
Long has she sought in vain to stem
the tide of blood and fire;
But now she stands with naked blade,
and lifts her shining shield,
Sheathed in the armor she has worn on many a stricken field.

Shame on the puling pacifist, to coward close allied,
Who pleads that alien gold can salve
a nation's wounded pride;
Who clamps upon a shrinking ear a weak and palsied hand
To mute the trumpet note of war which echoes through the land.

Unhooded now, to soar his pitch, aloft
the eagle springs,
And distant battlefields shall hear the thunder of his wings.
Across three thousand miles of sea
his angry gaze is set,
And bloody beak and claws shall pay

"Vive l'Amerique" Cried a Few of the Throng of Thousands—Minister Reaches Berne.

BERNE, April 3, (via Paris, April 4.)—Brand Whitlock, American Minister to Belgium, reached Berne at 6 o'clock this evening looking worn and weary. He admitted feeling extremely nervous and fatigued after the tremendous strain under which he has been working, which has been especially hard during the last few weeks. Mr. Whitlock was accompanied from Zürich to Berne by Pleasant A. Stovall, American Minister to Switzerland, who with the legation attaches, went part of the way to the frontier to meet him.

The Swiss Government sent three high officers to Schaffhausen to meet the Americans and accompany them to Zurich. From Brussels to the frontier the Whitlock party was escorted by Baron von Falkenhausen, an official especially delegated by Governor General von Bissing. The party left Brussels on Monday night on a special train.

In addition to sixty Americans, composing the legation staff, consular agents and all but five of the Belgian Relief Commission officials, Mr. Whitlock traveled with the Chinese Chargé d'Affaires from Brussels with his staff and their families.

Mr. Whitlock described his departure from Brussels as extremely touching. The Belgians, who, since the breach of relations between the United States and Germany, have been pathetically anxious lest the departure of the Americans might mean starvation for them, gathered by thousands at the Gare du Nord to say farewell.

It was feared that there would be some demonstration which would bring down the anger of the German authorities and cause some reprisal on the Belgians, but the latter, realizing this themselves, remained almost entirely silent, although many wept.

As the train pulled out of the station an occasional "Vive l'Amerique!" broke the quiet, but the majority stood with bared heads and contented themselves with waving hats and handkerchiefs.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, March 5.—A Zurich dispatch to The Daily News says that Minister Whitlock stated that he had had a pleasant journey and the Germans had shown him every courtesy.

A member of the party explained that the Minister delayed his departure until he obtained permission for all the members of the relief commission to accompany him, which was eventually accorded. General Bissing visited the Minister and bade him farewell.

RAILWAYS ONE FOR DEFENSE

Fairfax Harrison Explains Unity of System Under Government Plans.

In a statement issued yesterday Fairfax Harrison, President of the Southern Railway and General Chairman of the Special Committee on National Defense of the American Railway Association, said:

"The railroads of the United States, acting through the American Railway Association, have arranged to put at the service of the Government and to give preferential use of all facilities which may be needed for national defense. For some time past committees of railroad officers, in co-operation with the office of the Quartermaster General of the Army, have been making plans to promote in case of war effective use of the country's transportation facilities. These plans have now been completed.

"The plan of operation worked out here is in distinct contrast to that adopted in England at the outset of the war. There the Government immediately assumed responsibility for operation of the railroads and exercised it's authority to that end through a committee composed of the heads of the principal lines. The Government guaranteed that net earnings of the companies would continue to be what they had been before the war started.

"In this country the plan is that the Government shall advise the railroads what service it requires, and the responsibility will be upon the railroad managers to provide that service. When working to that end the railroads of the country will be operated practically as one system.

"The plan places responsibility upon experienced railroad officers for producing results, and the Government's only function in this connection is to determine what its requirements are. It is the belief of railroad companies that this will not only work for efficiency of service, but for economy in operation as well.

"The above plan of co-operation between the Government and the railroads is most desirable, and the latter are keenly appreciative of this opportunity to demonstrate to the country at large the value in time of war of railroads with elastic management.

"It is believed that the transportation companies will be able to afford to the Government expeditiously all the service it may require, without substantial interference with the commercial business of the country. Government business will, of course, receive preferential movement; but it is not anticipated that ordinary traffic will experience abnormal delays."

MEATLESS DAY IN BRITAIN.

Controller Also Regulates Allowance of Other Foods.

LONDON, April 4.—Baron Devonport, the British food controller, has ordered that, beginning April 15, in hotels, restaurants, boarding houses and clubs there shall be one meatless day weekly. In London the day will be Tuesday. Elsewhere in the United Kingdom it will be Wednesday.

The Controller has also ordered that no potatoes or food containing potatoes shall be allowed, except on meatless days and on Friday.

The order imposes restrictions on the quantities of meat, sugar and bread at meals served in hotels, restaurants, boarding houses and clubs. The scale for meat is, for breakfast, two ounces; luncheon, five ounces, and dinner, five ounces. The bread restrictions call for two ounces at all these meals.

Baron Devonport, in explaining the order, said he expected it to result in a saving of 65 per cent. of the meat now consumed, 55 per cent. of bread and 65 per cent. of sugar. He said he had originally intended to order two meatless days, but that he feared this would lead to an increase in bread consumption.

LABOR UNREST IN HAMBURG.

Shipbuilders Demand a Third More in Wages.

COPENHAGEN, April 4, (via London.)—The Berliner Tageblatt says that labor difficulties have broken out in the Vulcan Shipbuilding Works in Hamburg.

The workmen demand a one-third increase in their wages. Most of Germany's great ocean liners have been built at the Vulcan Works.

Labor difficulties and strikes have been reported from various parts of Germany in the last few months. Trouble of a serious nature in Hamburg was reported from various sources following the Russian revolution. These reports were substantiated by statements of Socialist Deputies in the Reichstag referring to "the deplorable events in Hamburg and Bremen."

A strike occurred in February in the Krupp Works at Essen, the heart of Germany's munition and artillery industry. More recently strikes have been reported among the munition workers in Dusseldorf, and among the coal miners at Penzburg. These strikes, it was said, were caused by the food scarcity, which was also credited with being responsible for serious riots in Berlin and other big German cities.

GERMAN INTRIGUES A MEXICAN BUGABOO

RUIN IN TEUTONIC ALLIANCE

Officials Realize Kaiser Must Defeat Allies and America to Redeem Promises.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, April 4.—While the entire border is alarmed about the threatened German attempt to invade the United States from the Mexican Republic, and is pleading for an immediate invasion of that republic, in order to forestall any possibility of trouble, to a NEW YORK TIMES correspondent, who has had the opportunity to know the official sentiment of the present Mexican Government, it seems as if there was an unknown purpose behind these alarming rumors.

The average rumor is seemingly based upon the supposition that the present Government of Mexico is in the hands of a group of uneducated men, who are all antagonistic to the United States. It must be admitted that the present administration is composed of men who have triumphed after several years of revolution, in which they have been aided by the United States, and that the majority of these men in power are men who have lived in the United States, and who are thoroughly familiar with the American people, their spirit, and resources.

Carranza has been in the United States several times. During the Madero revolution he was in Washington and he has also stayed in San Antonio. Ignacio Bonillas, present ambassador to Washington, has lived in the United States for about twenty-five years and is a graduate of Boston Tech. Luis Cabrera is well known in Washington and New York, Rafael Zubaran was in Washington as special agent for the Carranza revolution, and Roberto Pesquiera, who is a member of Mexico's new Congress, is also well known in New York and has practically lived most of his life along the border of Arizona. Alberto Panie, head of the railways of Mexico, is well known in New York, Samuel Belden is a well known lawyer of San Antonio, and Eliseo Arredondo is ex-ambassador in Washington. Juan Sanches Ascona, special agent to France, who is now a member of the Mexican Senate, firmly believes in the ultimate triumph of the allied powers.

Foresee Ruin in Step.

It is folly to suppose that these men who are so well posted upon American conditions would not use their influence to prevent Mexico from taking a step which would mean ruin. Then the fact that Carranza's daughters were educated in St. Louis and that his nephews were at the Rensselaer Polytechnic at Troy, where the names of Salinas and Martinez Carranza are well known and where the son of Jesus Carranza, brother of Venustiano, is now studying, show that there is not an anti-American feeling among those in power, although naturally there is a pro-Mexican spirit.

While the reports of the Department of the South show that for some time the number of Germans crossing at Brownsville and Laredo has been normal, as almost one-half have returned to American soil, yet there is a reason for the movement of Germans who, fearing that they might be placed in concentration camps, attempt to leave the United States. Where can they go? Surely not to Canada. Mexico is about the only country which they can reach.

Knowing that the present spread of the revolution in the northern part of Mexico is and has been due to the shortage of ammunition and that each shipment of ammunition as it is received is hurried to the northern State of Chihuahua and that the Government troops have been practically withdrawn from the State of Morelos, owing to that shortage, it is impossible to believe that even though ten thousand Germans crossed into Mexico it would make a difference as they would not have a cartridge apiece. This deterrent does not take into consideration the opposition of the Government.

The new ammunition works recently purchased cannot be put in shape to turn out ammunition for several months, and although there is a smokeless powder plant included in this purchase it cannot turn out an ounce of powder for some time.

It has been suggested that Germany might send ammunition by a submarine of the Deutschland type. The impracticability of that idea is shown by a slight calculation as to the weight of ammunition which would be needed, and the fact that our ships in Mexican waters would be able to prevent the arrival of troops. Moreover, the first overt act would mean the prompt seizure of Tampico, Vera Cruz, and other ports, with the prompt dispatching of an army.

It has been my privilege as correspondent of THE TIMES to talk with many of the officials of the present Government about this matter, and while they have declined to talk for publication yet I feel that I am not betraying a confidence when I say that in answer to my questions they all countered with this question: What could Mexico gain by going against the United States? They say Germany would have not only to win this war but then be strong enough to conquer the United States to be in a position to dispose of American territory.

Want No European Alliance.

Carranza, Obregon, Aguilar, and others have stated to me that Mexico did not want an alliance with Europe, as Mexico had one sorry experience, referring to the

RUSSIA PROCLAIMS RELIGIOUS FREEDOM

WOMEN TO HAVE FRANCHISE

Premier Says They Will Be Allowed to Vote in Election for Constituent Assembly.

PETROGRAD, April 4.—The Provisional Government today repealed all laws actually in force limiting the rights of Russian citizens regarding creeds and religions.

LONDON, April 4.—Women will be allowed to vote in the elections to the Constituent Assembly in Russia, says Reuter's Petrograd correspondent. Prince Lvoff, Premier in the Provisional Government, has so informed a deputation of women who waited upon him.

The news that the Russian Provisional Government had repealed all laws limiting the religious rights of citizens was regarded in New York last night by authorities on Russian affairs as one of the most important developments of the revolution. Dr. Avram Coralnik, who has been in New York since last October as the representative of the Birshevia Vedomosti, an influential publication at Petrograd, and who starts on his return trip to Russia via Japan today, said that these discriminatory measures were largely responsible for the rise to power of the notorious Rasputin and the fall of the Czar and the house of Romanoff.

Dr. Coralnik told a remarkable story of the practices of the Khlysty, the religious sect to which Rasputin and the members of the royal household belonged, and he asserted that the tyranny of the "peasant monk," as Rasputin was known, presented only one phase of the complex religious situation that had grown up through decades of bigotry and oppression.

"Although, as is well known all over the world," said Dr. Coralnik, "the Jews were the most persecuted people in Russia, they were not the only ones to suffer. The dominant church in Russia before the advent of the republic was the Greek Orthodox Church. This church discriminated, bitterly and brutally also, against the Poles, who are Roman Catholics; the Mohammedans, who form a great part of the population in Kazan, in the Crimea, in the Caucasus, Khiba, and in fact all of Central Asia; the Stunda, which is a sect somewhat like the Baptists; the Molokans, the Doukhobors, and others too numerous to mention.

"But even the dominant church was not particularly happy under the rule of Rasputin and through him of the Khlysty. This sect recognizes no law in the relation of the sexes, and believes that sin expiates sin. It may be hard in the United States to understand this kind of religion, but it exists, and it gave Russia Rasputin.

"About ten years ago a movement was started among some of the clergy for a separation of the Church and the State, and a great many intellectuals, like Professor Bulgakov, worked to accomplish it. Bulgakov, a clergyman and a prominent member of the Duma, announced that Russia had been brought to the verge of ruin by the close connection between the Czar and the priests, and there could be no hope of averting disaster unless there was a separation.

"It looks now as if the new Government is going to institute decisive reforms in the religious life of Russia, not only to abolish restrictions on creeds and faiths, not only to cease oppressing the great masses of sectarians among the Jews, but to pave the way for the final separation of Church and State, which is the only means of elevating the religious spirit of Russia, which has been so depraved by centuries of politics in Russia.

"The restrictions and ordinances against the Jews would fill libraries, although the fundamental laws themselves were not especially oppressive. The old Governments did what they could to make the lives of the Jews impossible, by provisional restrictions, special laws, so-called interpretations of the Senate, and by local enactments for which the Governors of the provinces were solely responsible. The policy of Russia up to the time of Alexander III. was to assimilate and Russify the Jews; but with the coming of Alexander III., and especially in the time of Nicholas II., the governmental policy changed radically. They wanted not to assimilate the Jews, but to exterminate them, or to drive them out of the country. This policy was last expressed in the famous words of Plehva, who said: 'We want to exterminate one-third of the Jews by every means possible; to get another third out of the country, and to convert the last third into Christians.'

"The most terrible thing in Russia in the last twenty years was that the Government tried and partly succeeded in sowing hatred for the Jews among the Russian people, who are naturally tolerant and broad. The man on the street came finally to believe that the Jew, whatever his position, was an outlaw and an outcast, and not protected by law.

"There is now hope that not only will the Jews of Russia become free, but that they will be permitted to assist in the development of their country, and this is especially important because of the relations between Russia and the great trade nations like England and the United States."

SEES ZIONISM'S END IN RUSSIAN REVOLT

Jewish Problem Solved, "Freedom Is the Messiah," Says Rabbi Philipson.

The Russian revolution solves the Jewish question and practically extinguishes the Zionist movement, according to Rabbi David Philipson of Cincinnati, an address by whom on the subject is printed in the current issue of the American Israelite. Dr. Philipson said in part:

"The Jewish problem in these days has been chiefly a Russo-Jewish problem. The unspeakable persecutions of the Jew in Russia, the terrible massacres and pogroms started and fomented by the bureaucracy which has now toppled to its fall, made the Jewish problem acute in all the world. The exodus of millions of Russian Jews to the United States and the western countries of Europe since 1881, then the systematic massacring of the Jews began in Russia, brought the matter closely home to all the friends of freedom in all the world.

"Many despaired and threw up their hands. But there have been those of us who throughout all these trying years of anti-Jewish excesses in Russia and anti-Semitism elsewhere, have not permitted ourselves to be deflected from our faith that the better and higher forces must in the end gain the victory.

"Freedom is the Messiah. The messianic age is dawning for our brethren in Russia, even as it dawned years ago for the Jews in western Europe and notably in the United States.

"The obtaining of full rights by Jews in Russia ought to mean the beginning of the end of the Zionistic movement. Zionism is the child of anti-Semitism. Had there been no persecutions in Russia and no anti-Semitism elsewhere, Zionism would never have been born. This movement is a counsel of despair. Zionists despaired of the increasing triumphs of the spirit of freedom. They declared that the Jew must have a refuge to which to flee from the outrages of persecution, and that therefore a Jewish State must be set up which would grant protection. We non-Zionists, though greatly depressed because of the sufferings of our brethren in the lands of persecution, yet would not yield in even the darkest days to this counsel of despair.

"And may I record my firm faith that our blessed land of liberty took the first step toward bringing this remarkable consummation to pass when the United States Congress with practical unanimity, there being but one dissenting vote, refused to renew the commercial treaty with Russia because of discrimination against American citizens of Jewish faith in the matter of passports? This fine assertion of the rights of all citizens of the United States without regard to creed brought the subject of Jewish disabilities in Russia into the field of practical Russo-American diplomacy. There was only one way of settling the matter, and that was to settle it right. This will now be done with the removal of every vestige of discrimination against Jews in Russia."

PRESIDENT'S ACTION ELECTRIFIES RUSSIA

News Greeted with Shouts of Joy in Duma and Demonstrations in Streets.

PETROGRAD, April 4.—News of the impending intervention of the United States was first received at Tauride Palace, where the Council of Soldiers and Workingmen's Deputies was in session. The announcement, made from the tribune, evoked a storm of applause, and soon the entire palace echoed with shouts and hurrahs. Impromptu meetings were at once held in the foyer, where orators explained to the soldiers the enormous importance of President Wilson's declaration.

Dr. Paul Milukoff, the Foreign Minister, when he received the news said: "The idea side of the war is once more emphasized by the intervention of America. For me it becomes still clearer under these circumstances that without victory there can be no peace."

Michael Rodzianko, President of the Duma, said: "America's intervention on the side of the powers at war with Germany is the best guarantee of an early victory over the Germans."

Street manifestations occurred throughout Petrograd in honor of the occasion.

WAR BONDS 'AT COUNTER.'

Dry Goods Association Offers to Sell Them for Treasury.

Nation-wide co-operation of department stores and the retail dry goods trade generally with the Government in helping to finance the war was offered yesterday by R. L. Howe, Treasurer of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, in a telegram sent to Secretary McAdoo of the Treasury. Mr. Howe proposed that if the Government decided to issue small denomination bonds or notes for war financing, the dry goods stores of the country would be glad to treat such paper as merchandise and sell it over the counter.

"About 2,000 stores throughout the country are available for this purpose," said Mr. Howe. "The fact that the stores had undertaken to distribute note or bond issues would commend them to purchasers who, while having great faith and confidence in our Government, might be unacquainted with the desirability of such an obligation.

TO GERMAN-AMERICANS.

An Appeal by ex-Mayor Blankenburg to be True to Their Oath.

PHILADELPHIA, April 4.—Rudolph Blankenburg, ex-Mayor of Philadelphia, has issued the following, addressed to citizens, like himself, of German birth:

The President has spoken, Congress is about to declare a state of war between our country and the German Empire!

In this hour of stress and strife it behooves all citizens of German birth or descent to declare their unflinching allegiance to the country of their adoption, and to show by word and deed that they are true and unfaltering Americans. Deeply distressed as we are that the century-old friendly relations between the Fatherland and our great Republic have been severed, much as we deplore the circumstances that have led to this unavoidable step, our duty is plain. We have sworn troth to the flag and we shall follow the flag, ready to do our duty.

We sought a home in the New World and found it. We were invited and welcomed under the Declaration of Independence, under the Constitution and under laws that assured us equal rights with those who had come before us. Now let us show that we are worthy of this high privilege, that we are worthy of American citizenship, the priceless boon of mankind.

On attaining citizenship we forswore fealty to the potentate under whose sceptre we were born, a fealty which we disowned, for we abhorred being slavish subjects of King or Prince when liberty beckoned us from beyond the sea and offered us equality among all men. This, therefore, is our home, the country of our choice; to its honor and defense we pledge our all.

We still love the country of our origin, we cherish the old fireside, the ties of affection and friendship bind us to family and home. We hope and pray that ere long peace shall return and that good-will take the place of enmity and contention in this war-ridden world. By cordial co-operation on the part of all this happy hour will be hastened.

To our President and to our common country we send greetings. Our acts will show how we condemn and scorn the "hyphen" so unjustly bestowed upon us as a class. We are not German-Americans, but Americans of German birth or descent, and as Americans we shall live and, if need be, die.

DRESDEN TO EAT ELEPHANT.

Restaurant Keeper Buys a "Bad" One of a Showman for $2,250.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 4.—There will be elephant steaks and cutlets on the menus of the Bärenschenke, one of the largest and most popular restaurants in Dresden, which bought a live elephant recently and had it killed at the municipal slaughterhouse. The beast's name was Jumbo. He was only eighteen years old and until a few weeks ago was employed as a performer in the Sieg-Sarasani traveling circus.

Jumbo was born and reared in the circus and for a long time had been a special favorite with Director Sarasani, who had taught him to dance and dine like a gentleman at a table. He might have gone on dancing and dining for decades had he not lost his temper too often lately and thrown table, bell, plates, and bottles at the poor clown who waited on him in the arena. With his temperamental act, he assumed a violent character, endangering his trainer's life. Jumbo was sentenced to death by Director Sarasani, who sold his carcass in advance to the proprietor of the Bärenschenke for 9,000 marks ($2,250 at normal exchange rates.) Several veterinary surgeons and professors of natural history witnessed the execution. An old African elephant-hunter, now settled as a farmer in the neighborhood, emptied his rifle into Jumbo's head, close behind the ear, and the huge beast collapsed stone-dead, with a tremendous crash. Some twenty butchers went to work on the carcass, which weighed more than 5,500 pounds. The skin alone weighed 600 pounds and was sold for 1,000 marks to a leather manufacturer. The animal was absolutely healthy, and there will be roast elephant at the Bärenschenke within two weeks, the period required for the "hanging" of the meat.

SIXTH AVENUE ALL AGLOW.

Merchants Show Broadway Is Not the Only Street Open at Night.

Sixth Avenue, between Forty-eighth and Forty-ninth Streets, looked like a section of Spotless Town last night, which was the beginning of a six-night campaign for a brighter Sixth Avenue. All the shops in the neighborhood were ablaze with light, and, in spite of the dim street illumination, one of the darkest blocks in this district was suddenly converted into one of the brightest in town.

A little paint, some soap and water, with a touch of local pride, had worked wonders in the block. The merchants on the avenue, from Herald Square to Central Park, were pointing with pride to the results of the experiment, and competition for the prize cups to be awarded for the best window display and the best illumination is keen.

"Sixth Avenue Week" will end Monday night with a street pageant, in which all of the members will participate. The geniuses of the Hippodrome are arranging the celebration.

SAFEGUARD CHILDREN IN FEEDING TROOPS

Dr. Lusk Will Urge Government Not to Repeat German Mistake of Under Rationing.

Scientific experiments on American boys to determine the quantity of food best suited to insure maximum endurance are understood to have been responsible for the recent decision of the German Government and the Belgian Relief Commission to increase rations for children, in the hope of decreasing the death rate from tuberculosis.

Six Irvington Boy Scouts were brought to this city some months ago for experiments at Bellevue Hospital and Cornell Medical College under observation of Dr. E. F. Du Bois, Medical Director of the Russell Sage Institute of Pathology.

Conclusions regarding the effect upon boys not yet 14 years old of the amount of food ordinarily required by adults appeared in American medical journals and came to the attention of the German Government and the Belgian commission.

The Boy Scouts were tested in respiration calorimeters, and it was proved that heat production is higher in the human body before the age of 14 than in later years and that the requirement of calories for boys is 25 per cent. greater than that of similarly constituted adults.

The commission which concerned itself with the food situation in Germany at the outbreak of the war underestimated the food required during adolescence, in the opinion of American scientists, with disastrous results to the health of German children.

Scientists in America are planning, it was said yesterday, to take steps to avoid the mistakes made in Germany if Government rationing becomes necessary.

In view of the present situation, in which the United States must consider problems of agriculture and food both for home and Entente consumption, a movement has been put under way to have American scientists take the matter up with the Government.

When the National Academy of Sciences meets in Washington, April 13, Dr. Graham Lusk, Professor of Physiology at Cornell, will assert that the United States should send troops to Europe, but that it would be impractical unless the Government could provide food to sustain the nation and supply the Entente. It will be suggested at the Washington convention that a committee be appointed to urge this phase of economic preparedness upon the Government and that the childhood ration be considered on the basis of its importance.

Mrs. Caroline Cachard Dies in Paris.

Mrs. Caroline Cachard, widow of Edward Cachard, died yesterday at her home, 4 Rue Chalgrin, Paris, in her seventy-ninth year, according to a cable message received here yesterday. She was an aunt of Louis Keller of this city.

Before her marriage Mrs. Cachard was Miss Caroline Chazournes, a daughter of the late Felix Chazournes, and she had lived abroad for many years. She was a member of an old French family that came to New York in 1830 and a niece of the late Jules Brugiere and the late Mrs. Alphonse P. Montant, she is survived by two sons, Edward R. Cachard and Henry Cachard, the latter the Paris representative of the law firm of Coudert Brothers.

McGRAW'S WARRIORS WEATHER SAND STORM AND OVERCOME THE DETROIT TIGERS

GIANTS BEAT WIND, SAND, AND TIGERS

FIVE HOME RUNS SCORED

Dust Storm Blows the Ball Over the Fences Frequently — Indian Fans Root for Thorpe.

Special to The New York Times.

TULSA, Okla., April 4.—Five home-run drives over the short fences of a bandbox ball park were the features of the fifth exhibition game between the Giants and Tigers today. Fly balls that would have been converted into easy outs, ordinarily, were blown over the wall for these home runs, and legitimate hits were held up by the wind until outfielders could get under them.

The Giants won this weird game by a score of 8 to 4, and once more took the lead in the series, with three victories out of the five battles played.

The same wind that blew Tyrus Cobb out of Oklahoma City yesterday and prevented a game there made conditions most disagreeable here today. The temperature dropped down to 50 degrees and the 2,000 hardy souls who ventured out to the ball park not only shivered in heavy wraps, but could not see part of the time for the dust that went sifting across the wind-swept field in blinding clouds. Umpire Brennan frequently had to call time to let the batters get the dust out of their eyes.

Under the circumstances, the twirling was good. The four boxmen were nearly blown off the slab at times, but managed to retain fair control. Anderson, who worked the first five innings against Boland, did not walk a man nor did he strike out any. Neither did Perritt faneky of the Tigers, but he gave four bases on balls. Boland and Cunningham passed five and were nicked for thirteen hits.

The Giants did not wield their bats effectively until the third inning. After that they outslugged the Tigers consistently. Kauff made two singles to left field, in the seventh and ninth innings, and Fletcher got a real home run over the left field fence during a lull in the ninth. Neither left fielder caught a ball. In fact, both played nearly over to centre field, as the teams were constantly aiming for the right garden fence, because of the strong wind.

Detroit hammered Anderson for a home run, a double, and a single in the second, but the Giants tied it in the third on a triple by Burns, Herzog's double, and a single by Fletcher. A blast over the fence by Jones put the Tigers ahead in the fourth. Herzog canceled that run, with a homer in the fifth, and Thorpe scored on a base on balls and Fletcher's double.

The Tigers made fewer hits after that and scored their fourth run on an error in the eighth inning. The Giants assumed a commanding lead in the sixth, when they scored two runs. The last two runs were home runs by Perritt, in the eighth, and Fletcher, in the ninth. Jim Thorpe received much applause from his Indian rooters and played a good game. In five times at bat Thorpe made two singles, drew a base on balls, and struck out twice. He made one hit and fanned once while batting right-handed, and then did the same thing left-handed.

YANKS BAT WITH A WILL.

Sturdy Stick Work Topples the Braves by 8 to 3 Score.

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, N. C., April 4.—Playing on a rough, bumpy field in a high cold wind, the Yankees came back with a strong attack today and sandbagged the Braves with ease. The score was 8 to 3 and the Boston club might have been overwhelmed by an even wider margin if the Donovanites had pressed their chances on several occasions. The Yanks now have three games to four for the Braves.

The Yankee attack was led by Tim Hendryx and Walter Alexander, who contributed 7 of the 14 hits and who drove in 4 of the 8 runs. Hendryx relieved High, who was tired of playing on rough fields, and proved that he is a swatsman of considerable ability. He has been batting well all Spring and the present series has more than swapped blow for blow with his hard-hitting left field rival, Sherwood Magee. Allen Russell was very wild. He gave seven passes, but when he recovered his balance the Braves were helpless before his speed and curves.

Boston's pitching proved ineffective while the Boston defense was far below its standard. The field play was not to be compared with that of the Yankees. However, the fact that the Yankees played well under a cold wind and uneven footing does not alter the fact that there was plenty of excuse for the ragged performance of the National Leaguers.

Manager Stallings was away and his team gave a very sorry display in his absence. John Evers, second in command to Stallings, had charge for the day.

The Yankees once more exhibited weakness in forwarding men who were on bases. They did forward plenty of them, but eleven were left. In the eighth inning, after scoring thrice, they had three on with none out. The attack went dead all at once and not one of the second batch of three to reach the bases was able to advance.

ARMY HARSH TO MANHATTAN

Cadets Pile Up 17 Runs While New Yorkers Score One.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., April 4.—The Army's heavy hitting ball tossers swamped Manhattan College this afternoon, 17 to 1, in a seven-inning contest. The soldiers knocked Burns off the mound in the first frame and treated J. Houlihan, who held Columbia scoreless last Saturday, even more harshly. Manhattan's one run came when Murrill wavered momentarily in the fourth, passing Houlihan and forcing Le Claire when the bags were full. Bingham, Gerhardt, Oliphant, and McNeil led in the Army's bombardment of the Manhattan twirlers.

The score by innings:

SYRACUSE TROUNCES NAVY.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 4.—The Naval Academy nine, somewhat disorganized by the premature graduation of the first class, was defeated by Syracuse here this afternoon, 8 to 3, in the opening game of the season. Bolton went through the first inning in good shape, blanking the visitors, and the middies started with a brace of runs. In the second inning the visitors hit Bolton for a triple, two doubles, and a single, and scored three runs. Emmerick succeeded him in the box. Kleb, the Syracuse twirler, had safe hits bunched on him only in the first inning.

The score by innings:

Amherst's Twirler, McGowan, Weakens with Two Out—Score Is 3 to 5.

Columbia University baseball players have come to honor and respect the eighth inning in their games. Last season, while Coakley's team was gaining the right to be rated as the best college nine, many a game sauntered along for seven frames only to be clinched in the lucky eighth, and likewise yesterday's rally during Columbia's last turn at the rubber provided enough runs to tie the then leading Amherst team and later run out to a victory by 8 to 5.

The lead began to seesaw as early as the fourth inning, when Amherst tied the count. The men from Massachusetts assumed a lead in the fifth, Columbia made matters even again in the sixth, and Amherst again went out in front of the run-getting procession in the seventh.

All three manoeuvres served to provide an ideal setting for the final act in the eighth, when McGowan, the Amherst pitcher, eased up his curves and shoots so that his opponents from Gotham could scamper off with a triumph.

McGowan let Buonaguro, the steady clouting Columbia short stop, tap his delivery for a clean single in the general direction of Broadway and left field. Columbia rooters, sunning in the stands on a well-nigh perfect ball day, sensed a coming belated rally, but their hopes were soon squelched. The next two batsmen were easy outs.

But Pitcher McGowan was about to show more liberality with the New York performers. Hauck was the next to face him, and, as he had twice belted the ball for a safe hit, he was given a free pass to first. The Amherst pitcher thought Captain Lester Lane of Columbia also looked dangerous, and he gave him a free passage, thereby filling the corners. Then Coach Coakley sent Meany, a husky, six-footer, to the plate to pinch-hit for Farrell. Meany met the ball, but a sigh of disappointment went up, for he had cut a lazy, slow-moving grounder toward the pitcher's box, and it looked like an easy out. It should have been easy to retire the Columbia side had not McGowan become unnerved, but he let the sphere roll through his hands. Buonaguro romped home with the tying run on third base, and three other scores followed with little delay.

TIGER CREW DISBANDS.

Majority of Oarsmen Have Entered Military Service.

PRINCETON, N. J., April 4.—Such a large number of Princeton oarsmen have left the university to enter some branch of the national service that Coach Spaeth tonight decided to call off practice for the rest of the Spring. Hardly a sufficient number of Varsity crew men are left in college to fill the first boat.

CLASS A PLAYERS BEATEN.

Applebys and Klinger Fall in Poggenburg Cup Billiard Play.

Standing of the Players.

F. S. Appleby, (250)	0	1	42	7	5-32
Jacob Klinger, (250)	0	1	70	9	6-28

Misfortune claimed all three of the Class A billiardists who competed in the Poggenburg memorial handicap 18.2 tournament at Maurice Daly's Academy yesterday. The afternoon matches brought the downfall of Francis S. Appleby and Edgar T. Appleby, and in the evening Jacob Klinger also met with disaster. Each of these men put up a keenly fought contest, but the handicaps which they were called upon to concede to their rivals proved too great.

George T. Moon, Jr., of the Class B ranks triumphed over Edgar T. Appleby by a score of 175 to 229. Appleby being called upon to play 250 against his rival's 175. There was a like proportioning of points in the match between Francis S. Appleby, who played 250, and William Gershel, who played 175. Appleby by a strange coincidence made the same number of points as did his brother against Moon, 229.

No match of the tournament has shown a better contest than that between Claude R. Lewis and Jacob Klinger in the evening. Klinger who was called upon to play 250 against 115 by his rival, fell short of victory by only ten points.

CRANE PUTS OUT RHODES.

To Meet Wightman Today in National Court Tennis Title Play.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 4.—Joshua Crane of the Boston Tennis and Racquet Clubs, who is expected to reach the challenge round against Jay Gould of Philadelphia in the national court tennis championship singles, won by a narrow margin today from D. P. Rhodes, also of Boston, in the second round of the tournament. Crane took the match in straight sets, by the scores, 6—4, 6—4, 7—5.

Preceding this match George Wightman of the Boston Athletic Club beat Dr. George Derby of the local Tennis and Racquet Club, in three straight sets 6—4, 6—2, 8—6, Derby making a fine rally in the final set.

HARVARD'S DECISION WAITS.

Action on Suspension of Athletics After War Declaration.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 4.—Dean Le Baron R. Briggs, Chairman of the Committee on the Regulation of Athletic Sports at Harvard University, announced today that the committee's decision as to the suspension of sports would be made known after action by Congress on the pending war resolution. Fred W. Moore, graduate Treasurer and Secretary, will attend a conference of collegiate athletic officials in New York. All of them question of the discontinuance of intercollegiate events will be discussed.

Harvard University crews raced today in what were regarded as the best rowing events of the college year. The 'Varsity eight defeated the first eight-oared crew and the juniors defeated the sophomores over a one-mile course. No time was taken for the 'Varsity event. All of them have been shaken up by the departure of former members to enlist in naval or military organizations. Training tables were closed today, and after the races the class crews were disbanded.

YALE ATHLETICS TO CEASE.

Nine Will Play Until Saturday and Crew to Row Quakers.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 4.—The Yale nine left here this afternoon for its Easter trip under the most unusual conditions an Eli team has ever experienced. Uncertainty is felt over the scheduled games for the trip owing to the declaration of war, which is expected at any time. The nine will positively play three games, which have been arranged for North Carolina the last three days of this week, but it is not certain what will become of the three scheduled next week.

The rowing squad has gone to Philadelphia. It has been decided that, regardless of a declaration of war, the two eights will row their two races with the two Quaker crews on the Schuylkill Saturday. The nine will return to Washington Saturday night after its three games in North Carolina.

ANDERSON LOSES TO WHITE AT 18TH HOLE

Special to The New York Times.

PINEHURST, N. C., April 4.—Two important meetings will be held at Pinehurst tomorrow in the second match round of the North and South championship tournament. Phil Carter will play W. C. Fownes, Jr., and Norman H. Maxwell will engage Gardiner W. White. The winners in these two contests are considered likely to come through to the final.

The first five sixteens played today. Carter went out in 36 in his match against R. A. Stranahan of Toledo and was 2 up at the turn. He won by 8 up when he holed out in 2 on the seventeenth and finished the round in 73.

The closest match of the day was between Gardiner W. White and John G. Anderson. They both came to the eighteenth tee with a 4 for a 75 and with the match all even. Anderson's brassie landed him on the side of a bunker and White overran the green by fifty yards, coming to rest amid the shrubs in the clubhouse garden. Both chipped to the green, but White sank his twelve-foot putt, whereas Anderson missed his own twenty-footer and lost the match.

Fownes and S. J. Graham of Greenwich both took 41 to go out, but Fownes played great golf coming in, made the last nine holes in 34, and pulled himself up from 2 down at the seventh to a 3 and 2 victory at the sixteenth. Another good run was made by E. W. Wells, of Montclair, who went around in 75 in his match with J. M. Wells of the Kenilworth Club, and won by 4 and 2. Dyer specialized in twenty and thirty foot putts throughout the contest.

Paul E. Gardner of Chicago came home in 34, but lost to Norman Maxwell by 3 and 2. Gardner played poorly going out and was 5 down at the turn. Maxwell finishing in 77.

The summaries:

FIRST SIXTEENS.—Phil Carter, Nassau, defeated R. A. Stranahan, Inverness, 3 and 1; W. C. Fownes, Jr., Oakmont, defeated S. J. Graham, Greenwich, 3 and 2; W. A. Whitcomb, Green Hill, defeated Donald Brown, Youngstown, 3 and 2; Frank Dyer, Montclair, defeated J. M. Wells, Kenilworth, 4 and 2; Norman Maxwell, Aronimink, defeated Paul M. Hunter, Onwentsia, 3 and 2; Gardiner White, Flushing, defeated J. O. Anderson, Siwanoy, 1 up; E. O. Beall, Uniontown, defeated J. A. Thompson, Huntington Valley, 1 up; Robert Hunter, Weeburn, defeated F. H. Gates, Moore County, 3 and 1.

SECOND SIXTEEN.—G. R. Baleh, Cincinnati, defeated G. W. Van Keuren, Englewood, 2 up; A. L. Sands, Newport Country Club, defeated T. A. Kelley, Southern Pines, 2 and 1; C. L. Becker, Woodland, defeated Nat Hurd, Pittsburgh, 4 and 3; A. E. Ranney, Greenwich, won from S. D. Wyatt, Fond du Lac, by default; G. J. Bellamy, Springfield, defeated C. H. McDonald, Lambton; Paul Van Rensselaer, Cooperstown, defeated F. S. Danforth, North Park, 2 up; J. C. Cuddy, Cleveland, defeated H. G. Phillips, Moore County, 3 and 2; H. Fauser, Buffalo, defeated R. G. Morrison, Oakmont, 2 and 1.

KELLY MISSES TWO FIRSTS.

Wins 60-Yard Dash at Samaclar Games, but Loses 300 on a Fluke.

Andy Kelly, the 300-yard champion and record holder, missed his chance of being a dual winner at the games of the Samaclar A. A. last night when he mistook the finish line of the 300-yard handicap and pulled up in his heat when first place was practically his. The games, which consisted largely of events for the employes of several hotels of the city, attracted an enthusiastic crowd to the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory, including many prominent A. A. U. officials seldom seen at any except championship meetings.

Kelly showed that he had a world of speed when he tore through the field from scratch in the 60-yard open dash, just catching J. Lyons, of the Alpha P. C. C., and winning in 7 1-5 seconds. Owing to the absence of Kelly from the 300-yard final, George Dernell of the Boys' Club was enabled to come through with flying colors. He won with plenty to spare in the ordinary time of 36 seconds, accomplished from the three-yard mark.

Joe Higgins of the Irish-American A. C. ran a fine race from scratch in the 1,000-yard handicap. He conceded starts ranging up to sixty yards but slipped along with such good effect that he had the race won two laps from the finish. Easing up in the last two laps Higgins finished in 2:18 4-5.

The closed events were noticeable for the athletic ability shown by the employes of the McAlpin, who carried off the majority of the honors in the greater New York interhotel relay race, for which a massive cup was given.

INDIAN CHANT HOME FIRST.

Takes Eclipse Handicap from Fast Field at Bowie Track.

BOWIE, Md., April 4.—J. W. Bean's Indwian Chant, a cast-off from the stable of Foxhall P. Keene, made amends for his defeat in the Inaugural Handicap on the opening day of the Bowie meeting by capturing the Eclipse Handicap this afternoon from a field of fast sprinters. Indiant Chant was almost an equal favorite with True as Steel, the latter having the advantage of the services of Frankie Robinson, who has been the riding sensation here.

FORCES PRODUCER TO CUT WAR PRICE

MANUFACTURER MUST OBEY

United States Intends to Buy Its Munitions at Less Than 10 Per Cent. Above the Cost.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The Government today invoked for the first time its sweeping powers to strike a death blow at exorbitant war profits.

Under authority of the last Naval Appropriation bill a manufacturer was directed to furnish a large order of war supplies at a price fixed by the Government, far lower than the figure voluntarily submitted. If the order is not obeyed the plant will be taken over and operated by the Government.

Officials would not disclose the name of the manufacturer or the agency through which the order was given. It was admitted, however, that the action had been taken, and that President Wilson and his advisers were firmly resolved that only fair and reasonable charges should be paid by the nation to its citizens for the things that are necessary to make ready for war.

European Governments are paying an average of 10 per cent. profit on war materials purchased in the United States. It was asserted authoritatively that the Government of the United States intended to buy its own supplies at less than that rate of profit to the seller.

The law invoked is Section 3 of the last Naval Appropriation bill, as follows:

"The President is authorized to require the owner or occupier of any factory in which the ships or war material are built or produced to place at the disposal of the United States the whole or any part of the output of such factory and, within the limit of the amounts appropriated therefor, to deliver such output or parts thereof in such quantities and at such times as may be specified in the order at such reasonable price as shall be determined by the President."

Behind that clause stand other laws as a grim reminder of the purpose of Congress to make its will effective. A section of the National Defense act makes it a felony, punishable by three years' imprisonment and $50,000 fine, to fail to meet the Government's demands. Another section of the Navy bill authorizes the taking over and operation of all or any part of any plant.

It is understood that the concern against which these statutes have been invoked refused to meet the Government's requirements as to price when the orders were tendered originally and in the regular way. So far as known, this is the only case of the kind produced by the present emergency.

Standing out sharply against this background came today an announcement by Bernard Baruch, Commissioner for Minerals for the National Defense Council, of the voluntary offer of the brass-making industry to fill the Government's orders at cost of production. This followed the recent agreement procured by Mr. Baruch with the copper producers, and similar arrangements now in process of completion with the steel and fuel oil producers.

Poor Aided by Jewish 'Bundle Week'

Those in want are now beginning to reap the benefit of the "Bundle Week," arranged by the United Hebrew Charities. The organization is distributing clothing for the spring and summer. It was said yesterday at the office of the Industrial Department, 37 Greene Street, that forty families, or approximately 200 individuals, were receiving clothing daily. During the week children have been outfitted and in many cases women and men have received clothing which enabled them to get work.

MANY BEQUESTS TO FRENCH

Mrs. Moore's Heirs Include Hospital, Social Leaders, and Servants.

The will of Mrs. Katherine E. Moore, widow of William Taylor Moore, disposes of an estate of more than $800,000 in this State, and of valuable property abroad. She died in Paris Feb. 2.

Mrs. Moore divided the bulk of her estate among nephews and nieces of her husband, who are the children of Clement C. Moore, Casimir de Rham Moore, and Frances L. Ogden. She gives $40,000 each to her stepsisters, Georgianna Storey, Gertrude Motley, and Harriet D. Robinson. Her secretary, Mme. M. Kloes, received $14,000, and $600 goes to her masseuse. Her butler gets $5,000 and her valet de chambre $3,000 and an income of $400. One maid gets $6,000 in French war loan securities and an income of $600, and another gets $2,000 outright and an income of $300. Mrs. Moore's chauffeur and chef each received $1,000.

To the Hospital des Quinze-Vingts for Blind French Soldiers, in Paris, $20,000 is left. Mrs. Moore's personal effects are to be sold by her friend, the Duchesse de Camastra, and the proceeds given to charities. She leaves one painting by Sargent and one by Helleu to the Luxemburg Gallery.

Among the bequests to friends are: Mrs. George Keppel, formerly noted as an English society leader, $4,000; Comte Alexandre de Gabriac, $20,000; Mme. Macchetta d'Allegri, $20,000; Princesse Guy de Lucinge, $5,000; Mme. Gaston Le Grand, $5,000. The Duchesse Nicoletta Grazioli and the Duchesse de Noailles each receive $5,000. Mrs. Moore's jewelry is divided among ten friends.

SHEEHAN INCOME TO WIDOW.

$2,000,000 Estate, Left in Trust, Will Go to Nieces and Nephews.

The will of William F. Sheehan, who died on March 14, disposes of an estate estimated at more than $2,000,000, leaving the entire residue in trust for life to his wife, Mrs. Blanche N. Sheehan of 16 East Fifty-sixth Street. The only bequest to a person other than a relative is $1,000 to Bertha Brunsten, maid in the decedent's household.

The former Lieutenant Governor left $1,800 a year for life to his sister, Mary Sheehan of Detroit, and gave $10,000 to Mrs. John C. Sheehan, widow of his brother. Her children, Margaret B., John Cyril, Maria Gertrude, and William Kenneth Sheehan, each receive $10,000 outright, to be paid when they reach the age of twenty-four years, and will divide the residue on the death of the widow. William Kenneth Sheehan receives his uncle's law library with the provision that it is to remain in the custody of decedent's firm, Ingraham, Sheehan & Moran, until the nephew is ready to enter law practice. Each nephew is also allowed $2,000 a year for his education.

DRUMMOND ESTATE FIGHT.

Widow of Charities Commissioner Wants Son Ousted as Executor.

A bitter dispute between Mrs. Helen M. Drummond, who married the late Charities Commissioner Michael J. Drummond on Aug. 8, 1910, when she was a public school teacher, and his son and former business partner, Walter J. Drummond, over the settlement of his estate, resulted in an application by the widow yesterday to remove the son as executor of the Commissioner's estate. Surrogate Fowler signed an order directing the executor to show cause on April 13 why he should not be removed.

In her petition Mrs. Drummond said her husband divided his estate among her and his six children by a former wife. Her husband and Walter J. Drummond were partners in an iron pipe business from 1900 until his death in 1916. The executor asserts that the estate is indebted to him for $126,395.

Mrs. Drummond says that by reason of this claim of the son the assets of the estate are asserted to be only $121,729 and the liabilities $136,395. She contends that the estate is not insolvent, and that the claims of the executor against the estate are made in bad faith.

STEEL EFFICIENCY AT HIGHEST POINT

GREAT DEMAND FOR SHIPS

Substantial Concessions Are to be Made from Current Prices, Says Iron Age.

The Government's plans have occupied more attention in the steel trade this week than ever before, for the needs of the navy especially will require early deliveries of a heavy tonnage. Arrangements being made by the National Defense Council and steel makers in regard to prices for Government orders are expected to have ramifications which will affect the general run of quotations.

The Iron Trade Review says: "In its hour of need the Government finds the iron and steel industries keyed to the highest pitch of production and efficiency in its history. The pig iron market in March showed considerable extension of operations. At the close of the month 331 stacks were in operation, the largest number since July, 1907. Production in March increased by 605,875 tons to 3,255,810 tons.

"The most spectacular developments in the iron and steel market continue to be reflected in the demand for ship steel. Huge tonnages, which are entirely beyond the ability of the industry to produce, are being offered, and the makers are not even pretending to quote on more than perhaps one-fifth of the tonnage under inquiry."

"There was a further conference in New York on Tuesday," says the Iron Age, "between the steel manufacturers' committee and the Metals Commissioner of the Council of National Defense. It is probable that the Government will buy in the near future for its own wants and those of shipyards which are to do its work 500,000 tons of plates, shapes, and bars. Substantial concessions are to be made from current prices, but the proposal to take a ten-year market average was not adopted, as that would represent less than cost to companies not owning their own ore and coal.

"The problem is not as simple as it looks to be, or as the precedent of a 50 per cent. cut in the copper price would suggest. Copper at one-half off the market still gives 100 per cent. profit to many producers. A steel plate price of three cents instead of six would mean a fraction of a cent above cost to a mill paying $35 a ton for basic pig iron. The integrated companies could only stand it by telescoping the profits now made on coke, pig iron, and ingots.

"Government needs can be handled for the present without serious interference with ordinary trade; but, while war requirements are only a small percentage of the total steel output, they represent a much larger proportion of the plate tonnage, and some plate users may have to stand aside."

Dr. Peck on Defense Medical Board.

Dr. Charles H. Peck, Professor of Surgery in New York University, accepted yesterday the invitation of Secretary of War Baker to serve on the General Medical Board which has been organized by the Council of National Defense. The board will cooperate with the Medical Committee of the Council of Defense.

Domestic Post to Virgin Islands.

The Post Office Department announced yesterday that the domestic rates of postage and conditions would hereafter be extended to the Virgin Islands, formerly the Danish West Indies. Postage stamped paper for the Danish West Indies in the hands of the public will be recognized for payment of postage.

SPEYER TO RAISE PRODUCE.

Banker Will Plant Vegetables on His Unused Land in the Country.

James Speyer, the banker, is having his country place at Scarborough ploughed up, preparatory to planting potatoes, cabbage, beats and other vegetables of which he hopes to raise enough to supply his own household and the families of his employes. The estate contains about 100 acres and all of the tillable part, except the lawn, is to be cultivated. Heretofore, the broad acres stretching along the Hudson have been idle.

The belief that a world shortage of food stuffs is likely to exist next year is the chief motive for Mr. Speyer's activity as a practical farmer. He holds, according to his friends, that the country needs to raise every pound of grain and vegetables possible to meet the demands which will come from home and foreign sources, irrespective of the duration of the war. It is understood that a number of other wealthy landowners of Westchester County are considering the same step and a general movement for the farming of big estates is expected to develop before the Spring advances much further.

THEIR WAR TO BE ON DIRT.

Fetherston Asks Street Cleaners Not to Enlist.

Street Cleaning Commissioner Fetherston issued an order to the men under him yesterday in which he asked them not to enlist in any military organization without consulting him first.

"Street cleaning and the removal of refuse are necessary to the health of the community," he said, "and the work of the department should have first call upon all its employes."

Plans for drilling the 3,000 men employed under Borough President Marks of Manhattan were formulated yesterday by the heads of departments at a luncheon at 140 Fulton Street. The luncheon was in the nature of a testimonial to Lieut. Col. Frank L. Hines of the Second Field Artillery, who is Superintendent of Public Buildings. Addresses were made by Colonel George Wingate, commanding officer of the Second Field Artillery; J. W. Adams, Secretary of the borough; Ralph Folks, Commissioner of Public Works, and others. Members of the staff of the Borough President from laborers to Superintendents were guests.

WORK OF DURYEA RELIEF.

62,000 Persons in France Have Been Aided by Subscribers.

The Duryea War Relief will continue its work in France, regardless of this country entering the war. It was reported at the annual meeting of the subscribers, held yesterday at the home of Mrs. Charles H. Ditson, 19 East Thirty-seventh Street, that since the relief work of the organization was started by Mrs. Nina Larrey Duryea at Dinard, France, in September, 1914, aid had been given to 62,000 persons.

The report of Charles Elliot Warren, Treasurer, showed a balance of $23,543.75. Up to April 1, $38,329.14 was received. Included in the expenditures were: Clothing, $8,231.13; hospital beds, $3,357.50; surgical supplies, $1,151.12; cash cabled to Paris for relief, $2,688.53; office expenses, $1,590.71. The fund issued a formal appeal for more money. Checks may be sent to the Duryea War Relief, 259 Fifth Avenue.

The fund has the official recognition of the French Government, and Mrs. Duryea has been decorated by President Poincaré. About 5,500 comfort kits have been sent to the front.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Industrials React, Rails Firmer —Profits Under War Taxes.

A rather clear line was drawn in yesterday's stock market between transportation issues and industrial issues. Railroad and shipping shares, as a whole, were much stronger than manufacturing stocks, many of which ended the day at substantial net losses. The news that an arrangement had been practically completed by which the Government's steel requirements will be supplied at about half the current prices was a reminder of the measures already being put into operation or proposed whose effect would be to curtail profits on war orders, instead of swelling them.

In no quarter of the financial community is there any dissent from the view that the United States must proceed vigorously and on a large scale to accomplish the great task outlined by President Wilson in his address to Congress, and what most concerns the Street at the moment is the delay which is being forced upon Congress by those who willfully or otherwise are standing in the way of the national resolve. Harsh things were being said yesterday of those responsible for the delay. An altogether subordinate position is held by other and minor considerations, but some of these not unnaturally are being given close attention in the stock market itself. How will the war be financed? What will be the scale of taxes? How far will earnings be adversely affected?

It is typical of the time through which we are passing that the thoughts of war profits have been practically abandoned, and the question now is rather how well stocks may fare without any increase in their profits due to war orders or even under some diminution of those profits as a result of taxes. It is to be hoped that taxes will be high, for never was the country in a better position to respond to taxes, and war, so far as is reasonably feasible, should be financed in that way rather than by borrowing. That, indeed, has come to be accepted as the probable and proper policy of the Government in carrying on the war upon which the country is about to enter. Taxes are not designed, however, to discourage industry, and no necessary industry should be discouraged even by war taxes. Never are these more needed than in time of war. It is not to be expected, therefore, that industry will be taxed to excess.

In falling back on the assumption, as many people in the financial district now are, that even after meeting taxes the great industries in the country will be able to show large profits, the Street is merely registering its reliance on the fact that the country is prosperous and is likely to remain so. It is not at all necessary that profits should be increased over what they recently have been. It is not even necessary that they should be fully maintained in order to support the general market position, inasmuch as in many directions profits have been abnormally large. They could be reduced either by taxation or otherwise without undermining industry or the securities which represent it. It is by no means a gloomy outlook even when considered from the point of view of the many—a vast majority it is to be hoped they are—who feel strongly that America's entry into the war should not be made an occasion for personal profit.

Aside from technical reasons having to do with the relative supply in the market of railroad stocks and of industrial issues, the firmness of many railroad stocks in the face of a decline in a majority of active industrials was prompted by the hope that an increase in rates will be granted. The railroads have been at a disadvantage compared with industrial concerns because they have felt the rising cost of operation without enjoying a commensurate increase in the price at which their product has been sold. Transportation has cost very little more, although practically everything else has cost a great deal more. A rate increase could be allowed without hardship to any and with great advantage to the railroads and to the situation as a whole, because it would not represent a gift to the railroads, but merely a readjustment to which they are entitled because of the changed relation between the price of transportation and the price of other things.

VACUUM OIL EARNS 61.47%.

Report Shows Profit of $9,221,937 in 1916, a Gain of $2,360,024.

The Vacuum Oil Company yesterday declared an extra dividend of 2 per cent. and the usual semi-annual disbursement of 3 per cent., payable May 15. The report for 1916 showed a profit of $9,221,937, an increase of $2,360,024 over 1915 and equal to 61.47 per cent. on the outstanding stock. The company is completing a new plant on the Delaware River, near Philadelphia, to manufacture lubricating oil for export.

Other dividend announcements included the increase from 1¾ to 2 per cent. quarterly on common stock of the United Cigar Stores Company, payable May 15. The rate was raised from 1½ to 1¾ per cent. in August, 1915. The American Ice Company declared a quarterly dividend of 1¼ per cent. on its new preferred stock, payable April 25.

STEADY TONE IN LONDON.

American Again is the Chief Influence in Financial District.

LONDON, April 4.—America today again was the chief influence in the financial district, where the expected assistance in financing the war had a further favorable effect. Discounts weakened and Paris exchange improved, while the French loan jumped 2 points in anticipation of the financial help. Consols gained three-quarters and the other sections of the stock market, though quiet, reflected the better feeling.

Brazilian and Russian bonds gained a point and rubber, Marconi and steel shares were prominent. Mexican issues were easy and American securities were marked down in sympathy with Wall Street, but the tone was steady. Money was plentiful.

MONEY FOR NATION IN PEOPLE'S HANDS

PUBLIC MUST BE TAUGHT

5,289,000 in England and 4,443,904 in France Have Subscribed to War Issues There.

Bulk of World's Wealth Against Central Powers.

With the entrance of the United States into the war, about two-thirds of the economic wealth of the world is arrayed against the Central Powers. The world's wealth is estimated at between six hundred and seven hundred and fifty billion dollars.

Economic wealth of Central Powers	$113,000,000,000
Economic wealth of United States	200,000,000,000

What the Allies have borrowed in proportion to their individual wealth is shown in the following table:

	Wealth.	Borrowed.
Great Britain	$85,000,000,000	$10,000,000,000
France	55,000,000,000	9,500,000,000
Russia	50,000,000,000	10,000,000,000
Italy	25,000,000,000	2,000,000,000

On this basis the theoretical borrowing capacity of the United States with its $200,000,000,000 of wealth would be $40,000,000,000.

The present bonded debt of the United States is but $983,000,000, and only a small fraction of the 200,000 bond buyers in the country hold any of their Government's obligations.

The head of the country's biggest bond selling organization, Charles E. Mitchell, President of the National City Company, in a statement yesterday as to the ability of the United States to borrow money for war purposes, said that he was distinctly an opponent of any immediate short term financing by the Government. Short term loans would find a field of distribution in no large degree beyond banking institutions whose liquid condition is essential.

His own suggestion was that the most acceptable form of borrowing would be a loan running for thirty years, bearing interest at 3½ per cent. and carrying a provision that in case, during a period of one year from date, the Government should find it necessary, to issue securities bearing a higher interest rate, these bonds should be convertible. The convertible factor has been applied successfully in internal financing of the United Kingdom and, in Mr. Mitchell's view, has the marked advantage that investors will not be deterred from investment in the first United States Government loan offered by the thought that subsequent financing must be done at a higher interest rate.

"Perhaps two billion dollars could be successfully floated dependent upon the degree of education given to the public prior to the offering," said Mr. Mitchell. "Few realize the tremendous relative wealth of the United States and the inherent borrowing power within herself of how far behind are the people of the United States in placing their savings in sound investments, and especially in loans of the Government as compared with the peoples of other countries. Of the economic wealth of the world, estimated at between six hundred billion and seven hundred and fifty billion dollars, the wealth of the United States is now estimated at two hundred billion dollars, as against the estimated wealth of the allied nations, aggregating two hundred and fifteen billion dollars and the estimated wealth of the Central Powers, aggregating one hundred and thirteen billion dollars. If the United States were to join the Allied nations, the total wealth pitted against the Central Powers would reach a grand total estimated to be four hundred and fifteen billion dollars, nearly two-thirds of the wealth of the world, which factor should constitute the largest single element in the defeat of the Central Powers.

"Basing our calculation upon the loans which the Allies have succeeded in making, our borrowing capacity should, theoretically, be over $40,000,000,000. The accuracy of such calculation would appear faulty only in two respects, first, in the fact that the proportion of incorporated mobile capital is less in the United States than in England and in France, who have for many decades been savers and investors, and second, in the fact that a portion, though a comparatively small portion, of the allied borrowers have been made through external borrowings in the United States and elsewhere. Though such loans have been made upon collaterals, it is doubtful if the United States could find a neutral foreign field where its similar loans could be profitably made, but, in any event, how small in the light of these figures appears such a loan as would seem likely to be made by the United States in its initial borrowing.

"Take a glimpse of the banking situation in this country. Our banking power at the end of June, 1916, as represented by capital, surplus, and other profits, circulation and deposits of national and other reporting banks, together with the estimated amount of funds of this character in non-reporting banks, was $29,255,500,000, which figure, at the rate of increase for the preceding year, must now be close to $35,000,000,000. Although impracticable to determine with exactness, especially owing to the shifting of deposits, it would seem safe to say that the banks of this country possess at this time a loaning power of from $5,000,000,000 to $6,000,000,000 in addition to the loans our banks are already carrying.

"Enough has been said to set up a picture of the credit position of the United States. The wealth is here. How can it be diverted in small part into investment in Government loans? That our banks must be kept liquid and must be freed from securities which cannot be sold readily in a market where they are eagerly sought by individual investors is obvious, but that the individual savers of the United States have had scant education in investment, and especially in United States Government securities, is equally obvious. According to the income tax returns of 1915 only 238,822 people out of a population of well over 100,000,000 reported incomes in excess of $3,000 per annum, indicating the tremendous number there must be of earners of salaries and wages below this figure, who in turn must be savers to a larger or smaller degree.

"Probably not more than 200,000 persons in the United States purchase bonds. While this number seems exceedingly small, as we face the volume of likely Government borrowing, the United States itself has placed its bonds with but a small fraction of this number of bond investors. Our Government bond debt, as of Jan. 31, 1917, amounted to approximately $983,000,000. These bonds have sold very largely at prices which may be termed artificial by reason of the utility of the bonds for deposit for currency, &c., and for the reason that there has always existed in the country a certain demand at approximately the savings bank rate by a few who, regardless of price, have been unwilling to hold any other security.

"Contrast this situation in the United States with the situation in France and in England. Prior to the outbreak of the war the ledger of public debt in France showed holders of French 3 per cent. rentes aggregating the enormous total of 1,442,784, of whom approximately 1,400,000 held pieces aggregating 20 francs or less. There were at that time over 25,000,000,000 francs of rentes outstanding, indicating an average holding of 5,700 francs, or less than $1,150 to each investor. At the time the war began scarcely was there a Frenchman who was not an owner of rentes. Their people had been educated. And so to a lesser degree—but to a far greater degree than in the United States—were the people in Great Britain educated. British consols were owned by practically every investor in England prior to the war, and during the war period subscribers to the British war loans, including the savings certificates, have aggregated the enormous number of 9,289,000.

"I conclude then that the first step in the distribution of Government securities in large volume must be along the lines of popular education. The most excellent news writers, magazine writers, and men of the highest literary talent should even now be mobilized and at work spreading not only the gospel of thrift and investment, but showing to every man and woman and child within the confines of this country the desirability and the necessity of having ready at hand their savings, be it only a mite, for subscription to any United States bond issue that may be forthcoming. The commercial and investment bankers of the country—men trained in constructive finance and in the technique of bond distribution—should even now be mobilized to confer with our Government in the very delicate task of determining the volume, term, and rate of such an issue as will best appeal to popular favor and should be closely co-operating with the mobilized publicity men.

"The Federal Reserve Banks, whose duty it will doubtless be to collect in due course the country-wide subscriptions to the Government loan, should even now be mobilizing the banks within each Federal reserve district, arranging for the dissemination of information, the solicitation of subscriptions and possibly laying out plans by which banks may make loans to individual subscribers under a partial payment system. The advertising men of the country should be solidly brought together to devise ways and means for advertising the Government issue. Upon them will rest the burden of firing the final shot in a campaign which, if properly devised, will bring oversubscription to any Government loan and will make the work of distribution appear so easy and simple that the people will marvel that there has ever been so much talk about it all."

For the year ended Feb. 28, 1917, no interest was charged to capital account, but in the year ended Feb. 28, 1916, there was $146,472 so charged on account of construction. If this amount be deducted from interest charged against income, there was a balance of $60,910 after interest actually charged to income in the year instead of the deficit of $85,562. No interest has been charged to capital account since March, 1916.

MEXICAN RAILWAYS HARD HIT BY REVOLT

DEFICIT FOR YEAR $395,889

Freight and Passenger Rates Trebled and Quadrupled to Meet the Decline in Money Values.

An unusual railroad report was made public yesterday by the National Railways of Mexico, operation of which has been seriously interfered with by the activities of the revolutionists. The company was in possession of the Provisional Government for all of the last fiscal year, and the lines were operated as the Constitutionalist Railways of Mexico.

The income account makes a sorry showing, the gross earnings amounting to only $22,441 in Mexican paper money. The year before the gross revenue totaled $1,776,982, and in 1914 the annual report showed $34,273,341. Operating expenses last year were $418,340, leaving a deficit of $395,889, which was nine times larger than the deficit forced by difficult conditions in 1915. Two years ago net earnings amounted to $2,379,000.

Most of the report is taken up with accounts of the havoc wrought by the uncertainties of civil war. A. J. Pani, Executive President, says in part:

"Many of the efforts of the Direction General of the Constitutionalist Railways of Mexico had to be devoted to recover the rolling stock which was not legitimately employed in military work and to devise and enforce regulations for the discipline of the personnel. Much of the equipment thus recovered, before placing it in the public service, had to be submitted to costly and important repairs, not only because of rough handling received in the campaign, but of the defacements and mutilations, so to speak, to which so much of it had been subjected to adapt them for dwelling purposes. For instance, many of the box cars had windows cut in them, the seats of many passenger cars were missing, and in their stead were constructed grotesque wooden partitions to transform them into special or ambulance cars, &c.

"In short, the poor condition of the tracks and of the equipment, the lack of efficiency and discipline on the part of the personnel, the constant and unwarranted meddlings of the military element in the railways—especially in the northern part of the republic—and the depredations of the bandits not yet suppressed, produced frequently, most expensive accidents in loss of life and money, and very serious obstacles to the normalization of commercial traffic.

"All earnings are given in paper money of compulsory circulation of the 'Veracruz' emission, the value of which, as is well known, has been falling continuously from 14 to 15 cents United States currency per peso in January, 1915, to scarcely 2 cents in June of the present year, and even much less subsequently. Rates, however, were increased in a proportion much smaller than the decline in value of the paper money.

"As a matter of fact, the old freight rates of the National Railways of Mexico were applied without modification until April 25, and passenger rates until Sept. 30, of last year; upon these dates both were merely doubled; the new passenger rates being maintained to April 9, and the freight rates to May 1, 1916. On April 10, first-class pasenger rates were increased fourfold, as compared with the old rates of the National Railways, and the second class passenger rates were trebled, but during all this time, that is, up to May 1 of the present year, the paper money was received at par, though it was actually worth but a few cents on the dollar. Then a fixed value was made of 10 cents for each peso of paper money—that is more than twice the market value—and the old tariffs of the National Railways were re-established, reducing the first class passenger rates seventy-five per cent., and the second class to fifty per cent.

The dividends and interest on the securities pledged as collateral, at the current rates of payment, amount to $3,140,000 annually. This disregards undistributed surplus of several of the Companies; notably the Connecticut Company, whose surplus, after charges, in 1916 was $1,954,000. Including the undistributed surplus of the Connecticut Company, the Hartford & New York Transportation Company and the Central New England Railway Company, the income earned on the pledged securities amounted in the 1916 year to about $5,232,000, or nearly 2⅓ times the interest on the above issue of notes.

SUBJECT TO PRIOR SALE AND CHANGE IN PRICE, WE OFFER THE ABOVE NOTES FOR SUBSCRIPTION AT 99.04 AND ACCRUED INTEREST FROM APRIL 15, 1917, YIELDING 6%

Notes of The New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, and of The New England Navigation Company, maturing May 1, 1917, will be received in payment on the date of delivery at the following prices, provided such privilege of exchange is requested prior to 10 o'clock A. M. Monday, April 9th, 1917, viz.:

New Haven Notes— 100 1/16 and interest (approximately a 3% basis).

Chicago, Indianapolis & Louisville Railway

First and General Mortgage 5% Gold Bonds

Dated May 1, 1913. Due May 1, 1966.

Interest payable May 1 and November 1. Coupon Bonds, principal of which may be registered, in denominations of $500 and $1,000. Fully registered bonds of $1,000 and convenient multiples. Coupon and registered bonds interchangeable. Guaranty Trust Company of New York, Corporate Trustee.

Application will be made to list these bonds on the New York Stock Exchange

For complete information in regard to these bonds we call attention to a letter of Mr. H. R. Kurrie, President of the Company, copies of which will be furnished on request, the following being a summary thereof:

The Chicago, Indianapolis & Louisville (the "Monon" Route) operates a direct main line from Chicago to Indianapolis and Louisville, with another main line to Michigan City.

The "Monon," which is controlled by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad and Southern Railway, furnishes these roads with a direct connection to Chicago and the Northwest.

The First and General Mortgage 5% Bonds are secured on the entire property of the company, an equal amount of these bonds being reserved to retire all underlying liens. The physical condition of the property has been maintained at a high standard and its book value is more than twice the bonded debt.

Additional bonds may be issued for only 80% of the cash cost of additions and improvements.

The value of equipment and equipment equities is $6,350,000, equal to over 32 per cent of the company's entire outstanding bonded debt. The company agrees to maint

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Advices from Washington were closely watched, but they did not have much effect upon the market on the Consolidated Exchange, pending definite action in Congress upon the state of war resolution. Sales of United States Steel common, the most active stock, totaled 48,000 shares. Commission houses handled a good volume of business well distributed over the list, and this included a broad turnover of odd lots.

COTTON SOARS AGAIN

May Contracts Reach 20 Cents, with Net Advance of 2 to 34 Points.

There was further advance in cotton prices yesterday. May contracts sold up to 20 cents, or more than $2 a bale above Tuesday's closing figure. This compares with 21.55c, the highest quotation of the season for this delivery, reached on Nov. 27 last. Yesterday's final price for May was 19.88c, with the general list closing steady at a net advance of 2 to 34 points. Besides the strength of the old crop months, the feature of the market was the report of more active business in spot cotton in the South.

Both the trade and speculative shorts were believed to be buying old crop positions on the advance, part of the demand being attributed to covering hedges against the increased spot sales in the belt. There was also some transferring of shorts from old to new crop positions, and some buying of old crop contracts against sales of new on the expectation of still greater near-month premium.

While shorts in May, and to a lesser extent in July, were actively covering there seemed to be persistent selling of October and December, and it looked as if a short interest was being established in those months by strong interests.

Southern spot markets were unchanged to 38 points higher. Savannah reported sales of more than 5,000 bales, while there were good sales at Norfolk, Memphis, and New Orleans. According to private advices, short staple cotton sold at 20 cents in the interior of Texas; and it was also reported that holders who had previously asked 20 cents were now holding out for 25 cents.

Following are yesterday's quotations:

The local market for spot cotton was quiet and 25 points higher at 20.15 for middling upland. Southern spot markets were as follows: Galveston, 19.50c; New Orleans, 19.25c; Savannah, 19¾c; Augusta, 20c; Memphis, 19.75c; Houston, 19.40c.

Liverpool cables spot cotton as dull; sales 4,000 bales; speculation and export, 500; American, 3,000. Imports, 1,000, none American. Mid-upland, 12.82d. Futures opened quiet, 1 to 2 points higher on near and 3 to 4 points higher on late months. Closed quiet but steady, at a net decline of 10 to 16 points. May-June, 12.15; July-Aug., 12.00; Oct.-Nov., 11.49; Jan.-Feb., 11.37; Mar.-April, 11.35.

Manchester: Yarns and cloths, dull. Yesterday's port receipts were 9,158 bales, compared with 19,509 last year. Stocks total 1,170,023 bales. No extras were reported for the day. Exports so far this season have been 4,380,080 bales.

COMMODITIES MARKETS.

WHEAT.

The wheat market passed the $2 mark yesterday, when the May position in Chicago sold at $2.02. This was a fulfillment of predictions by enthusiastic bulls for months past, and marked the highest point touched in wheat since the days of the civil war. The advance was based on the pronounced strength in the cash position and on further unfavorable crop reports from the Winter wheat belt. In the local cash market No. 2 hard Winter wheat was quoted at $2.30½; No. 1 Northern Duluth, $2.40½; No. 1 Northern Manitoba, $2.37½, all free on board New York.

CORN.

Tht corn market was strong and higher, prices reaching new high records, with the May position in Chicago touching $1.25¾. There was a good demand from commission houses, and sentiment was bullish on the strength in the cash position, the general scarcity of offerings, and reports of an urgent demand from Europe. In the local cash market No. 2 white corn was quoted at $1.30½, cost, insurance, and freight, New York.

OATS.

Prices in the oats market were higher, although price changes were confined within a narrower range than either wheat or corn. There was said to be a fair business in Canadian oats, official sales amounted to 400,000 bushels. The local cash market was steady; standard quoted at 77½c; No. 2 white, 78c; No. 3 white, 77c; No. 4 white, 76½c; lower grades, 76@82c; ordinary clipped white, 77@79c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

New high records were again made in provision prices yesterday, and after holding strong through the session the market closed practically at the top with grain. According to The Price Current, hog packing for the week was 586,000, against 522,000 last year. Chicago had 21,000 hogs, and expected 18,000 on Thursday. Kansas City had 8,000 and Omaha 10,000 hogs.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The market for cottonseed oil was very strong during the early operations, with prices at new high records. The May position sold at 15c per pound, while July sold at 15.01c. The high prices attracted quite active profit-taking, and the market experienced a partial reaction, with final quotations 6 to 14 points net higher.

COFFEE.

A moderate buying movement sent prices some 15 to 20 points net higher in the coffee market yesterday. There was no particular change in the news from Brazil, and there were further rumors of business at about the prices recently mentioned in connection with the cost and freight offers. The day's business amounted to only 39,500 bags. The close was 16 to 20 points net higher. The spot market was quiet, with Rios unchanged at 9½c for 7s, while Santos 4s were ⅛c lower at 9¾c. SUGAR.

After opening irregular, 2 points higher to 2 points lower, sugar futures values gradually crept higher on trade buying and support from local operators, the close showing net gains of 1 to 8 points, with sales for the day 19,250 tons. The Exchange market was influenced by a firm spot situation with a continuous buying movement by refiners and operators. Range of prices:

The market for refined sugar was steady and unchanged at 7.25@8.00 for fine granulated. There were fair withdrawals on old contract and new business was good, with all refiners now making fairly prompt delivery. There was a little export business also reported, and it was said that there were inquiries for pretty fair amounts of refined sugar in the market, but that prices were a little below refiners' ideas.

There was a very firm undertone in raw sugar at the close, with holders asking 5c. cost and freight, for straight April shipment Cubas, and 4¾c. cost and freight, for the prompt positions. During the day operators bought one lot of 28,000 bags Cubas, afloat, at 4¾c. cost and freight, and 15,000 bags Cubas, last half April shipment, at 5c. cost and freight. A local refiner bought 5,000 bags Cubas, last half April shipment, at 4¾c. cost and freight. Spot quotations follow: Centrifugal, 5.96c; molasses, 5.08c; cost and freight, 4¾c.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 8,976 packages. Market quiet for the higher grades of table butter, but prices held generally steady. Secondary qualities moving out pretty well at fully sustained prices. Increasing strength on renovated, ladles, and packing stock, the latter selling at ½c advance. Creamery, higher than extras, per pound, 45@45½c; extras, (92 score,) 44@44½c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 42@43½c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 38½@41½c; thirds, 37@38c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 45½@46c; extras, 44½@45c; firsts, 42½@44c; seconds, 39@42c; creamery, held, extras, 42½@43c; firsts, 40@42c; seconds, 37@40c; thirds, 35@36c; State dairy, tubs, finest, 43@43½c; good to prime, 39½@42c; common to fair, 32@38c; renovated, extras, 35c; firsts, 33½@34c; lower grades, 31@33c; imitation creamery, firsts, 32@34c; ladles, current make, firsts, 31½@32c; seconds, 30½@31c; inferior grades, 29@30c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 30½@31c; No. 2, 29½@30c; lower grades, 28@29c.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 38,300 cases. Arrivals are larger, but the demand continues fairly active, and values are fully sustained. The market is showing most strength on the highest qualities, demand for these being especially good in view of the approaching Easter and Jewish holiday requirements. Ordinary and undergrades are freely offered and less active. Nearby white eggs quieter; tone is a little unsettled, although the range of prices shows no change. Duck and goose eggs scarce and wanted. Fresh gathered, extras, per dozen, 35@35½c; storage packed firsts, 34½c; fresh gathered firsts, 33½@34c; seconds and lower grades, 31½@33c; dirties, 31½@32½c; checks, good to choice, dry, 30@31c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 37@38c; ordinary to good, 35@36c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 35@37c; Western and Southern, gathered whites, 34 @36c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby henery browns, 35@36c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 34@35c; duck eggs, Baltimore, 45@47c; Western and prime Southern, 43@ 46c; ordinary Southern and Far Southern, 38@42c; goose eggs, $1@$1.25.

DISPUTE OVER SHIPS TO END

America May Get Wagner Vessels, Held by England.

LONDON, April 4.—One of the first results of the United States entering the war on the side of the Entente Allies probably will be a settlement of the long-standing controversy between Washington and the British Government over the Wagner ships. When the case was postponed until after April 30, action was taken in the hope that there might be a settlement outside of the Prize Court.

The State Department at Washington has shown much more interest in sustaining the American registry of the ships since the Attorney General produced, as the sole evidence of German interests in the vessels, the fact that Richard G. Wagner, President of the American Transatlantic Company, cabled to Jensen, in care of Hugo Stinnes, the German coal and steel magnate, at Berlin, while Wagner's Danish agent there was conferring with Stinnes.

An offer by the French Government to purchase the Wagner ships expidites the chances of a settlement. At one time the parties to a settlement were within $100,000 of an agreement as to the price which Great Britain was willing to pay for the ships. The new settlement, based upon present conditions, may not result in the transfer of the ships to the British flag, as the United States may refuse to grant such a transfer during the time of a crisis.

The Wagner ships referred to are those of the American Transatlantic Company. In a blacklist issued by the British Admiralty in October, 1915, the Wagner ships with several others were referred to as belonging to A. Jensen, or to the American Transatlantic Company. The British Government seized several of the vessels, an action that brought forth a strong protest by Ambassador Page on behalf of the United States. Among the ships seized are the Saginaw, the Kankakee, the Genesee, and the Hocking, ranging from 4,100 tons to 7,300 tons.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Three more banks—the Butchers and Drovers, the Irving, and the East River National—have made arrangements to have their daily balances at the Clearing House settled through the Federal Reserve Bank. There are now thirteen banks making settlements in this way.

The Reorganization Committee of the Wabash-Pittsburgh Terminal Railway announced yesterday that interim certificates would shortly be delivered, to be exchanged later for preferred and common stock of the company.

The Maxim Munitions Corporation announces that it has signed a contract with the Italian Government for the manufacture of 220,000,000 cartridges, deliveries to cover twelve months. The United States Government, it was stated, has increased the order for cartridges recently placed with the company.

The export and commission merchant firm of Everett, Hesner & Co. has been incorporated at Albany with a capital of $2,000,000.

D. L. Babcock has been appointed manager of the Cincinnati office of W. E. Hutton & Co. He was formerly with A. B. Leach & Co.

Leonard J. Marquis, Louis Friedman, Rowland S. Mott, and Milton A. Kent have been elected members of the Consolidated Stock Exchange.

Herbert Jackson has become associated with Sparrow, Troth & Co. as manager of the statistical department.

William E. Romsen, formerly with Ambrose R. Clark & Co., has joined the Duquesne Bond Corporation as head of the trading department.

Action was taken in United States District Court at Pittsburgh by a representative of the company's second preferred stockholders to prevent the Carbon Steel Company from paying the dividend of 2 per cent. on common stock declared for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30. A hearing was set for April 16.

Buhl, Loeb & Co. and the National City Company have purchased $3,788,000 Chesapeake & Ohio Railway equipment trust 4½ per cent. certificates, maturing in twenty semi-annual instalments, which have all been placed privately.

At the annual meeting of the Union Carbide Company held in Richmond, Va., retiring Directors were re-elected. The stockholders voted to increase the capital stock of the company from $50,000,000 to $50,000,000.

Application has been filed with the Second District Public Service Commission by the International Railway Company for authority to issue $1,458,717 5 per cent. bonds under its refunding and improvement mortgage, and to use $102,000 of said bonds authorized last year.

The New York Central has applied to the Public Service Commission for authority to issue $10,000,000 4½ per cent. refunding and improvement mortgage bonds, to be disposed of at not less than 93½ net to the company. The commission has set no date for the hearing on the application.

The American Ice Company has declared a quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. on the new non-cumulative preferred stock.

The Champion Copper Company has declared a dividend of $6.40 a share, making $110.84 since Feb. 21, 1915, when payments were resumed following suspension from Oct. 13, 1913.

At the meeting of the Directors of the American Cotton Oil Company held yesterday Thomas N. Hine was elected a Director to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Colonel William Barbour. He was also elected a member of the Executive Committee and First Vice President of the company, and will continue as Treasurer.

Consolidated Indiana Coal Company

NOTICE

To the holders of certificates of deposit for thirty-year sinking fund five per cent. gold bonds of Consolidated Indiana Coal Company deposited with the New York Trust Company as depositary for bondholders under deposit agreement dated June 1, 1915.

The undersigned Committee has determined to sell the bonds deposited with it at the net price of $750 for each $1000 bond, together with accrued interest to the date of payment, and has entered into an agreement with the Joint Reorganization Committee of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway Company to that end. A notice of such proposed sale together with a copy of said Agreement has been filed with The New York Trust Company, the Depositary under the Deposit Agreement above mentioned.

Holders of certificates of deposit, if not approving said proposed sale, at any time prior to April 20, 1917, (being a date more than three weeks from the first publication of this notice) may surrender such certificates to the Depositary, and upon payment for account of the Committee of $30 for each $1000 bond for the expenses and compensation of the Committee, may withdraw their bonds. Any holders of certificates of deposit who have not withdrawn their bonds as above provided, on or before APRIL 20, 1917, shall be deemed to have approved and assented to the proposed sale, and the Committee will be authorized to proceed therewith; provided, however, that the holders of at least a majority in interest of said outstanding bonds or certificates of deposit issued therefor shall have approved or assented thereto.

Dated, March 29, 1917.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, Southern District of New York.—In the matter of BROOK FEATURE FILM CORPORATION, Bankrupt.—No. 24,346.

Notice is hereby given that, pursuant to an order of Honorable Learned Hand, Referee, the undersigned, Max Frieder, Trustee of the assets of the above-named bankrupt offers for sale the property, assets and effects of the said bankrupt. The property to be sold consists of the following:

A laboratory equipped for the manufacture of moving picture films with all the appliances and appurtenances belonging thereto, as well as office fixtures, furniture, desks, chairs, etc., including a lease of the premises No. 729 Seventh Avenue, Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, in which said property is located, for a period of approximately three years from May 1st, 1917.

Further particulars in regard to the said property may be obtained from the undersigned or his attorney. The above described property may be inspected on the premises from April 2nd, 1917, to April 10th, 1917, between the hours of 9 A. M. and 3 P. M.

Bids for the above described property, assets and effects are an entirety, with the exception of one moving picture film named, may be submitted to Hon. John J. Townsend, Referee in Bankruptcy, at his office, No. 45 Cedar Street, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, on or before 2 o'clock in the afternoon on the 16th day of April, 1917, at which time and place the bids will be opened by him, and creditors may attend and express themselves in reference thereto. A separate bid will be required for the moving picture camera above referred to. Each bid must be accompanied by a certified check or cash for at least 10% of the amount of the bid. The Trustee reserves the right to reject any or all bids, in which event the said property will be sold at public auction at the premises of Charles Shongood, the official auctioneer for the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, on the 19th day of April, 1917, at 10:30 o'clock in the forenoon.

Dated New York, April 4th, 1917.

MAX FRIEDER, Trustee.

DAVID HAAR, Esq., Attorney for Trustee, 261 Broadway, New York City.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR the Southern District of New York.—In the matter of ANDREW CUSENI, Alleged Bankrupt, and trading as A. CUSENI COMPANY.

TRADE OUTLOOK GOOD BANK BOARD HEARS

Construction, However, All Over the Country Is Conditioned on the War Situation.

BUSINESS BOOMING HERE

But Some Conservatism as to Future Buying Is Reported—Active Spring Is Predicted.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The business outlook as reflected in the monthly reports to the Federal Reserve Board made public tonight shows some shading of terms in describing conditions. Boston says that general business is unsettled because manufacturers and jobbers are awaiting war developments. Elsewhere the state of general business is said to "be good." Construction everywhere seems to be conditioned on war news. All points except New York and Cleveland say that construction is below that of last year. The reports on foreign trade show the effect of the German blockade as follows: Boston, "decreased"; New York, "contraction in imports and exports"; Philadelphia, "exports reached new high record in February"; Cleveland, no report; Richmond, "congested at ports"; San Francisco, "large and increasing."

All railroad reports indicate increase of traffic. Labor conditions appear generally to be good, and although there are some reports of uneasiness and a shortage is felt in some districts.

The general report for New York says in part: "Business in this district continues in large volume and there is every indication of an active Spring season. The serious turn in our foreign relations and the uncertainty of transportation conditions have produced a feeling of conservatism in many lines, but, reviewing the situation as a whole, commercial and industrial transactions are larger than at this time last year. The feeling of hesitancy is most apparent in connection with future buying, and the general tendency seems to be against stocking up with high priced merchandise."

In some branches, however, supplies on hand are inadequate and forward needs are so heavy that activity is uncrecked in spite of rapidly advancing prices.

"A further rise has occurred in the general level of wholesale prices, and index numbers for March 1 were 25 per cent. higher than on the same day last year. The widest changes occur in food products, especially potatoes and other vegetables. There was also a noteworthy advance in cereals and certain meats and provisions.

"The congestion on the railroads, which has seriously hampered nearly every branch of industry, has been somewhat relieved, and with the approach of milder weather decided progress is expected. The settlement of the threatened railroad strike has had a stimulating effect in many directions.

"In mercantile lines there has been a slight lull during the past month, due mainly to the fact that it has been unseasonably warm in some branches. The volume of business, however, is large for this period of the year, and confidence remains a conspicuous feature.

"In the hide and leather trade the outlook for a heavy Spring business in the Middle West and West is very bright. In the East conditions are more uncertain, as buyers are apparently nervous concerning the foreign situation.

WHEAT UP TO $2 IN CHICAGO.

Highest Price Ever Paid on a Normal Market.

CHICAGO, April 4.—Two-dollar wheat became an actuality today. The great bread-making cereal for delivery next month sold at that price at the opening of the Board of Trade today. It is the highest price ever paid here on a normal market.

In 1854 this price was exceeded by values expressed in terms of depreciated paper, and in the eighties "Old Hutch" manipulated the price in one of his famous corners to $2, but this price obtained only for a moment. When shorts settled with "Old Hutch" the price immediately dropped to a normal level.

Present prices are said to represent actual values. The advance has been gradual since the war began. Short crops helped the advance along, and this season crop damage reports and the shutting off of the Argentine supply have helped. There was no market yesterday owing to a local election. Last Monday May wheat closed at $1.99⅝ to $1.99¾.

A few minutes after the opening today May sold at $2.01. It then sold back to $1.99½ and in a moment again at $2.

GERMAN REPLY A PROTEST.

Note Charges America Has Violated Old Prussian Treaties.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Without refuting the American Government's contention that the old Prussian-American treaties of 1785, 1799, and 1828 have been clearly violated by the German authorities, the Berlin Government, in a formal reply to the recent American diplomatic note dealing with these treaties, has charged that the United States Government has broken the treaties.

The German Government's note was sent in response to the note which Secretary Lansing delivered to Dr. Paul Ritter, the Swiss Minister, on March 20, 1917, for transmission to Berlin.

The text of the German note, made public by the State Department today, follows:

Washington, D. C., March 30, 1917.

Sir: According to instructions of my Government I have the honor to forward to your address the following communication of the German Government:

"The German Government challenges the assertion that it has violated the treaties of 1785, 1799, and 1828. American citizens may freely leave Germany, and for the most part have already done so. That departure from this country is delayed under certain circumstances is to be ascribed to necessary precautionary measures.

"Since the provisions of Article XII. of the Treaty of 1785 and Article XIII. of the Treaty of 1799 do not oppose blockade or contraband measures similar to blockade, the U-boat warfare does not contravene them.

"In turn, Germany has to reproach the United States with a violation of the treaties in that, without justification on the ground of neutrality it prevented the departure, on and after the beginning of the war, of various German ships, which was contrary to the Treaty of 1828; contrary to Article XIX. of the Treaty of 1799, the American Government. In the Appam case also contested the right of the prize to stay in American ports and permitted judicial proceedings against the prize.

"Until further notice the German Government will adhere to the maintenance of Article XXIII. of the Treaty of 1799, inasmuch as it assumes from the declarations heretofore made by the State Department that the American Government holds the same view for the present situation, as was the case for a possible state of war. In the same supposition, it will place a liberal construction upon the article, that is to say, will not prevent money remittances to the United States, and also, in particular, honor Imperial Treasury certificates and continue to allow Americans to depart."

Accept, Sir, the renewed assurances of my highest consideration.

P. RITTER, Swiss Minister.

With each Government alleging that the other broke the old treaties it is now understood the Administration will ask Congress to declare that the treaties have been abrogated.

TO PAY SOLDIERS' SALARIES.

American Smelting and Refining Co. to Reopen Mexican Plants.

Stockholders of the American Smelting and Refining Company, at a meeting yesterday, approved the management's proposal to pay the salaries of all employes who enter the army or navy, and to hold their places open. Vice President Edward Brush said the company would do all in its power to aid the nation.

The company is one of the copper concerns which recently gave a pledge to supply the Government at practically half the current price.

Mr. Brush said the Mexican Government was anxious to facilitate the resumption of the company's operations in Mexico. It is planned to open the plant at Matehuala by April 15 and the one at Aguascalientes a month later. It was learned at the meeting that Roger W. Straus had been elected a Director earlier in the year. The retiring Directors were re-elected.

Sweater Bags for Knitters.

For women who knit, either for soldiers or pleasure, local novelty manufacturers have provided large sweater bags that can be readily slipped on. They are made up in fancy silks and cretonnes and are roomy enough to contain liberal quantities of yarns, needles, &c., as well as unfinished work. Large ring handles are provided, which allow the bags to be suspended from the wrist or forearm and which enable the user always to have her equipment at hand. Wholesalers say they are selling well for immediate delivery.

Waterproofing Everything.

Sport clothes that could take a bit of wet weather without discomfort to the wearer have probably opened up the possibilities in waterproofing garments of all sorts. Shoes, hats, and various other articles of attire have been put through the process. The manufacturers now featuring goods that are waterproofed find that this protection against the weather makes a very good talking point. A clothing house that is offering a sport suit made of such a proved quite popular is emphasizing the fact that the garment is waterproofed.

Will Use Sanitary Label.

The Associated Dress Manufacturers of New York will shortly start a campaign introducing a sanitary label on garments which the association members produce. The group of manufacturers in this organization are the representative houses in the industry and, in adopting a sanitary label, they hope to convey to the retail customers an idea of the clean methods used in their factories. The association intends to have the support of the labor organizations that have been particularly active in improving the conditions under which the employes work.

Sweetmeat Boxes Do Well Here.

Far from being the least active thing in the current business in fancy wares are sweetmeat boxes covered with tapestries and other embroideries. These are offered in different shapes, but the round ones seem to be doing best. These range from 7½ to 12 inches in diameter, and are made with 3, 6, and 8 trays. None of the trays are of glass, while others are of real china. The prices, which are governed more or less by the kind of trays, range at retail from $2.50 to $13. The boxes are made with large bead knob handles, as set off by Japanese Chinese coins, &c. Dresser sets covered in Chinese silks and brocades are good also.

Silks a Bit Unsettled.

The silk trade has slowed up a bit of late, and those in the trade are not prepared to give, at this time, any reason for the slackening in the demand is merely the thing that should be expected at this period of the season, and others are inclined to believe that war may see some decrease in business. Prices, it was stated, are just a little easier in some quarters of the market where the slack has been especially marked. On the other hand, a number of the leading organizations have all the business they can comfortably take care of, and a period of dullness is welcomed as an opportunity to catch up with orders.

Embroidered Neckwear Good.

Reports from local makers of men's neckwear indicate a good sale of ties in embroidered solid-color crêpe grounds in light and dark shades. The embroidery is shown in contrasting shades in single and two-tone effects. Among the neatest offerings are beach cloth grounds embroidered in bordered patterns in two tones in red, purple, green, gray and blue. Small colored figures, nearly embroidered, are also said to be moving well. Wash ties of fancy crêpes to match silk shirtings are well thought of. They are made in bias and panel effects in large fancy-colored stripes and figures, to retail around sixty-five cents.

War Talk Strengthens Drugs.

Drug and Chemical Markets will say today that the probability of war between this country and Germany unsettled trade conditions during the last week in the belief that many products, like acids and glycerin, will be requisitioned by the Government. A number of articles advanced on the uncertainty of future supplies, and imported botanical drugs were so much firmer as a result of ocean transportation difficulties that many importers and dealers could not quote prices on them. Advances on crude materials caused increases in several products like nitrate of silver, sugar of milk, &c. Among the important declines were opium and phenolphthalein.

Clothiers Undecided on Outlook.

Very few manufacturers in the clothing trade have a clear idea of what to expect in the way of developments as a result of war. The trade as a whole seems assured of only one thing, and that is of a wool scarcity that will drive up the price of woolens. The big woolen mills have already inserted clauses in their contracts which state that all deliveries are contingent upon Government action. As far as Fall business is concerned, the clothiers are of the opinion that some effect is bound to be felt from withdrawing the ordinary needs of 500,000 or a million young men who buy the best clothing. On the other hand, industrial activity is expected to grow to an even larger extent, which will probably increase the purchasing power of those not called upon for the army and the navy. There has been some canceling going on, but not enough to make the condition serious.

Cloth Buyers Still Mark Time.

The delay at Washington in the announcement of Congress regarding its war decision is holding business back in the local gray goods market to no small extent. Yesterday only a fair business was done, though prices were rock-ribbed. One of the features was the sale of spot 38½-inch 64-60s at 8¼ cents. This figure, which appears to be above the general market, was obtained largely as a result of the scarcity of spot lots of these goods. In the 27-inch width the 64-60 construction brought 3⅝ cents for this month's delivery in certain quarters. Not much was said of business in the wide, high-count constructions. In the sheetings, business was reported at 7⅛ cents on 31-inch 5 yards for June-July delivery. Other business on heavy goods was more or less scattering. Closing print-cloth prices, spot and largely nominal, were:

39-inch, 80-80s	10½c	38½-inch, 64-60s	8¼c
39-inch, 72-76s	10c	38½-inch, 64-56s	7⅞c
39-inch, 68-72s	9½c	38½-inch, 60-52s	7c
39-inch, 56-44s	6⅞c	38½-inch, 60-48s	6⅝c
38½-inch, 64-64s	8¼c	27-inch, 64-60s	5½c

WOOL TRADERS WILL AID.

Talk in Boston Regarding Commandeering of Supplies.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 4.—The American Wool and Cotton Reporter will say tomorrow:

"Considerable activity has been noted during the last week in scoured wools, fleeces, and pulled wools. The demand for high quarters and above has been strong, presumably due to the United States Government needs. Some talk is heard in regard to wool being commandeered.

"The cotton market declined about $2 a bale in the latter part of last week, with the selling mainly in new propositions. The export situation is at a comparative standstill. The surplus over last year has dwindled from 900,000 to under 300,000 bales, but the spot situation regardless seems to remain strong, due to delayed shipments. The stock of warehouse cotton and the certificated stock of New York is the smallest in ten or twelve years.

"The woolen goods market is in a steady and satisfactory position. The cotton goods market is just as strong as it has been, but with less activity than during the preceding week. The demand will probably continue quite large and sufficient to keep prices at present levels."

Glen Islands Concern Bankrupt.

The Glen Islands Corporation, which operated an amusement resort in the sound, was thrown into bankruptcy yesterday. The creditors who filed the petition were A. M. Briggs, $3,185, on a contract for billboard advertising; the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company, $2,500, for liability insurance, and Charles P. Norcross, $121, for two folding gates. The company was also a manufacturer and distributor of motion-picture films at 18 East Forty-first Street. Glen Island was opened about 1880, and John H. Starin spent a large sum of money in beautifying the property and made it one of the best-known day resorts around New York. It was closed in 1904 and reopened in 1910 for a short time.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Notices have been sent to the trade, under date of yesterday, telling of the making of a price of 12c on 4-4 "Fruit of the Loom" goods and a price of 11½c on the 7-8 goods bearing the same brand. The terms are net sixty days, and orders for future delivery will be taken "at value" only. The notices were sent out by William E. Wall, selling agent for B. B. & R. Knight.

A cablegram received by the Department of Commerce from the American Consul General at London says that toilet preparations have been added to the list of prohibited imports into Great Britain. Coins may now be imported under license from the Minister of Munitions upon compliance with the terms thereof.

BANKERS AT FOOD MEETING.

Scope of Conference Planned by Lackawanna Road Enlarged.

Officials of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad, responding to many requests, decided yesterday to enlarge their plans for the meeting of representatives of farmers at Binghamton on Saturday by inviting bankers and business men to the discussion on the best way to stimulate food production to meet the war crisis. At the same time, assurances received by the officers of other railroads, including the Lehigh Valley, New York Central, and Long Island, who have been carrying on a campaign in the rural districts, demonstrated that the farmers were ready to meet the emergency and would plant the largest crops in the State's history.

The meeting at Binghamton was arranged, primarily, by William H. Truesdale, President of the Lackawanna, who sent letters of invitation to the managers of all the Country Farm Bureaus along the line of the railroad. More than half of the Farm Bureau managers had sent in their acceptances by telegraph before noon yesterday, and most of the messages announced that the managers would be accompanied by at least five executive members of their particular farm associations.

Letters and telegrams were also received from many bankers and business and professional men, asking permission to attend the meeting, one of these being from G. Cooling Warner of the law firm of Holt, Warner & Gallard of New York. The officials of the railroads, recognizing the fact that bankers could be of great assistance in providing farmers with the means of increasing their harvesting equipment, at once decided to accept the suggestion, and a large number of letters and telegrams were sent to bankers and business men along the railroad's right of way.

Pushing Cloth-Topped Shoes.

While the high price of all-kid shoes in white and colors this season is causing a number of retailers to take them up and push them, it is more or less confidently reported in local wholesale shoe circles that the women are not responding over readily to the selling pressure put on this type of footwear. White all-kid shoes are being taken more willingly by the retailers than the colored ones, the belief apparently being that white is always a good "buy" for this time of year. On the other hand, the purchasing of colors is always more or less of a gamble, and the contention of some of the retailers is that, should any particular colors go bad, they could not be "cleaned up" for any more in an all-kid shoe than they could in one with cloth tops, which costs them less money. Hence their leaning toward the latter.

LONDON WOOL SALE ENDS.

Purchases of Americans Amounted to About 5,000 Bales.

LONDON, April 4.—The wool auction sales were closed today with offerings of 7,500 bales. It was an excellent selection and there was strong competition, American buyers purchased several hundred bales, including West Australian greasy at the record price of 4s. 5d. and New South Wales at 4s. 3½d.

The series ended with the June firm. Good scoured merinos advanced 10 per cent. and other grades were unchanged to 5 per cent. higher. The home trade, during the sales, bought 78,000 bales, America about 5,000 and France and Italy 2,000, while 3,000 were held over.

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Two apartment house deals in the upper west side section added the feature of interest to the realty market yesterday. The larger transaction, in which an element of trade was involved, was the purchase by Julius M. Cohen of the six-story structure known as the Rivercliff, at 628 West 151st Street. The house covers a plot 150 feet front by 99.11 between Broadway and Riverside Drive. It is fully rented and has been held at $300,000 by the sellers, the City Construction Corporation (Newmark & Jacob.) Title was recorded to the new owner yesterday, subject to a mortgage of $180,000.

In part payment Mr. Cohen gave the vacant block in the upper Manhattan section, comprising the east side of Wadsworth Avenue, between 176th and 177th Streets, 199.11 by 100. The two parcels figured at an aggregate value of about $500,000.

The second deal involved the sale of the five-story apartment house at 335 and 337 Edgecomb Avenue, covering a plot 80 by 100, near 150th Street. It was sold by the Podgur Realty Company, R. Podgur, President. The buyer, a client of Henry Schumacher & Sons, purchased for investment, the deal being an all-cash transaction. The property was held at $140,000. W. J. Huston & Son were the brokers.

Operator Buys Four Dyckman Flats.

Italian Gets Bargain in Auction Room

An unusual feature of the auction room yesterday was the purchase by Charles Stramiello, a rag dealer, of the vacant plot at 411 East 123d Street, 18.9 by 150, for $1,425. The purchaser, Henry Brady, said it was the cheapest lot sold on Manhattan Island in many years. The sale was due to a foreclosure action by A. A. Alexander and others against I. C. Levi and others, as trustees, to recover judgments, with taxes, of about $5,950. The mortgagee, it was said, was unable to protect his interests beyond Mr. Stramiello's bid. The buyer leases the adjoining property at 407 and 409 for junk business.

Recent Buyers.

J. Archibald Murray was the buyer of the five-story building at 61 Front Street, 23 by 85. He owns the adjoining property at 57, giving him a total frontage of 61.4 feet.

Anna Freehoff was the buyer of the six-story flat at 104 East 121st Street, recently sold by the Lawyers Mortgage Company.

Bronx Sales.

Richard Dickson resold for Frederick C. McLaughlin, 4,457 Park Avenue, a one-family frame dwelling on a lot 19 by 90 feet.

Schwab & Co. have sold for Mrs. Minnie Tillman the four-story double flat at 411 East 169th Street, on plot 25 by 73, to the Falco Construction Company, and for the Steinmetz Construction Company to a client 1,416 Glover Street, a two-family house, 50 by 125.

Brooklyn.

The estate of F. L. Matthews sold to an investing client of the Bulkley & Horton Company 110 and 112 Park Avenue, a six-family flat with stores.

Long Island.

Annie Brinley, widow of Captain Edward Brinley, U. S. N., sold to Pasquale Dal Cieco of Astoria her estate consisting of 10 and eighty-five acres and a large dwelling and outhouses located at St. James, L. I. The property is known as the Crossroads Farm.

Henry A. Rogers of Worthington Whitehouse, Inc., sold for the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company, as trustee the estate of the late William G. Park, a tract of ninety-seven acres situated on the north side of the Jericho Turnpike, between Westbury and Jericho, Nassau County.

The property immediately adoins the estates of Messrs. A. Ludlow Kramer, Ralph N. Ellis, and Middleton S. Burrill, and has a frontage of over 1,800 feet on the highway.

P. M. Rosenblum has sold to M. D. Barron the southwest corner of Fairview and South Avenues, and a second plot, 40 by 100 feet, on Fairview Avenue, west of Garden Street, Corona.

The Nichols Copper Company has purchased from W. J. Schieffelin the property, 92 by 140, on the southeast corner of Washington Avenue and Clinton Place, Long Island City.

Charles A. Willey has purchased from T. J. Burnett a flat 60 by 128 on Broadway, west of Union Street, Flushing, and from H. W. Chapin 64 by 70 feet on Seventeenth Street, west of Broadway.

Jersey City Sales.

George W. Von Arx has purchased from Elnora V. Critchfield a four-story apartment house on a plot 50 by 93 at the southeast corner of Bergen and Grant Avenues.

Thomas F. Connolly has sold to Daniel Keane the five-story flat at 300 Montgomery Street, on plot 25 by 100.

Commercial Leases.

Frederick Southack & Alwyn Ball, Jr. leased for Gordon Fowler the entire building at 812 Washington Street to produce concern for a term of years; also for William MacBain a loft at 156 Reade Street to Harold L. Brown Company.

The Ruland & Whiting Company have rented the building at 141 Maiden Lane for Ogden & Clarkson, as agents, to the Val de Oro Cigar Company; also the store at 72 Cliff Street for the Charles F. Noyes Company, as agent, to Melitos Cross.

The Duross Company leased for the Ryan estate the building 109 Reade Street to the Crescent Talking Machine Company for a warehouse for a term of years.

Hulbert Peck's Sons leased the store 422 Amsterdam Avenue to A. F. Beekman & Co. for a term of years.

Wertheim & Clear have leased for Mrs. Anna Rosenbaum the store at 909 Lexington Avenue to the Cocoalets Manufacturing Company.

John E. Weiss leased for the Broadway-John Street Corporation, Elias A. Cohen, President, two stores at an aggregate rental of $20,000, for a term of years to J. C. Clarke, printer, and James C. Anderson.

The Brett & Goode Company have leased for the Berkeley Arcade Corporation the ninth floor in the new building 19 to 25 West Forty-fourth Street, running through to 18 to 22 West Forty-fifth Street, to the American Chicle Company for a term of years at an aggregate rental of about $300,000.

Transfers Across Queensboro Bridge.

Beginning this morning the New York & Queens County Railway Company will transfer passengers between its Vernon Avenue (Ravenswood) line and its lines crossing the Queensboro Bridge. The following notice was posted in the cars yesterday:

"Beginning Thursday, April 5, 1917, passengers on all cars crossing Queensboro Bridge will be transferred to Ravenswood cars at the Vernon Avenue tower upon presentation of transfers containing coupons with privilege to Ravenswood line attached.

"Passengers on Ravenswood line cars will be transferred to all cars crossing Queensboro Bridge at Vernon Avenue tower upon surrender of transfers issued on Ravenswood line with all coupons attached.

"New York & Queens County Railway Company."

Realty Notes.

The New York Title and Mortgage Company loaned $14,000 at 4½ per cent. to Julia F. R. Frasier on four-story and basement brick dwelling 58 East Seventy-eighth Street, New York City.

M. Vincent Brady, formerly with the Loton H. Slawson Company, has opened a real estate office at 5 West Thirty-first Street.

The annual dinner and reunion of the Metropolitan League of Savings and Loan Associations will be held on Saturday evening at the Hotel Majestic.

CITY CLUB RENEWS ATTACK ON SWANN

Charges to Governor Say District Attorney Coerced Witnesses Against Him.

REMOVAL AGAIN ASKED

Prosecutor Said to Have Imprisoned Men Who Refused to Testify as Directed — Swann Issues a Denial.

The City Club asked Governor Whitman yesterday to remove District Attorney Edward Swann on the ground that he was guilty of malfeasance in that he had used his office to intimidate and coerce persons who were to appear as witnesses in the hearing of the City Club's original charges against him, filed in January as the result of the memorandum attacking him made by Judge James A. Delehanty of General Sessions on Dec. 31, 1916.

In its charges yesterday the club, through its President, Nelson S. Spencer, alleged that the District Attorney had corraled the witnesses concerned; had used unfair pressure to have them change their testimony in his favor; had, after persuading some of them to make affidavits that they had sworn falsely to the Grand Jury, and after they had pleaded guilty to perjury, caused them to be secretly released, and that he had held in prison those who refused to change their stories in his favor. Counsel for the City Club has had conferences with the witnesses alleged to have been coerced, and it is said to be in possession of affidavits from them in support of its allegations.

In a letter to the Governor Mr. Spencer asked him to have the Attorney General take over from the District Attorney all proceedings against persons in any way connected with the charges filed against Mr. Swann to prevent, he said, further intimidation.

It was said that the City Club was in possession of information to the effect that District Attorney Swann planned to ask for indictments against Judge Delehanty on a charge of subornation of perjury because of his memorandum on Judge Swann's conduct of the labor leaders' cases.

After reviewing the history of the original charges, the formal charges, signed by Mr. Spencer referred to the memorandum by Judge Delehanty in which he accused Mr. Swann in connection with his failure to prosecute certain labor leaders and referred to the part of Lucian S. Breckinridge, who as Assistant District Attorney gathered the evidence against the labor leaders and who supported the contentions of Judge Delehanty. It then charges that District Attorney Swann took into custody A. L. Wilson and held him in heavy bail until he changed his story so that Mr. Swann obtained an indictment against Mr. Breckinridge. The charges cite that on Jan. 6, 1917, Wilson was taken into custody as material witness, and on Jan. 8 was released on bail of $1,000.

"Immediately thereafter," the charges alleged, "said Wilson was taken into custody by representatives of said Edward Swann as District Attorney aforesaid, and an attempt was then made to compel him to change statements theretofore made by him with respect to said Breckinridge. On or about Jan. 9, 1917, said Edward Swann publicly declared to representatives of various newspapers published in the City of New York that said Wilson was a criminal. On Jan. 11, 1917, at the instance of said Edward Swann or his representatives, said Wilson's bail as a material witness was increased from $1,000 to $10,000, in default of furnishing which he was committed in custody thereupon. On or about the same day said Edward Swann as District Attorney aforesaid procured or caused to be procured the issuance by a City Magistrate of a summons directed to said Lucien S. Breckinridge, requiring him to appear before Magistrate William McAdoo on a charge of soliciting and accepting a bribe, stating in his application for such summons that the said Breckinridge has received from a certain association the sum of $500, payment thereof being made through said A. L. Wilson.

"On or about Jan. 17, 1917, said Wilson, who had been held in custody until that date in bail in the sum of $10,000, was released on bail furnished at the solicitation of said Edward Swann personally or through one of his assistants."

The charges then took up the action of District Attorney Swann in procuring indictments against the witnesses who testified against the labor leaders in 1914, whose non-trial formed the basis of the Delehanty memorandum. The charges set forth that among these witnesses indicted for perjury were Max Silkessfor, Isaac Levine, David Monashewitz, Benjamin Finkel, Sam Schlitten, Wolf Ehrenberg, Harmet Engel, William Levine, and Benjamin Polar. Then the charges continued:

"All or some of the persons so indicted and held in custody in default of bail were informed by said Edward Swann, as District Attorney aforesaid, or by his assistants or some of them, that unless they altered their testimony which they had theretofore given, and told the story which said assistants urged them to tell, they would be held indefinitely in prison, whereas, if they would alter their story, they would be at once released. Pressure was constantly exerted by said Edward Swann, as District Attorney, or his assistants or some of them, upon said persons so indicted or some of them, with the result that some of them altered their stories, entered pleas of guilty, and gave evidence which was false and known by said Edward Swann to be false, and were thereupon released from custody without bail and permitted to go at liberty. Whereas, those persons who refused to alter their stories as requested by said Edward Swann or his said assistants or some of them, and to enter such plea, were held in prison under large bail and told their trials would be indefinitely postponed; and their trials were postponed from time to time until on or about the 28th day of March, 1917, when, upon the motion of said Edward Swann, as District Attorney aforesaid, their cases were transferred to the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court and the trial thereof thereby indefinitely postponed and subject only to the motion of the District Attorney."

The last count of the charges dealt with the case of Leonora E. Reinhardts, who in August, 1916, filed with the Governor charges against Mr. Swann. William E. Murphy was her counsel, and later filed in January charges against the District Attorney. It was in connection with this case that it was alleged that Mr. Swann called Miss Reinhardts a "pie-faced liar."

In his statement in reply to the charges District Attorney Swann said:

"Since the referee was appointed I have been demanding an early and speedy hearing and have been ready at all times, and the City Club has been manoeuvring for delay. The filing of these charges on the eve of the hearing, which is set for next Tuesday, is a final attempt to delay the proceedings. I will immediately stipulate to permit them to consolidate the alleged additional charges with the original charges, and shall insist that they proceed without further delay to the hearing and determination of the issues next Tuesday.

"That the motive is political from the inception of the charges and these additional charges is evidenced by the fact that those purporting to represent the City Club have not hesitated to maliciously attack the integrity and honor of the Court of General Sessions and the Grand Jury of the County of New York by alleging a conspiracy between the District Attorney and the two honorable Judges of the Court of General Sessions and the Grand Jury.

"It seems incredible that any one would believe that five men indicted for perjury would plead guilty and get upon the witness stand in open court and admit their perjury with circumstantial detail and yet be believed by the City Club to be innocent."

ROB HOUSE OF DEATH OF $30,000 IN GEMS

Thief, Acting as Florist's Messenger, Gains Access to Home of E. W. Humphreys.

COLLODION BAFFLES POLICE

Robber Coats Finger Tips to Hide Prints—Door Maid Unable to Give a Clue.

Jewelry worth $30,000 was stolen on Tuesday afternoon from the home of E. W. Humphreys, President of the Mississippi Glass Company, who lives at 9 East Sixty-fifth Street. The jewels belonged to Mrs. Humphreys.

They disappeared under circumstances that made the loss peculiarly distressing to Mrs. Humphreys. On Monday her sister, Mrs. Arthur Duane, died. The funeral took place yesterday. On Tuesday the body of Mrs. Duane lay in a room on the first floor of the Humphreys home. All through the day flowers and messages of condolence were received. Most of the flowers were brought by messengers, who were directed at the door by a maid, some being sent to a room on the second floor and some being kept on the first floor.

About 4 o'clock Mrs. Humphreys went to her room and saw one of her jewel boxes lying bottom up on the floor, empty. She had last looked at her jewelry on Monday afternoon when it was safe in two boxes in a dresser drawer. When she saw one box on the floor, she went to the dresser and found that the other box, containing a diamond necklace of great value, had not been taken.

Mrs. Humphreys notified her husband, and they communicated with the police. Detectives went over the house from top to bottom. On the floor of Mrs. Humphreys's room they found an empty bottle which had held collodion. No one in the household knew anything of the bottle, and it is the theory of the police that the thief coated his finger tips with the preparation to prevent finger-print identification.

The detectives believe that one of the messengers bringing flowers was the thief. The maid who tended the door, and who had been in the employ of the family for five years, was questioned at length, but she said she did not remember that any person had aroused her suspicion. The room on the second floor to which flowers were taken was near the bedroom of Mrs. Humphreys. The detectives are confident that some one took advantage of the grief in the home to commit the theft. None of the ten servants is suspected.

The missing jewels included a pearl necklace worth $25,000; a diamond tiara, a diamond-studded watch, a diamond and emerald ring, a diamond bracelet, a diamond collar, and a pearl necklace.

ZEALANDIA IS LOST AT SEA.

Captain and Crew of the Old Freighter Reported Saved.

The freighter Zealandia, which was built in 1875, has been wrecked in the Atlantic, according to a cable dispatch received yesterday from Liverpool by her owners, the Universal Transportation Company, 29 Broadway. The message did not tell where or how the steamship was lost, but said that Captain Henrahan and his crew of forty men, of whom twenty-five are Americans, had all been landed safely at a British port.

The Zealandia, which was unarmed, left New York on March 18 for Liverpool. She was at one time a passenger liner trading from San Francisco to New Zealand, and was brought to New York at the beginning of the war when her cabins were ripped out to make room for horses. At that time she was said to have been bought by Charles W. Morse.

FRANCE TO PROTECT ALSATIANS HERE

Measures Taken to Prevent Their Internment as Germans When War Begins.

WILL APPLY LANGUAGE TEST

Consuls Throughout the Country to Receive Pledges of Loyalty to French Republic.

The French Government has begun a census here to determine the number and status of natives of Alsace-Lorraine, who have not become citizens of the United States, with the view of putting them under the protection of France pending the outcome of the war.

Many Alsatians bear German names, and while they generally assert that they are French in sentiment and also politically, since France has captured and holds part of Alsace-Lorraine, yet the larger part of the old French territory is still in German hands, so, should the United States find it necessary to interne enemy Germans it might become difficult to discriminate in favor of Alsatians loyal at heart to France.

Ambassador J. J. Jusserand a few weeks ago called this situation to the attention of the French Government and received a reply authorizing him to provide in any way possible for the protection of these people. It was found that certain definite measures must be taken to prevent Germans from obtaining the benefit of this protection, and the French Ambassador has referred the matter to the Society of Friends of Alsace-Lorraine, at 589 Fifth Avenue, with authority to proceed with the work.

Each applicant will be required to sign a sworn statement concerning himself and his parents covering the place of his birth and his movements and military service from the time he left his home to the time of his arrival here. But the real test, to which the statement will be supplementary, will be an expert consideration of the applicant's spoken and written French.

Watch Out for Cotton Posing as Wool

Cotton threads in woolen fabric fade and grow dull. In a short time the refinement and dignity of the cloth has vanished. There is much cotton mixed cloth about. When you buy here you get all wool without insisting, because we haven't a yard of mixed fabric—haven't bought a yard, and won't buy a yard.

Through all the stress of buying we have stuck to a principle. Woolens, findings and workmanship equal in every way to the fixed Arnheim standard—the highest quality at the lowest cost.

They write themselves off the books

Many Pierce-Arrow Motor Trucks have written their entire cost off the books of their owners. Then by surplus earnings they have helped pay for more Pierce-Arrows.

There is no guesswork about Pierce-Arrow results. Where they operate under complete and accurate systems of cost accounting, there it is that Pierce-Arrow trucks show up to the best advantage. Pierce-Arrow owners will tell you the details.
